The following pages are the result of continuous, diligent, careful and thorough research on the part of the authors and compilers, each one of whom has spent about fifteen years in gathering data. Time and effort have not been spared by either one of them in securing as complete and accurate information as possible. Their combined investigations in this country and Canada have taken them into many libraries, large and small, and to numerous historical and genealogical storehouses. Both have visited England and Scotland, where they have been able to obtain valuable source material. Their work, supplemented by the efforts of others equally interested in a study of the Hardy Family, has resulted in this volume, which speaks for itself.

Grateful appreciation is hereby acknowledged to all those who have contributed material for the book in any way. Special recognition is given to the investigations of Milton C. Hardy, deceased, who, during his lifetime assembled a vast amount of Hardy data, which, at his request, was later made available to the writers. Especially to Mrs. Ellen Emeline Hardy Webster of Franklin, New Hampshire; to Mr. Lynn L. Hardy of Canisteo, New York; to Mrs. Lydia Hardy Jewett of Melrose, Massachusetts; to Miss Charlotte Wheeler Hardy of Brewer, Maine; to Mr. Audubon L. Hardy of Amherst, Massachusetts; to Mr. George A. Colby of Henniker, New Hampshire; to Mrs. Edna E. Goodale of Aurora, Illinois; to Mrs. Arvilla Hardy Patterson of Concord, New Hampshire; to Mr. Edgar A. Hardy of Palmyra, New York; to Miss Catherine Hardie of Washington, D. C.; to Dr. George R. Hardie of New York City; to Charles O. Hardy of Adrian, Michigan; to Minnie Colburn of Hollis, New Hampshire; to Dr. E. A. Hardy of Toronto, Canada; to Fred R. Hardy of Groveland, Massachusetts; to Eva Adelaide Hardy of Lowell, Massachusetts; to Charles A. Hardy of Arlington, Massachusetts; to Landon C. Bell of Columbus, Ohio; to Mrs. E. L. Mitchell of Watertown, New York; to George E. Hardy of Englewood, New Jersey; to Isabelle Ramsey Hardy of New York City; and to all others whose names are mentioned in the footnotes or main body of the text as furnishing information, thanks and gratitude are hereby expressed.

The authors and compilers do not claim immunity from errors or omissions. They have made every possible effort, however, to guard against inaccuracies or mistakes. For the most part they have reproduced facts as given them by the various contributors of information.

There is, of course, a considerable amount of Hardy and Hardie material not covered in this volume. It should be pointed out, moreover, that the writers possess much more family data which might have been included, but because of the expense involved and lack of continuity in certain family records, these data have been purposely omitted. Besides, to have assembled and put in proper shape this supplementary material would have meant postponing the printing of the book at least one more year.

Attention is called to the fact that the publication is an all-Hardy product. The authors and compilers bear the name Hardy, and the printing of the book was made possible through the good offices of Mr. W. Erstine Hardy, Treasurer of the Syracuse Typesetting Company, Inc., Publishers, Syracuse, New York.

The authors and compilers desire to express appreciation of the kind interest, forbearance and help of the members of their own families, particularly of their beloved wives.

To Mrs. Gladys Caughey, to Miss Harriet Jolley, to Mrs. Cornelia Barnes Fisher, all of White Plains, New York, who arranged much of the material here presented and typed the various manuscripts, and to Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Hickman of Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., who prepared the index, the authors and compilers also wish to express thanks and appreciation.

Thanks are also due Mrs. Martha F. Duren of Swampscott, Massachusetts, who furnished the vital statistics records of many Hardys of the State of Massachusetts, and to Mrs. Frances M. Abbott of Concord, New Hampshire, who prepared similar information from the State of New Hampshire.

CHAPTER I

Origins

The name Hardy is generally considered to be English in origin. It is well and favorably known throughout the British Isles. Indeed, few English family names are better known in England than that of Hardy. The fact that one of the world's greatest writers, Thomas Hardy, achieved eminent fame in the field of letters has made the name familiar to every Britisher. He was England's foremost novelist-poet up to the time of his death in 1928 and this honor was conceded to him willingly by the most critical contemporary writers of the English language.

Not only has the name Hardy stood out because of its association with Thomas Hardy, the writer; it has for a long time been conspicuous in English History as representing a family of heroes. We point with pride to the fact that one line of Hardys consisted of a long succession of British naval heroes. On the south side of the great entrance in Westminster Abbey, in London, is a monument to Sir Thomas Hardy, Kt., Rear-Admiral of the Blue. The inscription on the monument reads in part as follows:

"Near the West door of the Choir, lieth interr'd the body of Sir Thomas Hardy, Kt., who died the 16th of August, 1732, in the 67th year of his age; and according to the directions of his will, was buried in the same grave with his wife, who died the 28th of April, 1720. . . .

"He was bred in the Royal Navy from his youth, and was made a Captain in 1693. In the expedition to Cadiz, under Sir George Rook, he commanded the Pembrook, and when the Fleet left the coast of Spain to return to England, he was order'd to Lagos Bay where he got intelligence of the Spanish Galleons being arrived in the Harbour of Vigo, under convoy of 17 French Men-of-War, commanded by Mons. Chatteau Renaud, upon which he sail'd immediately in quest of the English Fleet, and notwithstanding he had been several days separated from it, by his great Diligence and judgment he joyn'd it, and gave the Admiral that intelligence which engag'd him to make the best of his way to Vigo, where all the forementioned Galleons and Men-of-War were either taken or destroyed. After the success of that Action, the Admiral sent him with an account of it to the Queen, who order'd him a considerable Present, and Knighted him; some years afterwards he was made a Rear-Admiral, and receiv'd several other marks of Favour and Esteem from Her Majesty and from Her Royal Consort, Prince George of Denmark, Lord High Admiral of England. . . ."

Greatest of the entire Hardy line of naval heroes of England, perhaps, was Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, Bart. He was Lord Nelson's flag-captain on board the Victory at Trafalgar, and was with the famous British Admiral on the occasion of his tragic death in the midst of the battle. It will be remembered that just before expiring in the arms of Captain Hardy, Admiral Nelson affectionately said to him: "Kiss me, Hardy!" This is a romantic incident of English history that has been told many times. It is a popular story in England and is well known by all British subjects.

We might continue, indefinitely, telling about the deeds of heroism of the Hardys of England but enough has been said to show that the name has a distinctly English flavor. Incidentally, we might point out that two brothers, Sir Charles Hardy and Sir Josiah Hardy, were Colonial Governors, Sir Charles being assigned to the Colony of New York and Sir Josiah being in charge of the Colony of New Jersey. Later, in another chapter, we shall have more to say about the family in England as well as in Scotland and Ireland.

While the name Hardy is generally considered to be English, there are reasons for the belief that the forebears of the English Hardys were Normans. The first families to bear that name probably went to England from Normandy (Northern France) soon after the invasion there by William the Conqueror. Some of our English cousins insist on believing that the name "Hardy" has no connection with individuals in France bearing our patronymic. One Charles Frederic Hardy, of London, has written a most interesting book on The Hardys of Barbon and in Chapter V, entitled "Hardys Outside Westmoreland", he says: "the name is not by any means to be taken as a necessary indication of French or Norman origin."¹ He refers to the spelling of the name

1. See The Hardys of Barbon by Charles Frederic Hardy, page 42.

"Hardy" instead of "Hardi", which he maintains is the French form. The first manner of spelling, he contends, is exclusively English. Moreover, the spelling as it appears in the Hundred Rolls of England confirms in his mind its English origin.

We have no desire to enter into an extended controversy with the eminent author of The Hardys of Barbon but certain facts of history speak for themselves. In the first place, many Hardys of France spell the name with a "y" on the end. This has been so for centuries. Alexandre Hardy, French dramatist, used the "y" in his name. Mr. Hippolyte Léon Hardy, formerly an officer in the French Army and later a Major in the United States Army, whose family for many generations used the "y" also, was born in Paris, France, and being a direct descendant of the Hardys of Normandy is in a position to know much about the name from the French point of view. The following excerpt from his letter to the writer of this chapter under date of March 9, 1925, is worthy of attention:

"The French do not emigrate and I believe that I was the first French Hardy to come direct to the U. S. in 1878 and apply for Naturalization papers at the Court of Common Pleas in Boston, Mass., tho' at the time a Reserve Officer in the French Army, so that most of the Hardys in this country must have come direct from England but they all descended from the original Hardys who invaded and populated England to date back to about 1010 to 1060 when William, the Grand-son of Louis le Gros led them across the channel to greater, if not greener, pastures for their cattle and horses. . . .

"I have known my Grand-Mother who still lived on the Place du Vieux Marché in Rouen and who died at 94 from an accident, burned alive in falling face forward in the large ancient Chimney while attempting, at such an advanced age, to hang the kettle to the inside hooks for heating water for the washing, and that within 60 feet of the center of the place where Joan of Arc was burned and in a house that was of the time that tragic crime was enacted. . . .

"The Hardys originated in Normandy. A Hardy was next to William the Conqueror at Hastings."

There are other evidences of the fact that the name Hardy is of early French origin, and not English exclusively. In the first place, nowhere does the name appear in the Domesday Book which contains the statistical record of the survey of England made in 1085-6 by William the Conqueror. If there were Hardys in England prior to this time, it would seem that the family name would have appeared somewhere in connection with that great census taking.

The earliest date at which the name Hardy officially appears in any English records is 1272, when the names of John, Thomas, Henry, and William are recorded in the Hundred Rolls, a survey of the royal domain, and it is interesting to note that the spelling of the name is French and not English, that is, "Hardi" instead of "Hardy." For that matter the latter spelling was not common before the fifteenth century in England, whereas it was used as early as 1356 in France by a nobleman, "Hardy d'Auffay", according to Mailhol in his Dictionnaire de la Noblesse Francaise (Dictionary of French Nobility).²

In a book entitled Norman People, published by Henry S. King of London, England, it appears that there were several Hardys in Normandy in the eleventh and twelfth centuries. The author points out that the names of Roger, Hunfrid, Robert, and Nicholas Hardy were on the Great Rolls of the Exchequer of Normandy about 1180-95. The spelling of the name, of course, is the French form, "Hardi." He identifies the name "Hardy", or "Hardi" as Norman along with other family names. "The inference in each case", he says, "is that the name . . . was originally Norman, and passed into England at the Conquest."

It is logical, therefore, to assume that the ancestors of those Hardys, or Hardies, living in Normandy in the eleventh and twelfth centuries lived contemporaneously with William the Conqueror, an assumption which coincides with the traditions of the families of French origin, to refer again to the testimony of Major Hippolyte Léon Hardy, of Paris, who is himself a direct descendant of the early Hardys of Normandy. His reference to the tradition that one Knight Hardy rode next to William the Conqueror at the famous battle of Hastings agrees, it should be noted, with legends of certain English Hardys.

2, See Mailhol's Dictionnaire de la Noblesse Française, pages 364-5,

Mention should also be made of the fact that Thomas Hardy, the famous writer already referred to, descended from Norman stock by way of the Island of Jersey. His progenitor was one of two young, Norman gentlemen, brothers, of the landed family of Le Hardy, who left Normandy about 1360. We note again the use of the "y" on the end of the name.³

Mailhol in his Dictionnaire de la Noblesse Francaise gives the names of certain Hardys who were members of French nobility and describes the respective coats of arms for each.⁴ Among those mentioned are: Hardy de Blanzav, Hardy des Alleurs, Hardy Dupléssis de Mongelas, and Hardy d'Auffay.

Edward De Magny, Count, in his work Nobiliaire de Normandie (Nobility of Normandy), refers to the following Hardys who were members of the French nobility and gives a description of the coat of arms for each family: Hardi de Vicques et des Loges, Hardy de Champ-Vallon, LeHardy de la Chaux, Hardy de la Largère, Georges Hardy (Made a member of the nobility by Charles IV, Duke of Lorraine), Le Hardy de Famars, and others. He records the marriages of the following Hardy daughters with members of the French nobility: Languine Hardy (Married Pierre Le Tessier), and Anne Hardy (Married Barbier de Préville). One M. L. Hardi, he says, married Annette Dufour, daughter of General G. H. Dufour.⁵

The information presented above, therefore, would seem to be ample proof that the Hardys have a Norman background. This applies for most of the Hardys coming to America from England and equally for the French Hardys. There are some branches of the Hardy Family which came to this country directly from France. They settled with other French families in the Province of Quebec and some of their descendants are found today in the border states of Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

It would be absurd, however, to maintain that all Hardys have a Norman background, for some families no doubt received their appellations because of certain experiences or incidents that belong to legends of another day. Such cases, however, are beyond investigation at this time. Like many other families, there are Hardys or descendants of Hardys whose original family name was perhaps something different. It would, of course, be interesting to know the reasons for change of name.

CHAPTER II

Speculations as to How Name "Hardy" Originated: Some Other Facts as to Names in General

According to the Bible, the name of the first man was Adam. Apparently the name was chosen to designate his origin from the earth. All early names, like that of Adam, had special significance. The Bible contains many other names, of course, each one being explanatory of circumstances or events. The name Peter of the New Testament was given by Christ to one of his Disciples to indicate strength. Peter means "stone." He was named by the Master in anticipation of the establishment of His Church. All Christians think of Peter as the "Rock Foundation" and symbolic of the Great Church.

Surnames as such were not introduced into England until after the Norman Conquest. Surnames as we know them now were one of the many contributions of William the Conqueror. Each surname, however, had its own peculiar history or origin. A man was named in most cases for his personal characteristics, or peculiarities, for his individual pursuits, interests, or occupation, for his mental or bodily qualifications, for his achievements and the performance of certain deeds, for accidental circumstances of his life and career, etc. Harold Harefoot, for instance, would indicate that a man was a fast runner, like a hare. Hardicanute, son of Canute, the Dane, King of England in the eleventh century, is a name that reveals a bold, brave, hardy personality. Some present Hardys, by the way, claim descent from Hardicanute. Richard the Lion Hearted is a self explanatory name. The list of illustrations might be continued indefinitely.

The early Britons, or Gaels, gave names to certain people after those animals that exceeded in swiftness, fierceness, boldness and strength. Hence such names as Bull, Fox, Bear, Lion, Hare, etc. To some persons were given names indicative of valor and skill in war. Various mental qualifications were exemplified in some names. The different colors, like brown, black, white, green, are recognized in Mr. Brown, Mr. Black, Mr. White, and Mr. Green. Mr. Moon, Mr. Star, Mr. Land, Mr. Birch, Mr. Beech, Mr. Oak, etc., no doubt were named originally after parts of the heavens or of the earth.

Later in England names were given to designate trades or occupations. The name "Smith", of course, is the most common. Smith is old English for trade or occupation. Goldsmith would indicate a person who worked at gold. Locksmith was a name given to one who worked at or made locks.

Then, again, a family name might be identified by attaching the suffix "son." Johnson means "Son of John." Jackson means "Son of Jack." Robinson and Adamson mean "Son of Robin" and "Son of Adam" respectively.

Various speculations might be made, of course, as to the origin of the name Hardy. It is generally considered to be a name given to designate character. The first person to receive the appellation "Hardy" was no doubt a sturdy, enduring, hardy individual, at least so considered by those who knew him. He probably had a reputation for bravery, hardihood, boldness, and other similar traits that go to make up strength of manhood. Such mental and physical characteristics were no doubt intended to describe the first man called "Hardy."

There are some legends which account for the name Hardy and we beg leave to present them in this connection.

A certain McLeod, or McLeoid, of Scotland was condemned to death by one of the Malcombs¹, for killing the favorite hound of the king. The king condescended to pardon him forever if he could shoot an apple off the head of his favorite son. McLeod's son was placed on the opposite bank of the River Dee. The father took his bow and arrow in hand and with characteristic self control, confidence, and skill succeeded in performing this most difficult feat. The first arrow to leave his sturdy bow went straight through the center of the apple and the child was unhurt. The king, forthwith, pardoned McLeod and seeing this brave, courageous, skillful father was willing to run the risk of taking the life of his own son under such circumstances he said: "Thou are a Hardie, and as Hardie thou art, so Hardie thou shalt be!" Hence McLeod and his descendants have borne that name to this day. This incident, of course, is somewhat similar to the famous William Tell story.

Another legend, which is said to be historically correct, has been transmitted by Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, one time Deputy Keeper of the Public Records in England. It is taken from his "Memoir." It represents the origin of the French form of the family name ("Hardi" or "Hardie").

A Frenchman, who was cup-bearer to John, King of France, was taken prisoner together with his ruling monarch at the Battle of Poitiers in 1356. They both were taken to England by Edward, the Black Prince (Son of Edward III), who won the battle. At an entertainment, Edward III, King of England, called upon his own cup-bearer to fill a cup of wine and present it to "the worthiest in the company." He presented it, of course, to his own master, Edward, King of England. The cup-bearer of John, King of France, regarded this as an insult to his master and being unable to restrain himself he struck the cup-bearer of King Edward a blow on the ear, whereupon King John called out: "Trop, Trop Hardi", but King Edward sensed the situation and exclaimed: "Sera Deschormais Hardi" ("Henceforth he shall be Hardi", "Hardi" meaning courageous). From that bold act, the cup-bearer of King John, of France, thereafter had the name of "Hardi", as also his descendants.

1. Probably Malcomb III, called Canmore, who reigned in the eleventh century.

This same Hardi, cup-bearer of John, King of France, was retained in England for a year when he was taken to Scotland by David II (Son of Robert Bruce), who was at the time King of Scotland but also held as a prisoner by Edward III, King of England. David II, King of Scotland, was given his liberty in 1357. He gave Hardi the lands of Corrogarf in Mar (Cargarse). He and his family flourished there until a quarrel took place between the Clan of Hardi and the Clan of Grant.² The Hardies killed the chief of the Clan of Grant and subsequently their lands were confiscated. Later, however, the Hardi family was restored by the friendship of the Marquess of Huntly.

There is also a tradition that the name of Hardi, French form, originated from Ireland. When King Henry II of England invaded Ireland in 1172 A.D., he granted to one Hugh DeLacy the Kingdom of Meath, thus dispossessing the O'Harts of the patrimony known under the former title of "Princess of Tara." The O'Harts thus dispossessed were compelled to flee for safety. Some of them fled to England, some of them fled to obscure parts of Ireland, while others fled to France. It is said that those going to France called themselves "Hardi."

Generally speaking, the members of the family who spell the patronymic "Hardy" are considered of English ancestry, although as already pointed out in another chapter, the same may be said for many of those of French descent. The spelling "Hardi" is no doubt more common among the French than elsewhere. The masculine definite article "le" appears before the French name in many cases, as "LeHardi", "LeHardy", etc. When the family name appears as "Hardie", it is usually taken for granted that the origin is Scottish, although, again, such an assumption is not always dependable. Instances have been discovered where families which hitherto had used the spelling "Hardy" or another form, have for some unknown reason chosen to substitute the form "Hardie." Family histories also reveal other liberties taken with the spelling of the name. Instead of "Hardy", "Hardie", or "Hardi", we have found occasionally "Harde", "Hardee", "Hardey", "Hardeye", "Harday", "Hardaye" and "Hardei."

2. General U. S. Grant descended, it is claimed from a certain Prince named Wodine, who came out of Asia in the year 600 and settled in Norway. From Prince Wodine was descended Hacken Grant, in the ninth century, whose son, Heming, married a daughter of Adelstein, first Christian king of Denmark. When banished from Norway, Grant went to Scotland by way of Normandy. The Grant family rose to the proportions of a clan in the fourteenth century and the first owner of Grant Castle was Sir Duncan Grant, a lineal descendant of Hacken Grant of Norway. Matthew Grant, General Grant's immigrant ancestor, who came to this country in May, 1630, was of this line.

Perhaps a word or two about Christian names, middle names and titles would not be out of order. When Christianity spread among the northern nations of Europe, the act of baptism assumed great importance and a baptismal name followed as a matter of course. There was something decidedly individualistic connected with Christian baptism. The name thus given was for a long time the only name possessed by the baptised. The rise of the surname soon developed into the family name and indicates a new advance in the social order. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, especially in New England, scriptural names, such as Daniel, Noah, Moses, Isaac, Jeremiah, Jedediah, Benjamin, Amos, Job, Gideon, Naomi, Martha, Mary, Rachel etc., were used extensively. At the same time there developed a corresponding use of doctrinal or ethical derivatives such as Prudence, Mercy, Faith, Hope, Patience, Joy, etc. It is interesting to note the frequent use of these names in the Hardy Family as will be seen later in this volume.

The middle name as we know it today was rarely used until nearly the middle of the eighteenth century. The use of a middle name first appeared about 1731 but did not become popular until half a century later. The usage became fashionable toward the end of the eighteenth century and about 1800, or shortly thereafter, the possession of a middle name was considered almost as customary as a Christian name. In some instances, when the practice became general, the maternal surname was used for a middle name. More recently, it is becoming the practice to omit the middle name for girls of the family so that they may, if they wish, when marrying, use their own paternal patronymic as a middle name. This practice has some value for future generations to identify lineal descent and will, no doubt, become increasingly popular.

In colonial days titles carried great weight, in spite of the prevailing democratic spirit of the times and of the somewhat crude characteristics of that homespun age. One reads now with considerable amusement about the deference paid in those days to rank and position in the church, at the town meeting and at social gatherings. A "Deacon" was a man of considerable prestige and influence. Even the title "Mr." had peculiar significance. Perhaps no greater honor could be paid any man than to call him "Mister." That marked him as a gentleman of excellent repute. The use of the title "Mr.", however, had also a special significance. It was applied to captains, occasionally to mates on vessels, to eminent merchants, to schoolmasters, doctors, magistrates, clergymen, to those who were freemen, and to those who had secured a second degree at college. Today the title of Mrs. in this country is supposed to be used by married ladies only, but in those early days not only the wives but the daughters assumed that title. To be deprived of this address, moreover, was deemed a serious degradation for any girl or woman, whether married or not. Military titles, of course, were considered the greatest of all pass-ports and in time it became the fashion to attach such titles as "Colonel", or "Captain" to many esteemed local leaders even though they had never had any military service. In a similar way the custom of addressing certain persons as "Honorable" came into being.

CHAPTER III

Early Hardys in England, Ireland and Scotland

It is generally believed that the first Hardys to settle on English soil came from Normandy, as already stated, at the time of the invasion of the island by William the Conqueror.¹ No doubt a number of families flourished in southern and central England for two or three centuries thereafter, for several descendants were found in connection with the visitations (census taking) of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, especially in the counties of Dorset and Westmorland. Then, too, many Hardy names are found on parish registers dating back to around 1500.

Other Hardys entered England from Normandy via the Island of Jersey about 1500.² One John Le Hardy is said to have located somewhere in the valley of the Frome River, perhaps at Toller Welme. His descendants were many and one branch of this family consisted of a long succession of naval heroes.

It would be a worth while study to trace, step by step, the migrations of Hardys in the British Isles but such a task must be left for others to undertake. It will suffice, perhaps, to mention a few facts concerning the early Hardys of England as revealed in a study of some of the sources available.

One of the most interesting and also one of the rarest books ever published is The History and Antiquities of the County of Dorset, in two volumes, by John Hutchins, M.A. (London, 1774). A perusal of its pages discloses the names of some Hardys who might well have been the antecedents of certain Hardys who came to America in the seventeenth century. In volume 1, page 382, we read that one Thomas Hardy, of Melcomb-Regis, established and endowed a free school in the borough of Dorchester. His endowment bears the date of 3 Aug. 1579. In this connection, mention is made of Shilvenhampton farm "which formerly belonged to the Hardys." A tablet of white marble in St. Peter's church in Dorset County, according to the records found on page 389 of volume 1 of this same book, bears the following inscription:

OF THEIR GRATITUDE, AND TO COMMEND TO POSTERITY AN

HE DIED 15 OCTOBER 1599.

It would appear that many of the Hardys of the County of Dorset belonged to the landed gentry. Some were of high rank, for on page 504 of volume 1, it is stated that among the lords of Evershot, a small market town, were Hardys.

On Page 462 of volume 2 of The History and Antiquities of the County of Dorset, is given the pedigree of Hardy of Wolcomb-Matravers and Toller-Welme through one Edmund Hardy. According to the visitations at Up Sydling, a hamlet, in 1565, there were three descendants of this family recorded. A patent of arms and a crest were granted them in 1586 by Sir William Dethick. The last male members of this family were Thomas, James and Robert.

From another source we learn that in 1563 Christopher Hardy, Thomas Hardy and John Hardy, brothers, bought of Robert Moore, "Gentleman", 406 acres of land in North Yarden and Lytton in the "shire" or county of Dorset.³

Probably the best study of certain branches of the Hardy Family in England has been made by the late Charles Frederic Hardy of London. In 1913 he published a book entitled The Hardys of Barbon. For the most part he dealt with the Hardys of a part of Westmorland. The following statement on pages 4 and 5 would bear out the antiquity of the name Hardy in England: "It appears from the frequency with which the name Hardy occurs amongst the earliest entries (of certain parishes) that the stock must have been settled in the neighbourhood for many generations before the year 1538."

Mr. Charles Frederic Hardy, author of The Hardys of Barbon, has indicated in his book that at least 42 children were born to nine Hardys who apparently were living in Westmorland at the beginning of the sixteenth century. The names of the contemporary Hardys, he says, were Peter, Leonard, Stephen, Roland, John, Edmund, Thomas, Richard, and James. William Hardy, son of Leonard mentioned in the list above, was born 13 Dec. 1538. Mr. Hardy has pointed out that all of the family heads mentioned above were residents of Barbon, England, except James, who lived at Casterton, and perhaps Richard. This information would indicate that Hardys were living in Westmorland during the fifteenth century, if not before.

The Hardys of Barbon, according to Mr. Charles Frederic Hardy, belonged to the class of yeomen, as they were called in Westmorland, or "statesmen", who lived upon the small "states" or estates which were cultivated by the same family from generation to generation, and according to the custom of the times were held by the peculiar tenure known as Border Tenant-right. A tenant could sell or dispose of the land, but on his death in default of a will the property descended according to the ordinary rules of descent, except that in case of female heirs instead of all the sisters succeeding together in equal shares, the eldest one took everything to the exclusion of the others.

The James Hardy of Casterton referred to above, married Isabel Glover who was a member of an old Barbon family, on the 15 July 1554. He died in 1596, his burial taking place 22 September of that year. His will which was dated 11 Dec. 1594 may be of some interest:

"My body to be buried in Kirkby Lonsdale church-yard. Richard, my eldest son, to have the title and tenant-right of my tenement, to him and his heirs for ever, after the death of my wife Isabella; she to possess during her widowhood half my said tenement.

"As to chattels, my wife to be at no charge out of her thirds (i. e. her legal one-third share), but the whole charge for duties, etc., to be made and done out of the two-thirds, and the remainder of the said two-thirds to be equally divided amongst my four (younger) children, John, Edward, Alice, and Joan.

"To Edward I give an almerie; to Joan one great chest standing in the cellar; to John one other great chest standing in the house-fire.

"Richard is to pay to John and Edward 'for agreement of my tenement' (i. e. as their portion charged on the land) 5 marks (£3 6s. 8d.) apiece; that is, 5 marks when he hath taken one crop of the first half-tenement, and 5 marks 'when it shall please God he doth enter the whole' (i. e. on his mother's death or marriage).

"To Richard I give the bed he now hath in his possession and the sconce in the house after the widowhood of my wife; also after her widowhood 'one culter, one team and . . . tugwyddyd.' (These are parts of the plough-gear. The culter is the front blade and the team is probably a chain for harnessing the animals. A 'tug' is a trace, and wyddyd (or wythyd) seems to mean bound or furnished with withes. Perhaps the whole thing was a pair of traces with a collar or halter of wickerwork, and the same as is called a pair of 'togwethes' in another Richmond inventory quoted in the New English Dictionary under 'team'.)

"To each of Richard's children I give 12 pence; to each of the children of Edward . . . my son-in-law (whose wife was presumably dead) 20 pence.

"My wife, to whom I give the rest of my goods, to be my Executrix; Robert Townson, Edward Atkinson, John Jackson, and Leonard Gibson to be Supervisors."⁴

England in recent years was Gathorne Hardy, first Earl of Cranbrook, the story of whose life has been written by his son, the Honorable A. E. Gathorne-Hardy. The latter states that there is a tradition in his family that their ancestors came from Ireland. This leads us to state that a number of Hardys in this country claim descent by way of Ireland. Many families, of course, are known to have fled to Ireland at different times during religious and political uprisings. According to Charles Frederic Hardy, one Thomas Hardy, who died at Horsforth near Leeds, left many descendants, among them being a grandson William, born 1715, and a great-grandson John, born 1745. This Thomas Hardy, said to be a native of Ireland, must have been born at least ten years prior to the rising against the Protestants in 1641. It is generally believed that this Thomas Hardy entered Ireland from Kirkby Lonsdale. These facts would indicate that Hardys were living in Kirkby Lonsdale at least as early as the fifteenth century.

It is doubtful if there were many Hardys, or Hardies, in Ireland before 1642, although there are some members of the family who claim Irish descent from an earlier period. The authors have not been able to verify such claims. At the same time, Hardy, or Hardie, is a well known family name in Ireland. O'Hart in his book Irish Pedigrees, Vol. 1, has reproduced a Hardy coat-of-arms (Plate 37, Crest 94). Incidentally, some Hardys, or Hardies, very properly, no doubt, claim an ancient Irish family background through the O'Harts, who were dispossessed of their estates in 1172 when King Henry II of England invaded Ireland. Being compelled to flee for safety, it is said they changed their names to Hardy, or Hardi.

The Scottish background is somewhat more definite than the Irish as far as the Hardy, or Hardie, family is concerned. Generally speaking, in Scotland the spelling "Hardie" is more common than the form "Hardy", although the records show that both forms of spelling have been used interchangeably for years.

The family has at least two origins in Scotland, as already explained; one through a member of the McLeod, or McLoid, family, whose name was changed by the King's command to

Hardie, and the other through a certain cup-bearer to King John of France.⁵

According to W. and A. K. Johnston, of Edinburgh, and London, eminent authorities on Scottish clans, the Hardys, or MacHardys, were originally McLeods and were of Norse origin. They held lands in the northwest of Scotland including the Island of Raasay. Malcomb Canmore, King of Scotland, took hostages from them and they became his body-guards at Braemar. It is said that the MacHardys held the lands of Crathie, Daldownie, Corgaff and Kinbittock from the Earl of Mar.

Messrs. Johnston also state that another MacHardy settled in Strathdon and was of French origin. The two families intermarried later. Originally, however, there were two Hardy clans as the Johnstons have pointed out.

The MacHardys fought for the Stewarts in the Rebellions of 1715 and 1745. After the latter rebellion, their lands were forfeited and as a result of the breaking up of the Mar estates the Hardy clan was scattered and eventually it united as "Septs" or branches, with other clans, especially with the Farquuharsons and the Mackintoshes. We are told by the Johnstons that the last recognized Hardy chief was Donald MacHardy of Daldownie who died about 1870. The Tartan worn by the old Hardy clan in the rebellion of 1715 was illustrated in the first editions of Tartans of the Clans and Septs of Scotland, published by the Johnstons referred to above, but this information and the other facts as to the MacHardys have been omitted in later editions. Hardy Bertram McCall in his book Some Old Families (1889), which is a contribution to genealogical history of Scotland, has devoted Chapter IV entirely to "The Family of Hardy."⁶ Several branches traced from this source as well as from other directions are treated elsewhere in this book.⁷ It is sufficient to say that there were various Hardys, or Hardies, residing in the vicinity of Edinburgh, Scotland, during, and therefore, presumably prior to the sixteenth century.

CHAPTER IV

Some Hardys Identified With Issues and Events of Colonial HistoryHardys of the Early WarsHardys of the First United States Census, 1790

Like most families connected with the establishment and development of the thirteen original colonies, the Hardys played their part, although the history books have little to say about them. From the time our nation was in its embryonic state up to the present time the Hardy family has been identified with all of its important issues and events. Thomas Hardy, who was one of twelve men specially chosen by Governor Winthrop of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1633 to settle a plantation at Agawam, now Ipswich, signed a protest against the departure of John Winthrop, Jr., to go to Connecticut soon after the settlement was completed, and became a most influential citizen. His brother John, of Salem, Massachusetts, was made a Selectman in 1647. Samuel Hardy, of Beverly, Massachusetts, was Town Clerk in 1674. Richard Hardy, of Stamford, Connecticut, was representative in the Connecticut General Court in 1662, and was Selectman from 1666 to 1669. Likewise, in Virginia, George Hardy, of Isle of Wight County, took an active part in public affairs. He served as a member of the House of Burgesses from 1641 to 1652. One of his descendants, Honorable Samuel Hardy, who was educated at William and Mary College and whose remains rest in Philadelphia with those of Innes, Tazwell, Macon, Reade and other gallant and patriotic Virginians, was a contemporary of George Washington. He served as a member of the House of Delegates in 1781, and was a member of the Continental Congress from 1783 to 1785. He was a lawyer and his magnificent powers, it is said, placed him at once in the front rank of statesmen. He was a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses from 1772 to 1774.

Phineas Hardy, of Westborough, Mass., was the leading citizen of his community and was chairman of the Committee of Correspondence in 1773. It is said that he was a member of the First Continental Congress in 1774. His son, Phineas, Jr., was one of the representatives of Massachusetts when the Union of the original thirteen states was completed in 1789 and 1790. He, like his father, was an ardent patriot.

Captain Phineas Hardy, of Bradford, Mass., a descendant of Thomas Hardy, one of the twelve first settlers of Ipswich, Mass., had a long and varied military career. His father, Eliphalet Hardy, and his grandfather, Daniel Hardy, before him were captains of militia, at Bradford. Captain Phineas Hardy is remembered especially because of his connection with Shay's Rebellion in Massachusetts. At the close of the Revolutionary War, it will be recalled that the Union was in a most deplorable condition. Nearly every form of business was prostrated. Taxes and living expenses were abnormally high. The common people were poverty stricken and many who were unable to pay their debts were sued, arrested and cast into prison. These conditions produced widespread discontent which here and there in the various States led to open rebellion. The most noteworthy of these insurrections was the Shay's Rebellion in Massachusetts, under the leadership of Daniel Shay, formerly a Captain in the Continental army. Several thousand men rallied late in the year 1786 (December), threatened to overthrow the state government which they believed was unmindful of the distress of the "common people", and took possession of courthouses in Worcester, Northampton and Springfield, and in many of the larger villages and smaller towns groups of malcontents were organizing. To disperse these and to suppress the insurrection Governor Bowdoin ordered out a force of four thousand men under the command of General Lincoln. The rebels were driven from Worcester to Springfield, thence to Petersham where they were finally dispersed.

From the records herewith presented it appears that Captain Phineas Hardy of Bradford, Mass., was in command of a Company or a detachment of the State militia whose object was to disperse local groups of rebels. This they did, pursuing the malcontents until at length they shared in their complete subjection at Petersham. Captain Hardy's narrative is of such stirring historical interest that it is here given verbatim.

The record was preserved by Jeremiah Spofford who wrote, "The following paper came into my hands as administrator of Capt. Phineas Hardy, late of Bradford, now Groveland, who was one of the patriotic citizen soldiers who marched to suppress the Shay's insurrection in 1787:"

"Andover, Jan'y 1787. We set out from there. Went to Billaracy (Billerica)—from there to Woburn 9 miles, Quart at Richardson's two nights.

A number of Hardys participated in the siege and capture of the Louisburg Fortress in Canada. The story of this achievement is a long one, beginning in 1745 and terminating in 1758, and some of the facts may well be repeated here. Parkman, the historian, declares that the taking of Louisburg Fortress, "in its issues was one of the most splendid achievements of the century."

Cape Breton, in colonial days, was the sentinel at the gateway of the St. Lawrence (the Strait of Belle Isle was not then used). Through this gateway passed the traffic of Canada and through it, in the event of new hostilities an attack would be made upon the colony. The value of Cape Breton as a naval base to protect Canada, French commerce and the North Atlantic fisheries is too obvious to need comment.

1. From the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. 7, page 352.

Louisburg is a town on the Atlantic coast commanding the entrance to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a position which gave it great importance during the French and Indian Wars. Cape Breton was secured by the French by the Peace of Utrecht in 1713 and the French government at enormous expense and by twenty-five years of labor had built the most formidable fortress in America, enclosing and commanding an excellent harbor which served as a rendezvous for French fleets and French privateers, thus becoming a source of ever threatening danger to the New England colonies and especially to the fishing industries off the Grand Banks.

The people of New England, especially those on the frontier had been so harrassed by the French and Indian Wars that their patience was nearly exhausted. The French had impressed their Indian followers with the duty of checking and driving back the English and also of proselyting the Roman Catholic faith, in the New England colonies. Louisburg was the key to the situation and the English colonists had reached the conviction that immediate and decisive action was imperative.

After a short and very exciting campaign under the leadership of William Vaughan of Portsmouth, N. H., Governor Shirley of Massachusetts and Col. Pepperell of Kittery, Maine, the expedition was duly authorized by the Provinces and Col. Pepperell made Commander in Chief. It was essentially a religious crusade much after the Cromwellian type engaging the active co-operation of the churches and the clergy. George Whitefield, the great evangelist, preached a sermon to the men and gave them their war slogan, "Nil desperandum Christo duce", which, freely translated, means, "Fear nothing with Christ as your leader."

To abbreviate a most thrilling story it is sufficient to add that by a most amazing series of favorable circumstances, which the church people always called "Divine Providences" the well nigh impregnable fortress was taken with hardly the loss of a single life. The victory caused universal rejoicing in the colonies and the amazement of Europe, especially of Great Britain. While the colonial forces were greatly aided by a fleet of English gunboats under the command of Commodore Warren, England very generously gave the colonists the credit for this significant and remarkable victory. That she might share in the expenses of the campaign she asked for a complete list of the officers and men engaged. The list was sent and eventually lost or mislaid and as no duplicates were preserved it is now impossible to determine the names of the men. There are various indications that the Hardy Family was well represented but there are only a few names positively identified:

Amos Hardy, a member of 'Thomas Perkins' Co., John Storer of Maine, Col. Thomas Hardy, First Lieut. in Capt. Peter Staples' Co., John Storer of Maine, Col.

Thomas Hardy, Ensign in Capt. James Perkins' Co., First Mass. Regiment.

Phineas Hardy of Newbury, Mass. Capt. Garrish's Co.

Thomas Hardy, Private, of Maine (probably Kennebunk).

But the Hardys in another way were identified with the siege of Louisburg. Probably the one leader next to Col. Pepperell who did the most for the expedition was Col. Benjamin Pickman, a wealthy and prominent citizen of Salem, Mass. He made the second largest financial contribution to the cause and commended it on every possible occasion. As a member of the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay Province he more than any other secured the small majority vote which approved and authorized the expedition.

Col. Pickman was the grandson of Benjamin and Elizabeth Hardy Pickman, married July 27, 1667. Elizabeth Hardy, who was the daughter of Capt. Joseph Hardy, the ship-builder of Salem. On their wedding day, or possibly later, Capt. Hardy gave the young couple not only his paternal blessing but also the title to a large and valuable building lot. Upon this was built a very commodious residence now standing and marked by a bronze tablet bearing the following inscription:

This house
the birthplace of Hawthorne shown substantially as it now appears and supposed to preserve parts, if not the whole of the dwelling of Captain Benjamin Pickman was built on land given by Joseph Hardy the ship-wright to his "well beloved" son-in-law delivery being made by turf and twig upon which land ye sd. Benjamin Pickman his dwelling house now standeth
the deed of gift bearing the date August 17, 1685

There is apparently a conflict between tradition and recorded dates but the fact remains that the home of Elizabeth Hardy Pickman eventually became the birthplace of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Because of the conspicuous services of Col. Benjamin Pickman in connection with the expedition against Louisburg he was the recipient of many high honors. He was chosen Province Councillor and in 1756 judge of the Supreme Court, and in 1773 was elected Colonel in Chief of the Essex Regiment. But the honor which most appealed to him and was most appreciated by his family was the gift of a large and beautiful loving cup from the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay Province. This cup, in all historical references called "the Montith", was of solid silver and its presentation with complimentary addresses was as noteworthy as the Provincial Reception given to Col. William Pepperell on his return from Louisburg after the victory. Col Pickman was the spokesman on the latter occasion for the Province and both celebrations were notable social events in the annals of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. England bestowed upon Col. Pepperell the title of baronet, said to be the only one granted to an American. "The Montith" is now on display in the Museum of Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.

But again the Hardys become identified with this Louisburg fortress. By the Treaty of Aix-la-Charpello, Great Britain ceded back to France the famous fortress in 1748. This action caused bitter disappointment and outspoken resentment in New England. This sorrow, however, was turned to joy and satisfaction a little later, for the fortress which had become known as the "Dunkirk of America" was recaptured in 1758 by the English fleet. It was a brilliant attack and a remarkable victory and never again have the French been able to gain possession of either the fortress or the Island.

In this noteworthy naval victory of vast significance to the American people Sir Charles Hardy, Rear Admiral of the White, was the second in command and rendered the most efficient and distinguished service. He was Governor of Newfoundland in 1744 and Governor of the Province of New York 1755-1757. He was a brilliant naval officer and cared little for honors not won on the high seas.

It is a matter of note as well as of satisfaction that the Hardys were identified with nearly all the great issues and events of colonial history.

Thomas Hardy of Dublin, New Hampshire, another descendant of Thomas Hardy of Ipswich, Mass., had a brilliant military record. He was a favorite of George Washington. In fact, he was offered a commission by Washington but declined to accept on the ground that he was not sufficiently educated. Later, it appears, he was made a lieutenant.

Elsewhere in this book (See page 40), is given an account of the life of Deacon Noah Hardy of Nelson, New Hampshire, who witnessed the execution of Major John André at Tappan, N. Y. Moody Hardy of Tewksbury, Mass., and later of Goffstown, N. H., like Deacon Noah Hardy, a descendant of Thomas Hardy of Ipswich, Mass., served with distinction in the Revolutionary War, and it is said of him that he was the first soldier to be wounded at the Battle of Bunker Hill, receiving a scalp wound in the early part of the battle.

It may not be out of order to mention also that the sister of General John Sullivan of Revolutionary War fame, Mary Sullivan, married Theophilus Hardy. The latter volunteered for service in the Revolutionary War under the leadership of his distinguished brother-in-law.

Since many Hardys in England served in both the Army and Navy, it is not surprising to discover that in the Revolutionary War cousins fought against cousins. Space does not permit calling the role, but an interesting episode involving one Midshipman Hardy, later made a Commodore, of the British Navy, is reproduced here. The following incident is described by Hon. Henry C. Platt in his "Huntington Address" in 1876 and reproduced in Mather's book The Refugees of 1776 has been thought interesting enough to be included here:

"Midshipman Hardy, during the Revolutionary War, was afflicted with the smallpox while on board of a British man-of-war. He was taken ashore and placed in the smallpox hospital, in the eastern part of the village of Huntington (Long Island). Dr. Gilbert Porter, being an active and zealous rebel, had fled to Connecticut with others and joined the patriots on the main shore. He left everything in Huntington in charge of his wife, Elizabeth Williams Porter, a daughter of Nathaniel Williams, an educated and remarkable woman, who not only took charge of all of his affairs during his absence but assumed the doctor's medical practice; and if the tradition be true, she was as good a doctor as her husband. In the course of her medical practice, she attended the young British naval officer, Midshipman Hardy, at the hospital; and, taking a fancy to him, had him removed to her dwelling house where she doctored, nursed, and attended to him so faithfully that he recovered and returned to his ship in the Bay. At this time, her son (afterward Judge), Nathaniel Porter, was a young man in his teens and living at home with his mother; although he, afterward, by his father's aid, fitted out a privatier at Greenport (Long Island); and with a crew captured several British prizes. The sequel to this incident is rather novel. In the war with Great Britain in 1812, Midshipman Hardy² of the Revolution had risen in rank, and was a British Commodore. He had command of a British Fleet that sailed through Long Island Sound, and, at one time, anchored in Huntington Bay. No British forces landed there, but they destroyed and captured all the American vessels within reach. Capt. Nathan Conklin was sailing a fast sloop, the Amazon, owned by Judge Porter, from Huntington to Albany, where she was captured by Com. Hardy's Fleet in the Bay. On board of the Amazon was a nephew of Judge Porter, a young man, named Henry Williams, or as he was afterwards more familiarly known in this village 'Uncle Henry Williams.' He did not surrender very gracefully; in fact he d.....d the British, their Flag and their Commodore in no unmeasured terms. The consequence was that Com. Hardy put him in irons, kept him a prisoner on board his ship and threatened to send him to Halifax. Judge Porter, on hearing of the capture of his sloop, ransomed her and went on board of Hardy's ship to look after young Williams. His astonishment may be imagined when he recognized Com. Hardy as the young Midshipman of the Revolution, whom his mother had nursed and doctored years before in Huntington. A mutual recognition took place; and upon learning that Henry Williams was the nephew of Judge Porter, he was at once released. The next day Hardy gave a grand dinner on his flagship in Huntington Bay, when Judge Porter, under a flag of truce, was dined with all honors and a glowing tribute to his mother who had passed away."

Later in this chapter will be found the names of many Hardys who participated in the three early wars, viz., the French and Indian War, the Revolutionary War, and the War of 1812. It is interesting to note that more than forty of them participated in England's strife with the French and the Indian allies of France in those trying days between 1755 and 1765. The list that appears in this book must not be taken as being complete. No doubt many other Hardys also saw service under the British flag but unfortunately all the records in connection with the French and Indian War are not available.

Not all of those bearing the name of Hardy in the French and Indian War were colonists. Some were members of the regular British Army and came over here to fight for their cousins against a common enemy. Among them was one Jonas Hardy, a close relative of the Hardys of Bradford, Mass., as will be noted later. This Jonas Hardy was a Major in the English Army and saw service at Fort William Henry, Lake Champlain and vicinity. He was in charge of the garrison at Boston, Mass., and soon after his arrival in this country he met and married the daughter of an Indian Chief of one of the six tribes then allied with England.³ To them were born two sons, one of them named Jonas in honor of his distinguished father. They were very young children and living with their princess mother at Boston, Mass., when Fort William Henry was besieged by General Montcalm and his Indian allies August 10, 1757. Major Jonas Hardy was at Fort William Henry with the British General Monro when the garrison was attacked. The English were obliged to surrender and a treaty was drawn up between the two opposing generals, Montcalm and Monro. But the Hurons, who were allies of the French and who were considered one of the fiercest tribes, disregarded the treaty and fell upon the English, slaying ruthlessly many, including women and children. Among the unfortunate victims was Major Jonas Hardy. The Major was a popular officer and his death was greatly mourned. His comrades were much concerned about the safety of the mother and the two small children. Learning of the Major's relatives in Bradford, Mass., they took them there and placed them in the home of a Hardy who happened to have the same Christian name as the Major, viz., Jonas. The two sons, Jonas, Jr., and Oliver, grew up, married and raised families of their own. They settled in New Hampshire. Their descendants are now found in various parts of the United States and point with much pride to their noble ancestry.

There are no doubt many other interesting incidents that might be told of the Hardys participating in the early wars of this country and time will eventually reveal them. At least one hundred and seventy-five Hardys took part in the Revolutionary War, of whom more than twenty-five were Minute Men. There were twenty-two Hardys on the "Alarm List" of 97 men from Bradford, Mass.

3. When and where Major Jonas Hardy met and married the Indian princess is not definitely known.

The War of 1812 did not arouse much enthusiasm in New England but from the list of Hardys enlisting in that war it will be seen there were about as many Hardys as there were in the Revolutionary War.

The majority of Hardy soldiers in the three wars mentioned were privates. There were, however, several officers among them.

Mention of course might be made of the military careers of Hardys of this country participating in other wars, especially in the unfortunate Civil War. That was America's greatest tragedy! In the opinion of the authors of this book, it was an unnecessary fratricidal conflict. Brothers slew brothers, families were torn asunder, and sectional wounds were made, perhaps, that will never heal. That hundreds of brave Hardys rendered gallant service on both sides of the war is admitted, but the least said about it the better. The necessity for such sacrifice is more an occasion for shame and humiliation than for praise.

HARDYS OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

Below and on the following pages will be found data concerning the various Hardys who served in the Revolutionary War. These data have been compiled from U. S. Government records and from notes made by Mr. Milton C. Hardy, who before his demise gathered certain information from the original Muster and Pay Rolls of the Revolutionary War as found in the Archives of the State House, Boston, Mass. His compilation consisted of the Hardys of Massachusetts and New Hampshire only.

It should be pointed out that prior to January, 1776, all New Hampshire names were included in the Massachusetts records. After that date, the New Hampshire names had a separate classification. The New Hampshire data as such were taken from the material assembled by Isaac W. Hammond.

Attention is called to the fact that some of the names may be repetitions which are made possible by the fact that most of the Revolutionary soldiers enlisted for short periods of service, and many of them re-enlisted. The records, of course, are not to be considered complete. A list of the known Hardys follows:

HARDYS OF THE FIRST U. S. CENSUS

Below and on the following pages are given the names of those Hardys who, according to the first United States Census in 1790, were heads of families at that time in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina. Similar information for Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, New Jersey and Tennessee is not available since the first census records for those states have been lost or destroyed. The Connecticut list of heads of families in 1790 does not contain any Hardy names, and therefore that state is omitted from the states comprising the Union when the first U. S. Census was taken. The Virginia list is understood to be only a partial one.

CHAPTER V

"SIC DONEC"

It was about the year 1360, so we are told, that two young Norman gentlemen, brothers, of the landed family Le Hardy, or LeHardy, gathered together their portable effects and sailed across the twenty-four-mile strait that separates the Island of Jersey from the French coast.¹ One of these brothers, Clement LeHardy, made for himself a name that will last as long as history itself. He married a sister of one Sir William Lalague, or

1. See The Life of Thomas Hardy by Ernest Brennecke, Jr., page 28.

Lulazin, who brought him a dowry of "a corn rent of one quarter", and thus founded the central line of Jersey Hardys, which still flourishes today and which has given to the world such outstanding characters as Thomas Hardy, the writer, Sir Charles Hardy, Knight and Admiral of the British Navy, Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, Baronet and Admiral of the Navy, Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, Keeper of the Public Records in England, and others. He retained his ancestral Norman coat of arms. He was made a magistrate, a Jurat, of the island in 1381.

A century later, after much fighting for the ownership of the island of Jersey on the part of the French and English, in 1467 Sir Richard Harliston, Vice Admiral of England, drove out the last of the Norman invaders and Jersey was won for all time to the English. In the meantime, the office of magistrate of the island was passed down from father to son without interruption. The family had succeeded in establishing itself as one of great influence. Another Clement LeHardy, great-grandson of the first Clement LeHardy, immigrant from Normandy, was a resourceful, independent and powerful individual. It is said that his house, in 1480 or thereabouts, was one of the largest and best on the island. All of its windows were secured by iron gratings, in order to frustrate the frequent attacks of unorganized Norman plunderers who in war times were delighted to make raids upon the property of the islanders. The outer doors of the house were double, of unusual thickness, and were studded with huge nails. It was located at St. Martin. It was the kind of a house in those days in which any fugitive or exile might well seek refuge and safety. And it was to this house that a future king of England did go! Otherwise he might never have become king and the subsequent history of Great Britain might have been a different story. The seeker of refuge at this substantial house of Clement LeHardy was none other than Henry, Earl of Richmond, later Henry VII, founder of the Tudor dynasty.

It will be remembered that Richard III was the predecessor of Henry VII. King Richard was a harsh, brutal and infamous ruler. His atrocities forced many noble Englishmen to leave England and to flee to France. Many of the fugitives went by way of Jersey and Clement LeHardy sympathized with them. He had no use for a monarch who would commit murder without just cause. Perhaps it is well that Hardy's sympathy for the fugitives did not reach the king's ears!

At any rate, Henry, Earl of Richmond, was a Pretender to the Throne. He became a fugitive from England and sought adherents in Brittany. In 1483 the Duke of Buckingham revolted against the King and Henry decided that this was his opportunity to strike a blow for the crown. He embarked with his retainers, but a storm arose and his fleet was scattered. The Severn overflowed its banks, thus frustrating Buckingham. The attempt ended in failure. Henry's ship drifted away from the rest of his fleet and finally landed on the Jersey coast, alone and unprotected. He made his way to St. Martin and begged Clement LeHardy that he take him in and furnish him shelter until he could get permission from the King of France to reënter his dominions. Hardy offered him all the hospitality at his command, even though he knew that he was taking chances in going against the order of Richard, who had published throughout the island instructions for the arrest of Henry.

Clement LeHardy, moreover, not only furnished safe refuge and shelter for Henry but he conducted him safely to the Norman shore at considerable risk to his own life. As the Earl of Richmond bade good-bye to his gallant host and staunch retainer on the French beach, he gave Hardy his ring as a promise of future favors, with the words, "Sic-donec-" (Latin meaning "Thus-until-"). These words now form a motto on the LeHardy coat-of-arms and appear on the border of the Membership Certificate of the Hardy Family Association of America.

Two years later, Henry tried again to win the crown of England, this time with the help of France. He landed at Milford Haven, August 7, 1485. Richard met him at Bosworth in Leicestershire a fortnight later on August 22, and there lost his kingdom and his life. Henry was crowned at Westminster in 1486. Strangely enough for a monarch of those days, he remembered his ring and his pledge to his benefactor in Jersey. In 1488 he appointed Clement LeHardy Lieutenant Governor of the island under Matthew Baker, granted him the Seigneurie de Meleche, and vested him with the office of Chief Magistrate, or Bailiff, for life.

SIR CHARLES HARDY, ADMIRAL

Admiral Hardy is another distinguished and famous commander-in-chief of the English navy. Our special interest in his brilliant career centers upon his intimate and important relation to American history.

Sir Charles Hardy was the son of Vice-Admiral Charles Hardy, a man of rare accomplishments. With his father's remarkable record before him and by training and inclination he was clearly destined for a seafaring life. At the age of fourteen he entered the navy, in 1737 he was commissioned a lieutenant and early in 1741 he was in command of the brig Rubert's Prize.

Late in the year 1741 he was promoted to the command of the Rye of 24 guns stationed off the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas to protect English trade against Spanish privateers. In 1744 he was sent in charge of a convoy to Newfoundland, where he seems to have been governor for a brief season. Some mishap to the fleet under his escort caused his court-martialing, but he was not only fully exonerated but seems to have strengthened his naval reputation. After his return for nearly a decade he rendered noteworthy service off the coasts of France and Portugal and nearer the home base.

On 29 Jan. 1755 he was appointed by the English Council, the king being present, Captain-general and Governor-in-chief of his Majesty's province of New York.

Hardy, in the prime of life and somewhat familiar with American conditions, accepted this high honor and the important position, reaching New York 2 Sept. 1755. Before he left England he was honored by Knighthood. The revolt, in the colonies, against exorbitant taxation and English authority was gaining strength very rapidly, unrest and discontent were painfully apparent everywhere and the prejudice of the colonists against royal governors was bitter and active. Sir Charles had little interest or skill in political activities. A year after he was appointed governor he was commissioned Rear-Admiral of the Blue. This high honor, a distaste of civilian position and an intense love of the sea-faring life, caused him very soon after his inauguration to request a release from his official duties and a transference back to the navy, the service most congenial to him. His request was granted in 1757, at the end of his second year of service.

His administration as royal governor was efficient and distinguished by some notable achievements. He was an ardent advocate of higher education and practical church life. He contributed five hundred pounds towards the founding of Columbia University, labored assiduously to aid the enterprise and at length laid the corner-stone Aug., 1756. He encouraged and aided various church enterprises, and strengthened welfare work in many ways new to that generation. Notwithstanding the obvious difficulties of his position he succeeded in securing the respect and admiration of the people for his fairness, wisdom, generosity and sterling worth.

On the renewal of his official relation to the navy, he, as rear-admiral and second in command, aided Admiral Boscawen in the siege and final capture of Fort Louisberg in 1758. The Fort had been taken in 1745 by the colonists of New England aided by the English, but soon had reverted to the French by a new treaty. The victory of 1758 placed the Fort, the village and the island in the permanent possession of the English. In 1759, with the Union as his flag-ship, he was second in command of the great fleet under Sir Edward Hawke during the long siege of Brest and in the decisive battle of Quiberon Bay, he was also for a time with General Wolfe in his great Canadian expedition.

The most important event, however, in the brilliant career of Admiral Hardy was his appointment to the command of the Channel Fleet in 1778. The allied forces of the French and Spanish had planned an invasion of Great Britain. They had a great fleet of splendidly equipped war vessels, in number of ships and men they were vastly superior to the English. They had also a large standing army massed on land ready for the invasion. The greatest excitement and anxiety prevailed throughout the English domain. The situation was so serious, the difficulties so great and the results so momentous that no naval officer on the active list would undertake to command the fleet.

Meanwhile Sir Charles Hardy, honored as a fully commissioned Admiral of the English navy, had been appointed governor of Greenwich Hospital in 1771. He had been elected a member of Parliament from the borough of Portsmouth, 1774, and was exerting a strong and salutary influence throughout the kingdom. But the need of the hour was so urgent and the confidence of the nation in Hardy's wide experience and great naval skill so great that he was called from his retirement to take absolute command of the fleet. Hardy, always obedient to the call of duty, accepted the position. His available war ships numbered only about two-thirds the number of the enemy's fleet, he had been retired from active service for several years, but in a surprisingly short time his discipline and reorganization, his tact, efficiency and naval skill wrought remarkable changes. The details of this gigantic duel of warships can not here be given for lack of space. Suffice it to add that the allied French and Spanish admirals declined to attack the English fleet, returned to Brest and the great invasion was given up.

At the close of this special service Hardy struck his flag and quietly returned to Greenwich, but the following spring when about to resume the command of the fleet he was suddenly stricken by a shock of apoplexy and died 18 of May 1780. He was twice married, first in 1749 to Mary, daughter of Bartholomew Tate of Delapre in Northampton, second he was married to Catherine, only daughter of Temple Slanyan, by whom he had three sons and two daughters.

THOMAS MASTERMAN HARDY

The Hardy name is distinguished in the naval history of Great Britain and conspicuous in the list of great commanders and notable heroes of the high seas. Of those named the best known, most respected and sincerely loved is Thomas Masterman Hardy. He was worthy the high honors bestowed upon him by an appreciative nation because of his relation to Lord Nelson and more for what he did and what he was. At the battle of Trafalgar he was captain of Nelson's flag-ship and also captain of the whole fleet.

In this brief sketch only a few significant incidents in Hardy's brilliant career can be considered. At the outset, however, there are three quotations which will add interest and information to the perusal of this appraisal of his work and worth.

W. H. Fitchett in his book Nelson and His Captains has said: "In the great drama of Napoleonic wars there are only three supreme names, that of Napoleon himself, of Wellington and of Nelson, and Nelson was as great on sea as his two rivals in fame were great on land." Of Lord Nelson, Tennyson wrote:

"Thine Island loves thee well, thou famous man
The greatest sailor since the world began."

Of Thomas Hardy W. H. Fitchett also wrote: "Hardy stands imperishably linked to the memory of Nelson by the pathos of the immortal scene in the cockpit of the Victory and by the half womanly tenderness of the words, 'Kiss me, Hardy', on Nelson's dying lips. He (Hardy) will be held in unforgettable memory by the whole English-speaking race for the part he fills in the last hours of Nelson's life. As long as the English language is spoken Nelson's last words will live and Hardy's name is enshrined for all time in those imperishable syllables."

Sir Thomas Masterman Hardy, vice-admiral, second son of Joseph Hardy of Potisham in Devonshire, and Nanny Masterman, daughter of Thomas Masterman of Kingston, was born 5 April 1769. At the age of twelve he entered the navy on board the brig Helena, leaving a year later for three years of schooling. Hardy ended his school career, boy-fashion, by running away and shipping aboard a West-Indiaman in "merchant service." On Feb. 1790 he was appointed a midddy on board the Hebe. Three years later he was a lieutenant on the frigate Meleager which later became a part of Nelson's squadron off Genoa. In 1796 he was a lieutenant on the Minerve, Commodore Nelson's flag-ship. Here began that memorable friendship which ended nine years later in the death of Lord Nelson in the cockpit of the Victory.

On 19 December 1796, in a naval engagement off Carthagen, a Spanish frigate was captured and Hardy and another placed in her command. By a skillful and fearless manœuvre Hardy saved both Lord Nelson and his flag-ship from capture. Although taken prisoner he was soon exchanged and rejoined the Minerve. Nelson could never forget such gallant and self-sacrificing service and soon demonstrated his appreciation. On 10 Feb. 1797 the Minerve sailing out of Gibraltar unexpectedly encountered a squadron of Spanish line-of-battle ships. When closely pursued an English sailor fell overboard. Hardy, ever prompt and fearless in a generous act, jumped into the "jolly-boat" to rescue the drowning man; the swift current, however, carried him directly towards the pursuing Spanish ships. "By God", said Nelson, "I'll not lose Hardy, back the mizzen-top sail." This amazing action caused the Spanish battleship to hesitate, to shorten sail and to retreat. The Minerve picked up Hardy and sailed away unharmed.

In May of the same year Hardy with amazing courage and skill captured at Santa Cruz the La Mutine, one of the best war-ships of the French fleet, with the loss of but one man. The ship, with Hardy in command, was at once added to the British fleet. Thus, when only twenty-eight years of age Hardy found himself in command of perhaps the finest and fastest brig of war under the British flag and what was better still he had won the admiration and affection of Lord Nelson.

From this time his promotion was very rapid and well deserved. In 1800 he was appointed captain of Nelson's flag-ship Namur and from that time the two friends were inseparable. In 1803 Nelson began his memorable blockade of the French at Toulon and Hardy was his flag captain both there and during the thrilling pursuit of Villeneuve to the West Indies. When Nelson 14 September 1805 embarked at Portsmouth for what was his last cruise and his last battle Hardy was his flag captain, and, in addition, was captain of the entire fleet. In less than six weeks came Trafalgar, and Nelson's death. The story of those weeks lives imperishably in English history, and Hardy plays an important part in this greatest naval drama.

At Trafalgar Oct. 21, 1805, the stage was set for the greatest of all naval contests. The conquered as well as the victorious displayed amazing courage and skill. The French-Spanish fleet was superior in the number of ships and men, and Villeneuve, the French admiral, was one of the most eminent seamen of the age. Although the story of this naval contest and victory is of thrilling interest, we are here concerned primarily with only two persons, Lord Nelson and Captain Hardy, but without question they were the most interesting and conspicuous heroes of that occasion. Just before the outbreak of the battle Nelson, from the Victory, gave to the fleet the flag signal which will be remembered as long as the English language is known, "ENGLAND EXPECTS EVERY MAN TO DO HIS DUTY." It was received throughout the fleet with shouts of approval, made sublime by the spirit which it breathed and the feeling which it kindled.

Naturally the flag-ship Victory, with Admiral Nelson aboard, conspicuous in his admiral's frock coat with glistening decorations, was the target for the concentrated fire of the enemies' ships. With remarkable coolness and courage Nelson and Hardy paced the quarter-deck. Scott, Secretary to Nelson, was shot as he conversed with Hardy, nine marines nearby were killed by a double headed ball, a shot passing between Nelson and Hardy slightly wounded the latter. Nelson said, "This is too warm work, Hardy, to last long."

In the swift, tragic movement of the battle the Victory had taken a death grapple hold of the Redoubtable. A sharpshooter from the mizzen-top fired a bullet which struck the epaulette on Nelson's shoulder, passed through his body and shattered his backbone. He fell, but remained conscious. As they lifted him up he said, "They have done for me at last, Hardy." "I hope not", cried Hardy. "Yes", Nelson replied, "my backbone is shot through."

Nelson was tenderly carried to the cockpit crowded with wounded and dying men. It was imperative that Hardy, as Captain of the fleet, should be on deck. Nelson, suffering unspeakable agony, became impatient to see Hardy and repeatedly cried, "Will no one bring Hardy to me? He must be killed, he is surely dead." More than an hour elapsed before Hardy could leave the deck. When he came back the two men shook hands in silence, Hardy struggling to suppress his feelings. "Well, Hardy, how goes the day with us?" asked Nelson. "Very well", replied Hardy, "ten ships have struck and five of the van have tacked and show intention to bear down upon the Victory, but I have called two or three of our fresh ships round and have no doubt of giving them a drubbing." "I hope", said Nelson, "none of our ships have struck." Hardy replied, "There was no fear of that." Then and not until then did Nelson speak of himself. "I am a dead man, Hardy", said he, "I am going fast; it will be all over with me soon, come nearer to me." Hardy expressed the hope that the surgeon might yet save his life. "Oh, no", he replied, "it is impossible, my back is shot through." Captain Hardy once again shook hands with him and with a heart almost breaking hastened upon deck.

It was fifty minutes before Hardy could return and again taking the hand of his dying friend and commander congratulated him on having gained a complete victory; how many of the ships of the enemy were taken he did not know, as it was impossible to perceive them distinctly, but fourteen or fifteen at least. "That is well", said Nelson, "but I had bargained for twenty." And then in a stronger voice he said, "Anchor, Hardy, anchor." Hardy thereupon hinted that Admiral Collingwood would take upon himself the director of affairs. "Not while I live, Hardy", said the dying Nelson, ineffectually endeavoring to raise himself from the bed, "Do you anchor?" Presently, calling Hardy back to his side, he said to him in a low voice, "Don't throw me overboard", for he had expressed the wish to be buried by the side of his parents unless the king desired otherwise. Then reverting to private matters, he said, "Take care of my dear Lady Hamilton, Hardy, take care of poor Lady Hamilton." Then after a pathetic silence he said with much emotion, "Kiss me, Hardy." Kneeling down, Hardy kissed Nelson's cheek and as his lips touched the dying man's cheek Nelson said, "Now I am satisfied. Thank God I have done my duty." For a few moments Hardy, overwhelmed with emotion, stood silently by the side of his beloved friend and then again knelt and kissed his forehead. Nelson, who was rapidly sinking, whispered, "Who is that?" Being informed who it was, he replied, "God bless you, Hardy." These were Nelson's last words.

It is impossible here to follow in detail the further progress of the battle; suffice to add that, under the leadership of Lord Nelson, Hardy and their associates, the English won that day the greatest naval victory of history, and it is equally impossible here to trace in detail the notable career of Thomas Masterman Hardy in subsequent years. He was highly honored at the burial of Lord Nelson, as would be expected. On 4 Feb. 1806 he was created a baronet and a few weeks later given command of the Triumph, one of the fleet guarding the North American States, under the command of Sir George Cranfield Berkeley, whose daughter Anne Louise Emely he married in December, 1807.

In 1812, when England was at war with the States, he was promoted to the rank of Commodore of the English fleet with the Rami Lies as his flag-ship and practically blockaded the whole of Long Island Sound. There are so many historical references to his skillful yet ever wise and generous administration of affairs in the States that one regrets that the record cannot be given fully. But one should not ignore certain significant family traditions that in some way not easily explained now the New England Hardys came into direct contact with Commodore Hardy. One family cherishes the tradition he held in his lap an ancestor of his and recounted to him the story of his life as the lad examined the famous sword and the three-cornered hat. In any case, evidences justify the belief that Thomas Hardy and the Hardys of New England were closely related. Hardy's activities in the War of 1812 were not confined to the blockade of the Sound, but with others extended over the whole North Atlantic coast.

Knighthood was conferred upon Hardy in 1815 and again in 1831. In 1816 he returned from the States. Three years later he was appointed Commodore of the South American fleet. 17 May 1825 he was made Rear-admiral. On Nov., 1830, he joined the Board of Admiralty as first Sea Lord under Sir James Graham.

On April, 1834, he was appointed governor of Greenwich Hospital, the king sanctioning the appointment on the express understanding that on the event of war he should return to active service. The rest of his life, spent in the peaceful and congenial retirement, was devoted to the interests of the pensioners under his care and the improvements of the hospital.

He became Vice-admiral 10 Feb. 1837 and died 20 Sept. 1839. He was buried, as he requested, in the hospital mausoleum. A widow and three daughters survived him. A monument to his memory stands in the hospital chapel, his portrait, the gift of Lady Hardy, hangs in the Painter Hall and a memorial pillar has been erected on the crest of Black Down, above Potisham, visible from the sea.

Of his personal appearance one has said, "Hardy's face in Abbott's well-known painting will repay study. The features are large. The cheeks heavy, the eyebrows black and thick. But there is a frankness in the wide-opened eyes, a kindness in the firm mouth, and an air of sweetness as well as gravity and strength in his whole countenance which take the gazer's imagination captive. It is a face of a man with whom nobody would take any liberties; a strong face, with not an ignoble line in it. A certain half-solemn dignity lies upon it; but it is the face which would win a child's affection, and to which a woman would turn for help."

Nelson's pathetic words, "Kiss me, Hardy", linked Hardy's name with his own in the unforgetting memory of all Englishmen. In Hardy's coffin, it may be added, there lies, by his own dying wish, Nelson's portrait.

THE TREASON TRIAL OF THOMAS HARDY IN ENGLAND—1794

The impeachment of Thomas Hardy of England, in 1794, is of such intense interest and of so great historic significance that it deserves a place in Hardys and Hardies Past and Present.

In 1794 the governing classes and the new lords of industry of Great Britain were panic-stricken with fear of an English revolution. Louis XVI of France had been guillotined 21 January 1793 and the Reign of Terror followed. The English had just cause for alarm, for the spirit of unrest and insurrection had crossed the Channel and was causing a fever of sympathy, widespread agitation and radical action which menaced the freedom, the well-being and the safety of the people and threatened the unity and the stability of the empire. It is not, therefore, surprising that under such provocation the government with needless violence attempted the suppression of an organization, assumed to be hostile to the vital interests of the kingdom, by the arrest of Thomas Hardy, the founder, secretary-treasurer, and leading spirit, and twelve of his associates on the charge of high treason. By eminent jurists and historians this trial for treason is considered the most important in the annals of English history.

Thomas Hardy (1752-1832) was born in the parish of Lambert, Sterlingshire, on the third of March, 1752. His grandfather, Walter Hardy, was an army officer in the German War. His father, also Walter Hardy, was a seafaring man and died on a homeward voyage from America in 1760. Thomas, the eldest son, a lad of eight years, was practically, although not legally, adopted by his maternal grandfather, Thomas Walker, a shoe-maker. After a brief schooling he was taught the shoe-making trade. In 1774 Hardy went up to London. On his arrival there he had only 18d, the sum total of his fortune. He, however, soon found employment, and in 1781 married the youngest daughter of Mr. Priest, a carpenter and builder at Chesham, Buckinghamshire. In 1791 he set up a boot-making shop at 9 Piccadily and afterwards began to take a deep and active interest in politics.

In 1792, with a few friends, Hardy founded "THE LONDON CORRESPONDING SOCIETY" with the object of promoting parliamentary reform. The first meeting was held at The Bell, Exeter Street, Shand, where only nine persons were present and Hardy was appointed secretary-treasurer. The first address of the Society, signed by Hardy as secretary, is dated 2 April 1792 and was distributed throughout the country in the form of handbills, a congratulatory address to the National Convention of France as agreed to by the Society, and before the end of the year it was in correspondence with the Society of Great Britain which had been instituted for the purpose of obtaining by legal and constitutional means a reform in the Common's House of Parliament.

Evidently there were other similar societies, for in December, 1793, a convention was held in Edinburgh at which two members of the London society were arrested. They were apparently soon released, but the members of the Society at once began plans for another convention to be held in England to which members of the societies in Scotland should attend as delegates. This the British government determined to prevent, and to this end on 12 May 1794 Thomas Hardy was arrested on the serious charge of high treason and his records and personal papers were seized. After being examined several times before the Privy Council, he was committed to the Tower of London on May 29. While he was a prisoner there his wife died in child-bed August 27. On October 2 a special commission of six common-law judges, presided over by Sir James Eyre, the Lord Chief Justice of Common Pleas, was opened at Clarkenwell session-house. On October 16 the grand jury returned a true bill against Hardy and twelve of his associates. During the trial which followed Hardy was the only one of the prisoners tried.

28 October 1794 Hardy's trial for high treason commenced, and it lasted for eight days. Sir John Scott, the attorney-general (afterwards Lord Eldon) was the leading counsel for the prosecution. Sir Thomas Erskine at the request of the prisoners was assigned by the Court for their defense. Associated with him on the defense were Messrs. Gibbs and Dampier and two other eminent barristers. Every detail of the trial was followed with the keenest interest by the English people. Erskine's summary and plea was a masterpiece of logic and eloquence. The jury quickly returned their verdict of "Not Guilty" and not only was Hardy freed from the charge of high treason and acquitted but was exonerated, and the other prisoners were at once liberated. After the trial Hardy was drawn in his coach by the crowd through the principal streets of London and a great banquet was held at the Crown and Anchor a few weeks later in honor of Hardy's splendid vindication at this celebrated trial for high treason.

The stenographic reports of this trial fill four large volumes of 1,697 closely written pages. These reports have been published in various editions and copies are found in nearly all the libraries of Great Britain and in all the larger libraries here in America. Copies of the published records of the trial, the papers of the London Corresponding Society and a number of Hardy's private letters are carefully preserved in the British Museum, as they are considered to be of great historic value. Hardy's portrait is (No. 36¹) in the third volume of Kay's Original Portraits of Notable Englishmen.

After the trial Hardy resumed his business relations, but with difficulty, for he had spent all his means in his defense at the trial. His wife was dead and his home life broken. By the help of friends he was enabled to continue in business until 1816, when he retired. The last nine years of his life he was supported by an annuity contributed by Sir Francis Bardell and few other friends. He died at Pimlico 11 October 1832 at the age of eighty-one years and was buried at Bunhill Fields. Notable addresses were delivered, at his funeral and at later memorial services, by distinguished statesmen and jurists.

A few months before his death he completed the writing of his autobiography, which was published after his death. The volume is largely devoted to the organization, development and influence of the London Corresponding Society and various aspects of the great trial. The Title Page reads as follows: MEMOIR OF THOMAS HARDY—FOUNDER OF AND SECRETARY TO THE LONDON CORRESPONDING SOCIETY FOR DIFFUSING USEFUL POLITICAL KNOWLEDGE AMONG THE PEOPLE OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND, AND FOR PROMOTING

PARLIAMENTARY REFORM FROM ITS ESTABLISHMENT JANUARY, 1792, UNTIL HIS ARREST ON A FALSE CHARGE OF HIGH TREASON 12TH OF MAY 1794.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF

LONDON 1832

The Preface was written by Sir Francis Bardell and is interesting. We quote, "In person Mr. Hardy was of fine proportions, near six feet high before he began to stoop. Large breasts, broad shouldered and muscular without the least inclination to corpulancy. He was indeed such a man in body and mind as we may suppose the patriots to have been who followed those immortal heroes as an Alfred and a Wallace. In manners most affable and unassuming he had practically no enemies." From this appraisal and from the evidence presented at the trial it appears that Hardy was a man of deep religious conviction and was identified with the church. A man of high moral character of such a quality that it stood the test when every expedient was sought to win the trial against him. He must have been a man of exceptional mentality. The evidence of this is seen in the fact that the London Society became a power in directing the thought and action of the English people.

He certainly deserves a place in Hardys and Hardies Past and Present because he was exceedingly proud of the Hardy name and because he signally embodied the strong characteristics of the Hardy Family. We are also grateful to him for discovering and preserving one of the most interesting legendary derivations of the origin of the Hardy name, which takes one back to the return of Edward the Black Prince of England after the English victory over the French at the Battle of Poitiers (1356) and to a banquet given by Edward to his prisoner John, King of France, whose cub-bearer so distinguished himself that his name was changed to Hardy. The full account is found elsewhere in this book.

ARTHUR SHERBURNE HARDY AND THE FIRST FOOTBALL CLUB OF AMERICA

Members of the Hardy Family, in America especially, will be interested to know that the family was represented on the first football club ever organized on a permanent basis, in this country. The Hardy member of this famous team was none other than Hon. Arthur Sherburne Hardy, one time professor at Dartmouth College, author and statesman. Since football has become such a popular pastime and since many Hardys, such as Samuel Hardy, the great tennis player, and others who might be mentioned, have been and still are great lovers of sport and athletics, it seems appropriate to give a brief account of the first football team of America.

The first football team of America was called "The Oneida Football Club of Boston, Mass." According to Winthrop Saltonstall Scudder, contributor to the New York Times, a historical sketch of this club has been deposited in the archives of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

The name "Oneida" no doubt was named for the Oneida tribe of Indians, formerly part of the Iroquois Confederation, although some residents of the city of Oneida, New York, which is located only a short distance from the home of the father of football, Gerritt Smith Miller, claim that the club was named in honor of their municipality.

The club was organized in 1862, Mr. Scudder has told us, and the team played on Boston Common. This was seven years before the game was played at Rutgers and Princeton colleges and thirteen years before the first football contest between Harvard and Yale. It is an interesting fact that most of the members of the team lived to be more than 80 years old. Arthur Sherburne Hardy, who died in 1930, was 82 years old at the time of his death.

A monument to the club was erected by the city of Boston in 1925. The original club included the following: Gerritt Smith Miller, founder and captain; Edward Lincoln Arnold, Edward Bowditch, Robert Means Lawrence, James DeWolf Lovett, William Lawrence, Francis Greenwood Peabody, Winthrop Saltonstall Scudder, Henry Cabot Lodge, Arthur Sherburne Hardy, Henry Parkman and Roger Wolcott. These young men were students in the early 60's at the Boston Public Latin and the Boston English High Schools. On 7 Nov. 1923 a tablet to honor Captain Miller, who was born at Peterboro, Madison County, New York, was dedicated at the Noble and Greenough School, Dedham, Mass. Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University and Bishop William Lawrence spoke at the exercises.

The Oneida Football Team was never defeated. Moreover, its goal line was never crossed. In contrast to newspaper publicity for the game today, when this club played a match 7 Nov. 1863, the Boston Daily Advertiser gave only five lines of space to the event.

THOMAS HARDY'S PREDICTION OF NEW YORK'S MASSIVE SKYLINES

Nearly seventy years ago, Thomas Hardy, England's famous novelist and poet, forecasted the construction of massive skylines in the world's leading metropolis, New York City. His predictions, which were made in connection with a national essay contest in England in 1868, were without parallel at the time they were uttered by this student of architecture and of building construction and his contemporaries received his pronouncements with scorn and unbelief.

An interesting article on this subject appeared in the 11 March 1928, issue of the New York Herald Tribune and is reproduced verbatim herewith, as follows:

Sixty years ago Thomas Hardy, English author, scientist, and disciple of destiny, whose funeral took place recently, pictured the construction of massive skylines in the world's leading metropolis, and predicted the giant vertical architecture extant in many of the country's cities today.

In fact, it was in Hardy's first literary effort that he gave expression to these theories which invaded his fertile mind during the practice of engineering and architecture. In an essay the young architect presaged the usage by builders in the distant future of the ancient baked clays, or polished faced materials, to insure permanency and beauteous ornamentation, as well as permit a type of construction thereto before unheard of, that of soaring skyscrapers.

Visions of limitless ensembles of graceful, towering structures reaching to the lower clouds were reflections of Thomas Hardy when in his middle twenties he travelled to Greece and Rome to study first hand the monumental institutions of the ancients. They had withstood thousands of years of combat with the elemental conditions that were proving ruinous to old buildings in England. The youthful scientist made careful drawings of them for his intended restoration plans, and at the same time conceived of the matter he concluded must necessarily appear in his first essay.

In this paper, therefore, which won him wide recognition because of its successful entry in a national essay contest, Hardy revolutionized notions regarding the selection of materials for building British institutions and at the same time ventured unhesitatingly to set down his definite conclusion that as living and commercial needs of great people grew more extensive so the builders of its quarters would revert more and more to the materials of the ancients.

By peculiar coincidence his success with the essay on restoration, including a discussion of the architect of the future, served to encourage Hardy's own reversion to literary endeavors. However, he always remained an ardent student and critic of engineering theories and practices. In "Memories of Church Restoration", written by Hardy some twenty years ago, he deplored vigorously the expenditures of millions in England in a nominal rehabilitation of dilapidations that had befallen buildings at the hands of time, weather and general neglect. What he called "the passion for restoration" in England met with many storms of disapproval from Hardy, who was as easily moved to the extreme practicality that such a science demands as to the delicacy which is famously apparent throughout his literature involving other subjects.

Hardy's predictions were without parallel at the time they were voiced, and even after New York's skyline had begun to develop and other cities showed signs of rising, Hardy's supporters in venturing fantasies of still greater progress were not many in the British dominions.

THOMAS HARDY, NOVELIST AND POET

By Carl J. Weber

Roberts Professor of English Literature at Colby College
Waterville, Maine

On the morning of 2 June, 1840, a birth occurred in a humble thatched cottage in southern England. The doctor in attendance pronounced the baby dead, but the family nurse rescued the infant, exclaiming, "Dead! Stop a minute! He's alive enough, sure!" By so narrow a margin was saved the genius who later made the name Hardy known all over the globe, wherever books are read.

Thomas Hardy was born in the hamlet known as Higher Bockhampton, a few miles from Dorchester, in Dorset. He spent an uneventful but observant and studious youth, and at sixteen was apprenticed to a Dorchester architect. For the next ten years he studied architecture both in Dorset and in London; but Gothic churches and old manor houses never succeeded in crowding books out of the central place in his affections, and by the time that he was twenty-five he was already trying his hand at the composition of verse. He continued this literary activity for several years, but finding no easy road to publication he turned his attention at the age of twenty-seven to the novel.

Upon the completion of his first attempt at novel-writing, which he called The Poor Man and the Lady, he sent his manuscript to a London publisher (Macmillan), who replied encouragingly but found too many faults in the work to be willing to print it. Hardy thereupon tried a second publisher and was fortunate enough to have his manuscript placed in the hands of George Meredith, the novelist. Meredith had an interview with Hardy and advised him not to print The Poor Man because of its social radicalism, but to write another novel "with more plot." Hardy took Meredith's advice and wrote Desperate Remedies, a complicated murder story which was published in 1871. This was the beginning of a quarter-century's activity as one of the most successful and influential novelists that England has produced.

Between 1871 and 1896 Hardy turned out fourteen full-length novels, besides numerous short stories and unpublished poems. Of the novels there are six which constitute his greatest work in prose ; these, arranged in the order of their appearance, are :

1. Far from the Madding Crowd (1874)
2. The Return of the Native (1878)
3. The Mayor of Casterbridge (1886)
4. The Woodlanders (1887)
5. Tess of the d'Urbervilles (1891)
6. Jude the Obscure (1896)

These six show not only Hardy's creative genius at its best but also its amazing variety. Far from the Madding Crowd presents Hardy's insight into peasant character and rustic humor at its best. The Return of the Native, with its famous account of Egdon Heath, exhibits the lyrical power of the author. The Mayor of Casterbridge is Hardy's best study of "a man of character", while The Woodlanders is, as he himself claimed, his best story; just as a story. Tess is his warmest and most sympathetic apology for buffeted humanity, and Jude is Hardy's greatest work for depth of poignant tragedy.

It was through this now-famous series of titles that Hardy revived an ancient geographical place-name and made the word "Wessex" more widely known than it had ever been in the days of King Alfred the Great. The modern Wessex consists of Dorset and the adjoining counties in southern England, and so faithful has Hardy's presentation of his native region been that tens of thousands of readers have come to know it with all the minute understanding of a topographer. No English poet, not even Wordsworth, has described nature with so attentive an eye. No English author, not even Thomson, has so ably conducted his readers through the varying English seasons. The Wessex of Thomas Hardy in all its moods and changes is more real today than Alfred's Wessex ever was.

Thomas Hardy possessed not only attentive eyes and sensitive ears but an alert mind as well. He lived in the age of Darwin and Huxley, of Herbert Spencer and Schopenhauer. He read their writings and recorded his response to them in his own books. His thoughts, mild and conservative enough to modern eyes, seemed dangerously radical to his Victorian readers; and the more outspoken Hardy became as time went on, the more he found censure and condemnation mixed with the praise given him.

A great cry went up over the publication of Tess in 1891; but when Jude appeared in 1895-96, the attacks became so bitter that Hardy, always over-sensitive to criticism, shrank from further attempt to find expression in fiction and returned to his first literary love, poetry. In 1898 he surprised the world by publishing a volume of verse; and although he was already 58 years old, he proceeded for the next thirty years to turn out volume after volume of poetry which has been variously appraised.

Some critics have called his verse harsh and unmusical, and have regretted that Hardy ever stopped writing novels. Others have found in his poems values and qualities which they rate higher than anything found in the prose. As usual, the truth is to be sought somewhere between the two extremes. Those who complain of inability to find music in Hardy's poetry must have stumbled upon a few admitted infelicities and stopped reading. Hardy, like Wordsworth, improves with careful selection. A reading of his best will show the same attentive eye for nature, the same sympathetic heart, the same sorrowing mind that the prose reveals. It will show, too, one of the most delicately sensitive souls which has anywhere left its record in English poetry. There is nothing anywhere quite like the Poems of 1912-13; and when a recent book of Christmas poetry was offered the public, one reviewer, before opening it, exclaimed: "If Thomas Hardy's The Oxen isn't here, I'll not approve of this anthology!"

Not every reader will care for the philosophical scepticism which finds expression in many of Hardy's poems, but no person can fail to recognize and admire the honesty and the sincerity of the poet. And in The Dynasts Thomas Hardy has left a gigantic epic on the subject of the Napoleonic wars.

Hardy's early success as a novelist had enabled him to withdraw from the career as an architect for which he had been preparing, and in 1874 he married Emma L. Gifford, whom he had met in Cornwall after going there to supervise the restoration of a dilapidated church. Ten years after his marriage, Hardy built himself a house near Dorchester, and from 1885 until his death his address remained "Max Gate." He had no children. Mrs. Hardy died in 1912 and was buried in the country churchyard beside the church which Hardy had attended as a boy. On her tombstone he had the words carved: "This for Remembrance."

In 1914 Hardy married again—his secretary, Florence Emily Dugdale, becoming the second Mrs. Hardy, who is still living. She it is who has received credit for making the poet's last years bright and serene; and whatever slight lifting of the clouds of melancholy one may trace in his later poems is to be credited to her.

Thomas Hardy died on 11 January 1928, shortly before attaining his 88th birthday. Burial in the Poet's Corner in Westminster Abbey was offered, but there were those who felt that an author whose heart had always been with Wessex people and with Wessex scenes ought not to be carried off to alien soil. It was accordingly decided to bury the poet's heart in the grave of his first wife, while his ashes were deposited in Westminster Abbey.

The New York Times account of the funeral read:

There were 3,000 admirers. They came from all countries. The crowd started to collect at mid-morning, forming a long queue past St. Margaret's and well towards the Gothic tower of the Houses of Parliament before the doors of the Abbey swung back to admit them. They stood in the rain, solemnly, without the levity of ordinary sightseers. They talked of Hardy's works and not entirely in English. They talked French, German and other tongues unknown to an American reporter. There were turbaned Hindus and there were numerous Americans, talking in the broadest Georgian, midwest, and Bostonian accents. Some came with bundles, few in mourning, and apparently the whole gathering belonged to the undistinguished masses of humanity whom Hardy loved and of whom he wrote. It was a concourse of his readers.

A simple stone now marks his last resting place, and the name of Thomas Hardy may be read next to that of Charles Dickens. Hardy's real memorial, however, is in the hearts of his admirers. The Wessex Novels have been translated into almost every European tongue, and Tess is known even in Japanese. German and French students have vied with American and English in studying the works of the Wessex genius, and Sweden has shown an amazing interest. Largely through subscriptions of American admirers a memorial stone has been recently erected on the edge of Egdon Heath, commemorating the fact that some of the novels were written in the nearby cottage—the one in which the novelist was born.

In America Hardy made his first appearance with the publication of Far from the Madding Crowd by Henry Holt in 1874. Within the past twenty years the increase in the widespread use of the Wessex Novels in American schools and colleges has greatly expanded the already large number of Hardy lovers. Great collections of his works have been assembled, both in libraries and in private hands; critical studies and dissertations in large number have been written about him, and guidebooks and illustrated descriptions of the country he made famous have become common. “The historian of Wessex”, as his friend J. M. Barrie called him, has already come to be regarded as a classic, and the name of Thomas Hardy is not infrequently associated with that of Shakespeare. It is certainly one of the ironies of fate that this modest and retiring son of rural Wessex should have been the one chosen to make the name Hardy most widely known on earth.

And as long as Thomas Hardy is remembered, Tess and Eustacia, Jude and Henchard, Gabriel Oak and Marty South will not be forgotten. And as for their author, he expressed his own musings on the future in a poem called “Afterwards”:

“When the Present has latched its postern behind my tremulous stay,
And the May month flaps its glad green leaves like wings,
Delicate-filmed as new-spun silk, will the neighbors say,
‘He was a man who used to notice such things?’” . . .

ADDRESS DELIVERED AT GROVELAND, MASS.,
SATURDAY, 12 AUGUST 1933

By William B. Ladd, Historian and Genealogist
In Connection With the Second Convocation of
The Hardy Family Association of America

Mr. President, Officers of the Hardy Family Association, and Friends! It is fitting that you should be welcomed to town by our Paul Revere bell. This bell is one of the few still in existence which was cast by Paul Revere. It has his name and the date, 1793, in raised letters upon its side. This bell was brought from Boston to Newburyport by water, then was placed on a cart and brought to East Bradford by oxen, owned and driven by Joshua Hardy of King Street in 1795.

Thomas Hardy, who came to Ipswich 300 years ago, in 1633, in 1650 was granted 1,000 acres of land extending from Rowley line to the Merrimack River. On a part of this land we are now standing. He came here with his five sons, cleared the land and built his house on land back of King Street. The Hardys grew and multiplied until in a few years there were more of that name than any other in town. They were a strong, progressive and ambitious people and did much in laying the foundation of the state, town, and Church. In 1726, when Bradford was divided into two parishes—this being called the “Second” or “East”—all of the Hardys resided here. In June, 1726, Daniel Hardy was appointed to call the first Parish Meeting. At the second meeting, William and Joseph Hardy were appointed on a committee to build a meeting house. At the third meeting, a committee was chosen to purchase land of Richard and Thomas Hardy on which to place said building. This land was across the Main Street, a little to the right of where we now stand. In 1727, this church was organized with forty-eight male members, seventeen of whom bore the name of Hardy. Six weeks later, fifty-three females were admitted by “Hand Vote”, bringing their letters from the First Church. Sixteen of these were Hardys, making thirty-three by that name out of the one hundred and one. Their creed was the old Calvinistic Doctrine held by the Congregational churches of their day and generation, which, thank God, has long ago given place to one which we believe is more in accord with the teachings of the Man of Galilee.

In the early days, many of this name emigrated into New Hampshire, to Hollis, Hudson, Pelham, Nottingham and to Hillsboro County. Two brothers, Jonathan and Joseph, sons of Deacon Timothy Hardy, about 1783, having placed their household goods upon an ox-cart, started for Hillsboro County. It took them between three and four days to arrive there. Later, four of the Hardy family, having accepted the Mormon Faith, emigrated from this town to Utah.

Many of this race lived to a great age and had strong powers of endurance. Jerusha Hardy, who from a child was a cripple, could not stand erect or walk, except with the aid of a small stool which she pushed in front of her. In this way she travelled many miles. One cold, raw day, in returning home, she took a short-cut through the fields and in passing through a gap in the stone wall caught the leg of her stool between two stones. Being unable to extricate it, she started to crawl on her hands and knees to her house nearly a quarter of a mile away. When part way there, she could go no further and, after a few hours, she was found and carried to her home where, the next morning, she passed away from exposure and exhaustion. This was in 1816 and she was between 89 and 90 years of age.

David Hardy, who lived in a house in the woods not far from what is now known as “Jewett’s Crossing” and who died in 1842, aged 97, tradition says, for more than twenty years walked through the summer’s heat and winter’s storm to this church without missing a single Sunday. The last time he came, when he was 92, was on a Communion Sunday. We have here today his great-grandson, Samuel Nelson, who is the oldest man in town and who will be 93 next month.

Gilbert P. and Eben J. Hardy, twins, after their eightieth birthdays, put on their old-fashioned skates and skated for a half hour on the smooth surface of our river. Eben J., who lived ten years after the death of his brother, when he was nearly ninety, skated for five minutes on the river.

Federal City, a sunny plot of land, which lies between here and Georgetown, on the south side of Salem Street, was the place where four families of Hardys built their homes and lived for many years. When I was a boy, the old well was still there and the purple lilac bushes also which were near where the houses stood. Very near, there was a large tree that was called the "Name Tree" and which is said to have more than five hundred names cut on its bark. The first name is said to have been that of Amos Hardy, cut there in 1744. Some years ago, when the wood was cut off, that tree was left standing, but storm and wind have done their work and the old tree is there no more.

Arthur's Seat is in the East part of the town. This name is spelled in the old records "Aster." It is said that on hot afternoons Arthur Hardy sat on this flat rock and watched the black snakes crawl out and go to sleep in the sunshine. Very often, having picked out the largest, he fired a bullet which ended that snake's career.

In Old Testament times, there was a prophet by the name of Ezra. We had a prophet by the same name—Ezra Hardy, who was born, lived, and died in the old Joseph Hardy house which you are soon to visit. One day while standing in front of the store here at my right, with a number of other men, he said: "The time will come when man will travel through the air." One of the men spoke up and said: "You talk like a fool; you'd better go home and dig your potatoes before they freeze in the ground." Ezra answered and said: "You may call me a fool, but there are those living who will see men fly as far as from Haverhill to Boston." He was not a very enterprising man, but did he not have vision? Although it did not extend to our Col. Lindbergh and to those who are flying around the world, still Ezra Hardy's prophecy came true.

Some years ago, there were two Hardy sisters who lived here on King Street. Neither of them ever married, although one was courted for more than forty years but her young man died before the wedding day was set. As these sisters sat in their front room one evening, one of them said to the other: "Sister, did you ever think it would be nice to have a bay window in this room so that it would be much more pleasant and so that we could see both up and down the street?" The other answered: "No, I never have thought of such a thing, but perhaps it would be a good idea." After thinking the matter over, they sent for a carpenter and had a fine bay window placed on the front of the house. After enjoying it for a few months, sitting there one evening, the younger said: "Sister Harriet, have you ever been sorry that we had this room changed and a bay room put in?" "Yes, Elizabeth, very sorry", was the reply of Sister Harriet who continued: "I think if our brother in looking down from his Heavenly Home should see how we have altered our father's house, he would think we were very frivolous for girls of our age." The next morning they sent for the same carpenter and had the bay window removed. The old house is still standing on the hill at the top of King Street.

These same sisters were in the habit of working a good deal in their garden and when first bloomers became the fashion they thought it would be nice to have some; so shortly after that, they secured them and went down to the pasture to pick berries in their new apparel. Very soon, their two cows came around a bush and the young cow began to prance. Then, they said, the old gray cow, with the melancholy eyes, turned and rebuked them for their misdemeanor. They returned to the house and removed their masculine attire. That evening, they ripped up the material and used it for other purposes. Do not think I have told these things to criticize or make fun of those people, for they were very fine ladies and were honored and respected by all who knew them.

This is a world of change. No longer the Hardys cultivate our lands and their flocks no longer graze on our pastures and hillsides. No more they emigrate from our town in the slow ox-team, but those of this generation step lightly into their automobiles and go as far in the hills of New Hampshire in less hours than it took days for their early ancestors. But we still have their thousand acres, their fields and their hills. Their rocks and their brooks still remain and, although the name of Hardy does not outnumber others in the town, last spring we elected one by that name, Fred Hardy, to the office of Select-man, the genial proprietor of our hardware store bears the name of Hardy (Harry Hardy), and we have one, a carpenter, whose workmanship cannot be surpassed by any in the State of the calling. We also have one in our midst who for many years was an exceptional organist in our church and whose sister's sweet soprano for a long time, until recently, was a leading voice in our choir.

Daniel Hardy, who was born in this place in 1773, attended our public schools, graduated from college, was ordained a Congregational minister, and held pastorates in a number of small towns in New Hampshire, was a lifelong member of this Church and died in Pelham, N. H., just one hundred years ago, in 1833. The last time he preached here was two years before his death. I will close with a quotation from the sermon that he then preached: "Might does not make right and the man who is in the minority and is true to himself and true to his God is the man who, in the end, will win."

MIKADO MEETS TAR OF PERRY'S SHIP²

He Helped Open Port Sixty Years Ago

Only Survivor of Flagship Which Forced Empire to Trade. Walks Boat's Deck Again

William S. Hardy was a sailor of the old school, of the days of 1853, when American ships of commerce bore the flag to every port on the seven seas, when the grim-looking battleship put in to ports, hoisted the flag to the topmast, and investigated conditions on general principles.

In those days there were no Chinese crews, and the almond-eyed Jap had not yet strayed beyond his native island heath far off in the Yellow Sea, and the Yankee curiosity demanded to know what the little yellow man had to barter. But the Japs had wanted to have nothing to do with the fighting type of adventurers who came to trade from America, and boycotted them, and locked their ports against the world.

The Yankee traders complained to their Government that the Japs had locked them out, so the Government ordered Admiral Perry to investigate "on general principles."

Young William S. Hardy about this time longed for some adventure at sea, and joined the Navy, and sailed away to Tokio on the flagship Susquehanna. At Tokio Admiral Perry ordered the Japanese government to either open the port and all others to the nations to trade or he would reduce the city to ruins. The Japs looked at the big, businesslike guns, then at their fair city, and opened the port to world trade. William S. Hardy was back of one of the guns ready to start the bombardment had the Japs refused Perry's order. This happened sixty years ago, but the Japs have since considered Admiral Perry's act a blessing.

On 17 Nov. 1917 there was a celebration in commemoration of Perry's act, and a large monument was unveiled in honor of the noted American admiral. Sailor Hardy, the only survivor of the flagship, happened to be revisiting Japan, and when it became known that he was in Tokio, he was sought out, dressed again in a "jackie's" uniform and taken to Perry's old flagship, the Susquehanna, where he again trod the decks.

Roland S. Morris, United States ambassador to Japan, heard of him and insisted upon taking him to see the Emperor. Mr. Hardy had no formal clothes, so the wardrobes of the city of Yokohama were ransacked until he was outfitted with a frock coat and silk hat. Then as he stood before the ruler of Japan, it was discovered that the bell-shaped bottoms of his "jackie's" pants were sticking below the dress trousers. Also, his sailor's blouse was in evidence around the neck. But he came back from the party happy that he was showered with such honors, and the last one of the old crowd left.

THE RAMBLER³

Rev. Anthony Colby Hardy, a great uncle to Mrs. N. A. H. Smith, Mrs. C. P. Webster, Mrs. E. D. Currier and Mrs. E. Q. Sanborn of this city (Franklin, N. H.), was the author of an article on "Hard Times" contributed to the Staccato, a paper published in Fisherville, now Penacook, on 2 May 1877. Mrs. Webster came across the paper the other day and was interested in it not only because of the relationship of the writer to her family, but because the sentiments expressed concerning the causes and remedies for the distresses of the people of that day are so applicable to conditions today. There is a decidedly familiar ring to many phrases in the old editorial-inflated currency, reckless speculation, economy, retrenchment, etc., etc.

Rev. Anthony Colby Hardy was the youngest of 15 children of Daniel and Betsey Packard Hardy and was born in Hebron on 13 Oct. 1828. He was named for Anthony Colby, one time the governor of New Hampshire, who was a personal friend of Daniel Hardy. Anthony Colby's father built the beautiful colonial house now standing on New London Hill and it is their family who have done so much for the support of Colby College, Colby Academy and other institutions of learning. Anthony Colby Hardy's son, Walter Hardy, was a lawyer, associated for some years with Hon. E. B. S. Sanborn of this city. The article follows:

"HARD TIMES

"This cry is universal, and has now been continued for an unprecedented length of time. The poor are suffering to the verge of destitution; the rich are in the midst of cares and fears, such as they never knew before—manufacturer and operative, tradesman and customer, are alike in suffering. We venture the assertion that not one manufactory in twenty-five, whether cotton, woolen, iron, wood or leather, is paying its expenses, even at the cut down prices that are paid. Workmen are nearly starving, and strikes are inaugurating all over the land. These only add to the difficulties and suffering. If manufacturers cannot pay but half the usual wages, then workmen should gratefully receive that rather than nothing. If manufacturers and corporations were cutting down the pay of their workmen in order to add to their ill-gotten gains, then we believe that workmen should defend themselves, for "the laborer is worthy of his hire." But every thinking and observing laborer knows that such is not the case now, but that this grip holds both the employer and employee, capitalist and laborer alike. We naturally ask . . . three questions. . . .

"What is the cause? We answer: An inflated currency, war prices, inordinate and reckless speculation, and the corrupt and demoralizing habits and practices that were introduced by, and follow in the trail of war, where 'might makes right.'

"What cure can be applied? Economy and retrenchment. We live too fast—plainer and coarser food would be better and healthier for us all. . . . We are building too extravagantly, and furnishing extravagantly. We are putting thousands of dollars into churches, schoolhouses and other public buildings, that are mere useless display of an extravagance, costly to build and costly to keep. We are paying too high salaries for professional services. A man who puts capital into education and culture, should receive a proportionate pay therefor, but it does not follow that because he has so used his capital that he should receive a thousand per cent thereon. Labor of both brain and muscle should receive its proper remuneration; but $10,000 a year for running a Life Insurance company and 75 cents per day for him who toils at the shovel and hoe, or at the loom or bench, is an unjust division. . . .

"Men in positions of trust and power should be held to a strict account. Political jobbery and speculative rascality should not only be talked about as wrong, but punished. Honesty and virtue have not yet forsaken the world, but honest men have let party prejudices and business affiliations hamper and trammel them, while the rogues have been reaping a harvest. It is not only a time for men to dare to do right, but to make others do so, too. We feel that the really great political issue of the day is Honesty and Economy.

". . . There are too many idlers and loafers . . . men who are willing to do business if there is no work in it—no back-ache, no sweat, no dirt. This is a world of dirt, and he whose face and hands are grimed with the dirt of honest toil is a thousand fold more of a man, and gentleman than he, who with delicate hands and immaculate linen eats the bread of idleness, because he is a gentleman, and too delicate to work. The weakest and most delicate part of him is where his brains and heart should be. Faugh! There should be a law to take all such, and their brethren, the tramps, who patrol the country as beggars, and put them to work and keep them at it.

"When shall we see good times, again? When we 'cut our garments according to our cloth.' When our income shall equal our expenses. When this mania for speculation is passed, and business conducted on a legitimate basis. When rascality is allowed to be, and is punished as a crime. When to be usefully employed is reckoned honorable, and idleness considered a disgrace. When the people shall come to know that manhood or womanhood is of infinitely more value than money, and that the Grand Commandments are not simply the heritage of the church, but are the rich inheritance of all men and of all women."

THE SMALLPOX INCIDENT OF GROVELAND, MASS.

Late in the spring of 1777 a stranger in search of employment called at the home of Deacon Timothy Hardy of Groveland, Mass. It was late in the day, and the stranger was hungry and weary. Mr. Hardy, who was noted for his kindness and for his hospitality, was unable to provide a job for the visitor, but gave his guest a substantial evening meal, and permitted him to lodge for the night in his barn. The next day Deacon Hardy went to the barn to perform the usual chores, only to find that he had a very sick patient on his hands. The stranger grew rapidly worse, and Mr. Hardy cared for him as well as he could, but without success, for it was soon discovered that the man had smallpox.

Death came to the stricken traveler, and Deacon Timothy Hardy called in the minister of his church, so that the deceased might have the benefits of proper burial. The minister declined to act, however, fearing that he might take the dreaded disease. Similarly Deacon Balch declined to conduct the funeral service, and Mr. Hardy himself was obliged to officiate.

In a few days, Jeremiah Hardy, a cousin of Deacon Timothy Hardy, became a victim of smallpox, having met the stranger before his death. Then followed in rapid succession deaths of other Hardys from the same disease, and for a time the entire community was greatly alarmed lest the scourge might spread into all the homes of Groveland. The first death, that of Jeremiah Hardy, occurred 29 May 1777 and the last occurred 28 June 1777, the victim being David Marden. Among the victims was a physician, Dr. John Tenney.

In 1896 the citizens of Groveland erected a monument in School Street in memory of those who died of the disease of smallpox, and the inscription contains the following names with dates of the respective deaths indicated:

JEREMIAH HARDY, MAY 29; MARY, WIFE OF DEACON
TIMOTHY HARDY, JUNE 21; ABNER AND ELIZABETH, SON AND DAUGHTER OF JEREMIAH HARDY, JUNE 22; WILLIAM
GREENOUGH, ESQ., JUNE 23; DR. JOHN TENNEY, JUNE 24; DEACON TIMOTHY HARDY, JUNE 27; DAVID MARDEN, JUNE 28.

ASH, MACNEIL AND MOORE (MORE, MOOAR) TRADITIONS

Through various branches of the Hardy Family it has been discovered that many descendents of the first Hardys to come to this country claim very interesting ancestral backgrounds along maternal lines. The inter-marriages of the Hardys with the famous families of Adams, Abbott, Clement, Gage, Page, Taylor, Potter, Stone, Dudley, Savory, etc., might be discussed at length as volumes could be written concerning them. Through descendants of Ezekiel Hardy of Andover, Mass., we have learned some interesting facts about the allied families of Ash, MacNeil and Moore. Ezekiel (6) Hardy, who was son of Ezekiel (5) and Sarah (Mooar) Hardy, had a daughter Amelia (Emily), who married John Luke, whose mother was an Ash. It will be of interest then, perhaps, to relate first traditions connected with the Ash family.

The family of Ash, or Ashe, has an ancient Anglo-Saxon background, said to have descended from Aesca, the son of Hengest and Vortigern's daughter, mention of whom is made in Green's History of the Making of England by the Saxons. In the seventh century it is stated that this family settled in the Isle of Thanet. They founded the village of Assh, which still remains in a habitable condition. Descendants later settled in the counties of Cavan, Roscommon and Londonderry in Ireland. In the seventeenth century, representatives of the Ash family were found in the North of Ireland. In a sense, the Ash family is more Irish than English. For nearly two hundred years there was an almost unbroken succession in the family of Ash in the parliamentary representation of Trim.

In 1603 Thomas Ash was knighted by Sir George Carew. Many branches of the original Ash family formed marriage alliances with several of the leading houses of the United Kingdom, including the highest ranks of the landed gentry and of the aristocracy of Great Britain, including one Lady MacNeil.

According to some Ash Family authorities, one branch originated in Normandy, where the patronymic was Ash A' Court. It is said that upon the invasion of England by William the Conqueror the chief of this family was given two estates, one in Wiltshire, and the other in Kent. A descendant, Lovet Ashe, went to Ireland and was head of a regiment under the king of England. For his loyalty to the king, he was given a grant of land in the county of Tipperary and the place was called Ashe Grove.

The Lady MacNeil mentioned above was evidently a member of the Scottish Clan MacNeil, one of the oldest clans in the Highlands of Scotland, and descended from Niall, king of Ireland in the year 379. In 1030, it is said, descendants of that monarch went to the Isle of Barra, where they established a clan government which remained practically independent for several centuries. In 1495 King James "Vended the superiority of the Lords of the Isles." For the next two hundred years, the MacNeils, in common with other Highland clans, experienced turbulent times and were engaged in constant warfare.

Reference has already been made to Ezekiel (5) Hardy of Andover, Mass. He married Sarah Mooar, a descendant of another ancient and interesting family. It should be pointed out that the spelling Mooar is a deviation from the more common forms of Moore and More, but represents the same family. The Moore name came into England with William the Conqueror in 1066. It dates back at least to 1016, and perhaps earlier, for at that time Janet, daughter of Sir Hugh de Dangieltown, married Sir Adam More of Rowallan and became the ancestor of Elizabeth More, who in 1347 married King Robert of Scotland, from whom sprang the long line of Stuart monarchs. The Sarah Mooar who married Ezekiel (5) Hardy of Andover, Mass., is said to have descended from Sir Adam More, and this no doubt accounts for a tradition among certain Hardy descendants that they could claim family relationship with Mary, Queen of Scots.⁴

4. The authors are indebted to Mrs. Daniel Eugene Luke of Quincy, Mass., for much of the material used in connection with the traditions narrated above.

HARDYS IN AMERICAN AFFAIRS OF THE SEA

American Hardys, especially those of the earlier generations, reveal the hereditary relationship with English Hardys by their love of the sea and the lure of adventure. Much of decided interest might be written on the subject.

John Hardy, pioneer ancestor, of Salem, Mass., and his descendants were mariners or at least deeply interested in marine affairs. At various times they were the owners of the largest fleets of fishing boats and were prominent merchantmen of the Salem port. According to James Duncan Phillips, author of Salem in the Seventeenth Century (page 184), John Hardy in 1650 had probably the largest fleet of vessels of all ship owners of Salem at that time. In the family records are numerous references to members of the family as "master of vessels" or "a young man of excellent character lost at sea." Fishing, especially off the Grand Banks, became one of the largest and most lucrative industries of New England, and many Hardys were identified with it. Benjamin Pickman, a Hardy descendant, was one of the wealthiest and most prominent of these. He, next to Col. Peperell, was the largest contributor to and the most prominent leader in the successful siege of Louisburg in 1745. But Hardys in Boston, Portland, Portsmouth and other seaports were likewise identified with affairs of the sea.

In this connection it is of interest to note a quotation from the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, Vol. 47, page 252: "Thomas Hardy, sailor, of Scotland deposed, 1 Nov. 1630, aged 24." To the reference this is added: "Note this agrees remarkably with Thomas Hardy of Haverhill, New England, who was 72 in 1677." The English Court of Admiralty from 1620 to 1700 examined thousands of men, especially seamen and immigrants to the American colonies, to provide data and witnesses for the settlement of litigations which might arise between the colonists and the mother country. These "dispositions", numbering thousands of names, are preserved in some forty registers of folio size and great thickness.

The Alpheus Hardy family has a remarkable record of seafaring men. The New England ancestor, Josiah Hardy, was a sea captain who came from Norfolk, Virginia, in 1776 and settled in Chatham, Mass. Ten years later he, with three companions, sailed for Boston in the middle of December. The ship was wrecked and was found in April near Truro, on the Cape, with the crew all frozen. His two daughters married sea captains, and his sons were seamen. From this family have come some of the most prominent leaders of marine affairs in New England. The two Alpheus Hardys, father and son, were the builders and owners of fleets of merchantmen sailing from the Boston port.

One large branch of the Hardy Family settled in the highlands of New Hampshire. A member of this group made an interesting discovery. Well acquainted with the people of Nantucket, Gloucester and other seafaring centers, he found over fifty words in common usage among the Hardys of the Granite State, identical with those in use among mariners. Under further investigation he found this marine vocabulary alone characteristic of the Hardy group and its affiliations, and that it distinguished other Hardy families as well in remote parts of the country.

The Hardys, distinguished for centuries in English marine and naval affairs, were naturally profoundly interested in early American exploration. Add to this the lure of adventure, and the historian finds many Hardys identified with the exploration and settlement of the original states. Of the many historical incidents that might be mentioned only two will be presented.

In Vol. 3, page 9 of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, there is an extended reference to and a quotation from Hakluyt's Voyages. Hakluyt wrote five volumes, the first being published in 1589. He vouches for the truths of these voyages, the account of which he took from the lips of Master Hore. It is a matter of regret that space will not permit a direct quotation at length in the quaint language of the author. In the year 1536, Master Hore of London, "a man of goodly station and great courage and give to the study of cosmographie—encouraged divers gentlemen and others, being assisted by the king's favor and countenance who accompanied him in a voyage of discoveries in the northwest parts of America." The author then states that by Master Hore's persuasion he secured a very large group of distinguished men "desirous to see strange things of the world very willingly entered into action with him some of whose names were as follows." Early in this list, which includes only the most distinguished adventurers, is MASTER HARDY. While their discoveries were valuable and interesting, it should be said that after months of exploration, "they suffered great hardship, and on their return to England were scarcely recognized by their friends."

The second incident has a very direct relationship to our Hardy history. In 1611 Captain Edward Hardy and Nicholas Hobson sailed from north Virginia in exploration of the upper Atlantic seaboard. They went ashore at Agawam, where in 1633 Thomas Hardy was one of the first settlers. They found there an Indian encampment, and were entertained by the Indians with pleasing hospitality. They were greatly pleased with the location, and these facts were reported to their friends in Great Britain. Captain John Smith, the famous explorer, three years later exploring the same section and drafting a map of the coast, mentions with approval the findings of Capt. Hardy. It may be nothing but a coincidence, but one inclines to the opinion that there may have been some direct connection between Capt. Hardy and his enthusiastic description of Agawam and the urge which brought Thomas and John Hardy to this country and caused them both to settle, the one in Agawam, and the other near by at Salem, Mass.

CHAPTER VI

THE HARDY FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

In 1930, at the instigation of Dr. H. Claude Hardy, Superintendent of Schools of White Plains, New York, and of Dr. Edwin Noah Hardy, Executive Secretary, American Tract Society, of Greenwich, Conn., the Hardy Family Association of America was organized at Hollis, New Hampshire. The Association meets once in two years, usually during the month of August. The second meeting was postponed until the summer of 1933, when it was held at Ipswich, Mass., in order to coincide with the tercentenary of the founding of that community, since Thomas Hardy, who came to this country with Governor Winthrop in 1630, was one of the twelve men chosen to locate there with Governor Winthrop's son. At the time of going to press with this book, it is planned to have a third meeting, Saturday, 24 August 1935, at Salem, Mass., where Thomas Hardy's brother, John, settled. Below are given reproductions of the newspaper accounts of the two meetings held at Hollis and Ipswich. Following the newspaper accounts will be found the names of the officers and Regional Representatives of the Association. The newspaper write-ups were as follows:

HARDY FAMILY REUNION AT HOLLIS BICENTENNIAL

Elaborate Program Carried Out on Saturday Despite Storm—Tercentenary of Organization

(Reprinted from Nashua Telegram)

Hollis, Aug. 25, 1930.

In spite of the downpour of rain all day, 225 people, members of the Hardy Family which has been identified with the history of New England and the South for the past 300 years, were present to enjoy an elaborate tercentenary celebration at Hollis Saturday, commemorating the arrival of Thomas Hardy and his brother John with Governor Winthrop in 1630. Tradition has it that three brothers came to America originally, the third settling in the South. The third brother was evidently George Hardy of the Isle of Wight County, Virginia, who was a very prominent property owner and political leader there in 1635. His descendants were represented at the Hollis meeting Saturday in the persons of Lamar and Toney Hardy, prominent attorneys of New York City. The largest number of Hardys present, however, were direct descendants of Thomas Hardy and a few who claimed to be of the John Hardy line. Other Hardys attending were descendants of Hardys who came to America about 1720, but distantly related to the original settlers.

The Hardy Family, according to H. Claude Hardy, secretary-treasurer of the newly organized Hardy Family Association, originated in Normandy, where several names bearing the patronymic appeared on the Hundred Rolls in the Eleventh Century. The Hardys entered England with William the Conqueror in 1066 and the family has come to be known as English. All Hardys in the United States and Canada have come directly from the British Isles or Northern France.

Hollis has probably been the home of more Hardys than any other town in New Hampshire. Phineas Hardy, great-grandson of Thomas of Massachusetts Bay Colony, was one of the first settlers of Hollis and his descendants were very numerous, which accounts for the meeting at this historic town this year in connection with the 200th anniversary. Phineas located in Hollis in 1751 and one of the first features of the gathering Saturday was a pilgrimage by auto to visit the house which he built in 1764, a half-mile north of the present village. At the same time a visit was made to the house erected by Jesse Hardy, son of Phineas. Harold Hardy, a descendant of Jesse Hardy, and proprietor of the famous Brookside Fruit Farm, received the visitors at his estate and explained the various projects carried on on his farm.

A reception was held at the village church at 5 o'clock with the Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Noah Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. H. Claude Hardy, Dr. J. Hazen Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Chester S. Hardy and Mrs. Lydia Hardy Jewett in the receiving line.

A complimentary banquet was held at the Town Hall at 6 o'clock, sponsored by George E. Hardy of Englewood, N. J., and served by the ladies of the Hollis Community Church. Music was furnished at the banquet by Mrs. Hazel Stark Mann, violinist, and Mrs. Sarah Lawrence, accompanist.

The post-prandial exercises took place in Hardy Parish Hall in the basement of the church with Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy presiding. An historical address was delivered by Judge Frederick A. Hubbard of Greenwich, Conn., a friend and relative of the Hardy Family by marriage.

Brief addresses were made by Lamar Hardy of New York City; H. Claude Hardy of White Plains, N. Y.; Dr. J. Hazen Hardy of New York City; George W. Hardy of Hollis; Dr. James T. Hardy of Brooklyn, N. Y.; David Hardy of Watertown, N. Y.; Charles Ira Hardy of Manchester, N. H., and Henry C. Dexter of Black River, N. Y. Shirley Newton Hardy, soprano soloist, of White Plains, N. Y., rendered four delightful solos to the great enjoyment of the assembly.

H. Claude Hardy, secretary-treasurer, read several letters of greeting and regrets from Hardys all over the United States and Canada at not being able to attend the convocation.

A Constitution of the Hardy Family Association was presented by Rodney C. Hardy, of Cleveland, Ohio, and was unanimously adopted. The constitution adopted is as follows:

HARDY FAMILY ASSOCIATION VISITS OLD ENVIRONS

Holds Biennial Reunion at Ipswich

(Reprinted from the Haverhill Gazette)

The second convocation of the Hardy Family Association of America was held in the Community House at Ipswich, Saturday, 12 Aug. 1933. Ipswich was chosen as the place of the reunion this year, it being the tercentenary commemorating the arrival of the colonists, Thomas Hardy and John Winthrop, Jr., with 11 others, at Ipswich.

The Hardy Family Association of America was founded in 1930 through the efforts of the honorary president, George E. Hardy, of Hodenpyl, Hardy & Co., of New York City; Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph.D., of Greenwich, Conn., executive secretary of the American Tract Society, president of the association; and H. Claude Hardy, a prominent educator of the day, and superintendent of the schools of White Plains, N. Y., who is the secretary and treasurer of the association.

The association has a membership of about 230 and considering its youth, is the largest family association in America. The first meeting was held three years ago at Hollis, N. H., which, next to Groveland, had the largest settlement of Hardys.

Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy and Dr. H. Claude Hardy and George E. Hardy are direct descendants of Thomas Hardy, who arrived at Boston from England with John Winthrop, Jr., and 11 others during the spring of 1633. Thomas Hardy proceeded up the Agawam River and settled at what is now Ipswich, the name having been changed from Agawam during that year. Later Thomas Hardy obtained a grant of 1,000 acres in the part of Rowley which is now Groveland. Thomas Hardy's first wife was Lydia, probably born in England, the mother of his five sons, Thomas, Joseph, John, Jacob and William. His second wife was Ann.

Dr. H. Claude Hardy descended from Reuben, the son of Thomas and Martha Hardy, and his son, Moody, settled in Goffstown, N. H. Rev.

Edwin Noah Hardy was descended from Phineas, brother of Reuben, and he settled in Hollis, N. H. In addition to the Thomas Hardy descendants, it is assumed that there were two other first family lines, John Hardy, who settled at Salem, and Richard Hardy, who settled in Concord, and later went to Stamford, Conn.

The convocation this year took the form of a pilgrimage led by Fred R. Hardy, of Groveland, as marshal and guide. Mr. Hardy, a direct descendant of Thomas Hardy, and a member of the association, is instructor of agricultural engineering at the Essex County Agricultural School at Hathorne, and a member of the board of selectmen at Groveland. Mr. Hardy arranged with Chief of Police William T. Shanahan of Groveland and the state police for a clear way for the pilgrimage of about 50 automobiles. Chief Shanahan handled the traffic at South Groveland, former Chief Nelson at Groveland, and the state police on the turnpike.

The pilgrimage started at Bradford, in front of the First Congregational church. The party proceeded through Salem Street past the old Bradford burying ground, where Thomas Hardy was buried in 1702, and the site of the first Bradford meeting house, through South Groveland continuing to the smallpox cemetery on School Street. The party stopped here and Fred R. Hardy read the following inscription from the monument, erected by the Town of Groveland in 1896, marking the spot and in memory of those who died of smallpox in 1777:

"Jeremiah Hardy, May 29; Mary, wife of Deacon Timothy Hardy, June 21; Abner and Elizabeth, son and daughter of Jeremiah Hardy, June 22; William Greenough, Esq., June 23; Dr. John Tenney, June 24; Deacon Timothy Hardy, June 27; David Marden, June 28."

Tradition says that a stranger passing through town slept in Timothy Hardy's barn, was taken ill and later died of a disease which was later diagnosed as smallpox. Deacon Timothy Hardy, upon the refusal of Deacon Balch to officiate, conducted the funeral. The Hardy family then fell victims of the disease, as shown by the inscription.

Then the party proceeded through Groveland, passed the hardware store of Harry W. Hardy, a member of the Hardy family, to Perry Park in front of the Congregational church. Nearing the church the party was greeted by the ringing of the historic Paul Revere bell, one of about four now in existence which were cast by Paul Revere in the foundry at Boston in 1793. The bell was transported to Newburyport by a sailing vessel and hauled to the church in an ox cart, owned and driven by Joshua Hardy of King Street.

Greetings, consisting in part of unusual legends concerning the Hardy Family, were extended by the local historian, William B. Ladd. Mr. Ladd told of both the building of the meeting house in 1726, and of the organization of the church in 1727. The first meeting was called by Daniel Hardy, and a committee was appointed to erect a meeting house. At the next meeting, which was called by William and Joseph Hardy, another committee was appointed to purchase land on which to erect said meeting house. This building was erected in 1726, and used until 1796, when it was torn down and the present church was built. The original membership of the church consisted of 48 male members of which 17 were Hardys. Six weeks later 53 women became members by hand vote, and of these, 16 were Hardys, making the total membership 101, of which 33 were Hardys. Mr. Ladd related several legends emphasizing the sturdiness of the descendants of Thomas Hardy. Of Jerusha, a daughter of Benjamin, who, having been crippled, due to having been dropped when an infant by her father, walked all through life with the aid of a stool up to the age of 90. Another one, David Hardy, who lived near Jewett's Crossing, and who walked the long distance regularly, through storms of winter and the heat of summer, to attend church, until about 90 years old.

Mr. Ladd stated that later many of the Hardys emigrated to small New Hampshire towns, including Pelham, Hudson, and Hollis, and some of them accepted the Mormon doctrine and emigrated to Salt Lake City, Utah.

Among the local people assembled to greet the party at the Groveland church were Samuel H. Nelson, 93 years old, the oldest man in Groveland, and holder of the Boston Post cane, and a grandson of David Hardy; also Mr. Nelson's son, George L. Nelson, Miss Mary Hardy, Walter T. Hardy and Mrs. Myron A. Hardy.

The pilgrimage then proceeded to the Joseph Hardy house on King Street, Groveland. This house, as shown by the original date marks, was built in 1676, in about the center of the original Thomas Hardy grant, by Joseph Hardy, and is now occupied by Lawrence Hardy, direct descendant of Joseph.

Here was born, lived and died, the Hardy prophet, Ezra, grandson of Joseph, who, according to the story related by Mr. Ladd, prophesied that during the time of his generation, man would fly as far as Boston.

At this point, the president of the association, the Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, made a few remarks, and stated that it was hoped that some time the association would be able to acquire the historical house.

Proceeding from the Joseph Hardy house along King Street, past the house of Joshua Hardy, he who carted the Paul Revere bell from Newburyport; to Georgetown, past the cemetery where many of the Hardy descendants are buried, passing through the town, where only a few of the descendants are now living, including William Hardy and Walter Hardy, into Rowley.

In Rowley a short stop was made at the site of the home of Gorham Hale Hardy, grandfather of Fred R. Hardy, of Groveland. Passing the Ezekiel Rogers School reminded the pilgrims that the school was named for Ezekiel Rogers, who owned the original grant, known as the Ezekiel Rogers plantation, covering what is now Rowley, Georgetown, Bradford and Groveland. In 1639 this grant was incorporated as the town of Rowley. In 1726 Bradford was divided into two parishes and in 1850 Groveland was incorporated as a town and set apart from Bradford.

Arriving at Ipswich, the party made its headquarters at the Whipple house by courtesy of the Ipswich Historical Society. The Whipple house was built in 1640, from timber cut on the lot, and it was moved from the original site at Mill Lane to the present location, about six years ago. At these headquarters the members were given an opportunity of meeting the registration committee, Fred N. Hardy, superintendent of schools at Port Allegany, Pa., the chairman of the committee, and the Misses Miriam and Christine Hardy, of Greenwich, Conn., daughters of Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, the other members of the committee, for the purpose of registration and payment of dues.

The Whipple house, filled with a beautiful and rare collection of antiques, was inspected by the members.

A reception was held at the Ipswich Community House, followed by a chicken dinner. The invocation was given by Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy.

The post-prandial program and business session was called to order by the president of the association, Rev. Mr. Hardy, who conducted the meeting. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read by Dr. H. Claude Hardy, who also gave a short talk, and read the Latin and French quotations appearing on the unique charter membership certificates, presented to each member registering. These certificates were designed by Dr. Hardy, and he related the legends in connection with these quotations. One of the quotations reads, "Thou Art a Hardie, thou art, so Hardie Thou Shalt Be"; another appearing on a Hardy coat-of-arms, reads, "From now on Thou Shalt be a Hardie."

Dr. H. Claude Hardy spoke briefly of the book entitled Hardys, Past and Present, which he, with the collaboration of Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, is preparing for publication.

Greetings were received from absent members of the Hardy Family Association. Remarks were heard from Rev. Frederick Wilson and Rev. Arthur Johnson, both of Ipswich. Other speakers included George E. Hardy, the honorary president, of New York City; James Hardy, M.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Walter A. Hardy, of Fitchburg; Charles A. Hardy, Treasurer of the City of Arlington; Dr. John Ira Hardy of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.; Amos Everett Jewett and Ralph Burnham, local historians, of Ipswich, spoke interestingly on the Hardy Forebears. Carl H. Nordstrom, artist, who gave a special exhibition of his paintings at the Burnham Galleries, near the Whipple house, gave a short talk.

The report of the nominating committee was read and accepted and the following officers were elected for the ensuing two years, at which time the next meeting will be held, probably at Groveland: George E. Hardy, honorary president, New York City; Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph.D., president of the association, Greenwich, Conn.; Lamar Hardy, LL.D., first vice-president, New York City; H. Claude Hardy, Ph.D., secretary-treasurer, White Plains, N. Y.; E. A. Hardy, D.Paed., second vice-president, Toronto, Canada; Cora Belle Hardy Calvert, third vice-president, Lincoln, Nebraska; board of government—Chester S. Hardy, Fitchburg; J. Hazen Hardy, D.D.S., New York City; George W. Hardy, Hollis, N. H.; Anton Hardy, Englewood, N. H.; Lydia Hardy Jewett, Melrose.

"The Hardy Clan Song," composed by Dr. H. Claude Hardy, secretary and treasurer of the association, was sung during dinner at the close of the business session, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. H. Claude Hardy. The words follow:

HARDY CLAN, THE HARDY CLAN
(Tune: "Maryland, My Maryland")

I hear afar a lusty cheer,
"Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!"
Proud cousins, sires of many a year,
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!
They come from hills, from plains and dales
Of our fair land; American,
To hear again ancestral tales.
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!

Brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts,
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!
A noble band the chorus chants:
"Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!"
We proudly boast a sturdy name
And strive to foster, if we can,
A heritage that's free from shame.
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!

The altar fires we build anew,
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!
We clasp the hand, strong, faithful, true,
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!
And pledge to aid our country's weal;
For truth and justice, every man
Will take a stand as firm as steel.
Hardy Clan, the Hardy Clan!

A marker, in the form of a bronze tablet, commemorating the settlement of Thomas Hardy at Ipswich, the gift of the family of Walter A. Hardy & Sons, of Fitchburg, who also made the marker, was unveiled by Mrs. Carrie Hardy Butterfield of Fitchburg. The marker bears the following inscription:

CHAPTER VII

MAJOR JONAS HARDY FAMILY

1. MAJOR JONAS HARDY, born in England about 1720; died 1757; married daughter of an Indian Chief.

Major Jonas Hardy is said to have been a cousin of the Hardys of Bradford, Mass., descendants of Thomas Hardy, who was one of the twelve men especially chosen by Governor John Winthrop to settle Agawam, now Ipswich, Massachusetts, in the spring of 1633.¹ The Christian name Jonas suggests a possible relationship to the Hardys of Hull, England, since that was a familiar name among the Hardys of that city.²

Major Jonas Hardy was an officer in the British Army and was sent to America to help the colonists in their struggles against the French and Indian allies. He was assigned to the garrison at Boston, Mass., and soon after coming to this country as a young man, met and married the daughter of an Indian Chief of one of the six tribes allied with England.

He was first a Captain in the British Army, and later promoted to Major because of his excellent record. He was with Colonel Munro at Fort William Henry when that strategic fort was attacked by the French under Colonel Montcalm. It will be remembered that the garrison at Fort William Henry repulsed repeatedly attacks of the enemy, but finally was obliged to capitulate on Montcalm's agreement of a safe escort to Fort Edward. The Indians in Montcalm's army, including the Hurons, the fiercest of all the Indian Tribes, failed to keep the agreement, probably due to the influence of whiskey which they had obtained in some secret manner from the British themselves, and attacked the defenseless troops. Men, women and children were massacred in great numbers. Among the victims was Major Jonas Hardy.

Major Jonas Hardy was a popular army officer, and his friends, fearing for the safety of his wife and two small sons, arranged to place them in the home of a relative at Bradford, Mass., a Mr. Hardy having the same Christian name as the deceased husband and father, viz., Jonas.

Children, probably born near Andover, Mass.:

- 2* i. JONAS, JR.², b. 1750; m. 1st, at Bradford, Mass., 5 Aug. 1773, MOLLY HARDY; m. 2nd, at Bradford, Feb., 1780, MEHITABLE HARDY.
- 3* ii. OLIVER², b. 1753; m. at Weare, N. H., 15 Nov. 1778, MRS. ESTHER (JOHNSON) WHITTAKER.

2. JONAS² HARDY (*Major Jonas*¹), born probably at Andover, Mass., 1750. He married twice. He married, first, at Bradford, Mass., 5 Aug. 1773, MOLLY HARDY, daughter of MARCY HARDY. She was born at Bradford, Mass., 19 June 1750, and died 5 June 1814. He married, second, MEHITABLE HARDY, whose parentage is not known. He died 13 May 1833.

Jonas Hardy was born, probably near Boston, Mass., since his father, Major Jonas Hardy, an officer in the British Army at the time, was in charge of the garrison there. The Rev. Lucius Martin Hardy, a sketch of whose life is given later in this volume and who was a great-grandson of Major Jonas Hardy, in a record of his family has given the place of birth of Jonas Hardy as Andover, Mass.

Jonas Hardy, the subject of this sketch, as noted before, was one of the two sons of Major Jonas Hardy, who married the daughter of an Indian Chief. He and his brother, Oliver Hardy, were sent to Bradford, Mass., with their mother, when they were seven and four years of age, respectively, to be placed in the home of a relative, who, strangely enough, bore the same Christian name as their father, Jonas. The latter was proud to rear the fatherless children and gave them a good start in life. The two brothers were never far apart and both were buried at Lebanon, N. H., where Jonas died in 1833. The tombstone erected over the grave of Jonas Hardy bears the inscription: "Jonas Hardy, died May 13, 1833, in the 83rd year of his age."³

3. This information furnished by Mrs. Ellen Emeline (Hardy) Webster, 137 Prospect St., Franklin, N. H.

He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, serving from 30 Nov. 1775, to 4 Dec. 1775, as a private in Captain John Savory's Company.

It is assumed that Jonas Hardy moved to Stoddard, N. H., soon after the close of the Revolutionary War. He was a farmer, and it is said that he moved many times. The Indian blood in his veins no doubt accounted for his roving proclivities. Although he worked hard, and tried to raise his family in comfort, it cannot be said that he was very successful in gaining a competence. He died a poor man, but became rich through his posterity as will be seen in the brilliant records of his descendants, referred to in the following pages. It is not known definitely how many children Jonas Hardy had, and the list of children given below must not be taken as conclusive. No doubt there were other children than those mentioned.

Children:

- 4* i. SILAS³, b. at Bradford, Mass., about 1774; m. at Warner, N. H., 3 Oct. 1799, CATHERINE KIMBALL.
- 5* ii. MARY ("SARAH")³, b. probably at Stoddard, N. H.; m. NOAH BARDEN. One son, JESSE, b. 1795, was drowned 12 Aug. 1812. She died 1 Jan. 1796. Her husband, NOAH BARDEN, m. for second wife MARY FARNSWORTH. NOAH BARDEN d. 25 Nov. 1833, aged 71 years.
- 6 iii. HANNAH³, b. probably at Stoddard, N. H.; m. CAMPBELL. They lived at Canaan, N. H.
- 7 iv. BETSEY³, b. probably at Stoddard, N. H.; m. GEORGE W. CLARK. They had the following children: ROSILL, MARY, who married SOLOMON ("SOL.") HARDY, son of STEPHEN and MARY ("POLLY") (JOSEPH) HARDY, LUCINDA, who married a BARTLETT, GEORGE and GUERELLA TAYLOR.
- 8* v. DANIEL³, b. at Stoddard, N. H., 27 June 1781; m. at Lebanon, N. H., 4 Sept. 1803, BETSEY PACKARD.
- 9 vi. MASSY³, b. at Stoddard, N. H.; m. ROBERT WILLIAMS, who was a Methodist minister. They had the following children: HORACE, SILVESTER, VOLORUS, JOHN and SILAS.⁴

4. The names of the children of Jonas Hardy were furnished by Mrs. Edna Goodale, 374 Marion Ave., Aurora, Ill.

3. OLIVER² HARDY (*Major Jonas*¹), born probably at Andover, Mass., 1753. He married at Weare, N. H., 15 Nov. 1778, ESTHER (JOHNSON) WHITTAKER, a widow. He died at Lebanon, N. H., 21 Aug. 1822, aged 69 years. He was buried in the Lebanon Cemetery in a lot adjoining the burial plot of his brother, JONAS. His wife, ESTHER, died at Lebanon, 11 Nov. 1823, aged 74 years.

Oliver Hardy was born in 1753, probably near Boston, Mass., since his father, Major Jonas Hardy, an officer in the British Army at the time, was in charge of the garrison there. Descendants of Jonas Hardy, brother of Oliver, claim that the former was born at Andover, Mass. If this is so, then it is reasonable to assume that Oliver Hardy was also born there.

As noted before, Oliver Hardy⁵ was one of two sons of Major Jonas Hardy of the British Army, who married the daughter of a chief of one of the six Indian tribes allied with England during the French and Indian War. The Major was massacred after the battle of Fort William Henry and the two sons, with their mother, were sent to Bradford, Mass., where they were placed in the home of a relative who happened to have the same Christian name as the Major, viz., Jonas. The latter was proud to rear the fatherless boys, and brought them up well; along with his own children, Arthur Perry, Henry, Diademia and Stephen Hardy. Oliver and Jonas were not adopted children, but might have been if adoption laws had been passed at the time. However, the family moved from Bradford to New Hampshire and settled there. In the meantime, many neighbors and several relatives came to regard Oliver and Jonas Hardy as sons of the Jonas Hardy of Bradford instead of remembering them as sons of Major Jonas Hardy. This was only natural, and accounts for the confusion that still exists in the minds of certain Hardys who have descended either from Major Jonas Hardy or from the other Jonas Hardy of Bradford, Mass.

Oliver Hardy was a farmer and blacksmith. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, having enlisted from Bradford, Mass., 30 Sept. 1777, under Captain Nathaniel Gage. He moved to 5. See footnote number 3.

South Weare, N. H., about 1778, where he lived several years, for he was listed as a "Trader" in South Weare in 1794. After this he moved to Hopkinton, N. H., and then to Lebanon, N. H., where he and his wife are buried.

Children (as recorded in Vital Statistics of N. H., all born in Weare, N. H., and listed as 1st, 2nd, and 3rd) are:

- 10* i. OLIVER, JR.³, b. Sept. 1779; m. 1805, SALLY JOHNSON.
- 11* ii. JOHNSON³, b. 19 July 1781; m. MARY JOHNSON, daughter of JOSEPH and POLLY JOHNSON of Enfield, N. H.; b. June 1792; d. at Lebanon, N. H., 15 Sept. 1870, aged 78 years, 3 months.
- 12 iii. THOMAS³, b. 12 June 1783. Died at the age of 83.
(An old family record adds two more children: LAVINIA, b. 3 Feb. 1788⁶; and PEGGY, b. 12 Sept. 1789.)

6. The following information was furnished by Ellen Emeline (Hardy) Webster: "A very old sheet of paper, brown and worn with age, sent me by Frances Hardy of Boston, Mass., is evidently the original record of her great-grandfather's children. The paper is so worn and, in spots, the ink so faded that the spelling of Tuesday or Thursday is uncertain, but excepting for these words, this paper reads as follows:

" 'Betsey Hardy was Born at ware on thursday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock the 19 day of september 1779 the tenth day of the moon.

" 'Johnson Hardy was Born at ware on thursday evening the 19 of July 1781 Between 9 and 10 o'clock the 29 day of the moon.

" 'Thomas Hardy was Born at ware the 12 day of June 1783 Thursday (or Tuesday) night the 14 day of the moon.

" 'Lavinia was Born february the 3d, 1788.

" 'Peggy was Born September 12, 1789.'

"In comparing this record with the Vital Statistics of N. H., it will be seen that the Betsey in the family record is born on the same day as the Oliver in the town record; that the records for Johnson and Thomas agree, and that Lavinia and Peggy have been added to the family record. I cannot explain the Betsey and Oliver contradiction, but the addition of Lavinia is important. A Lavinia Hardy 'of Lebanon' married Moses Johnson of Enfield in 1812 and died 25 July 1879, aged 91 years 6 months, which would bring her birth back to that given above, viz., Feb., 1788. Therefore, there seems to me no question that she was the daughter of Oliver and Esther Johnson Hardy who are buried in the Lebanon cemetery. It will be of interest to note that three of the children of Oliver and Esther Johnson Hardy married three of the children of Joseph and Polly Johnson: 'Deacon' Oliver Hardy m. Sally Johnson; Lavinia Hardy m. Moses Johnson; and Johnson Hardy m. Mary Johnson. This evidence came from Child's Grafton County Gazetteer, p. 254. Also, Frances Hardy, granddaughter of Johnson Hardy, writes me that Johnson Hardy and his wife, Mary Johnson, were brother and sister to 'Levina' Hardy and her husband, Moses Johnson. It is said that although the family usually spelled the name 'Lavinia', it was pronounced as if spelled 'Le-vi'-na.' "

- 13 iv. LAVINIA³, b. 3 Feb. 1788; m. MOSES JOHNSON of Enfield, N. H., in 1812; d. 25 July 1879, aged 91 years, 6 months. The Gazetteer of Grafton County, N. H., says of her: "She was a very remarkable woman of her day, possessing great strength of mind, tempered with gentle and tender solicitude and warm affection for her family and friends which extended in good works to the sick and afflicted." Her husband, Moses Johnson, was b. in England 18 Jan. 1789; d. 9 June 1857. He was ninth in line of descent from William Johnson, born in England in 1600, who migrated from St. Christopher, Ireland, and was probably the first of the family to set foot on the soil of New England. Moses Johnson was the oldest son of Joseph and Polly Johnson, early settlers in Enfield, N. H. In early manhood, Moses bought a tract of woodland, 200 acres, in Enfield and proceeded to improve the land and to encourage others to come and settle in the town. Eventually he built up a trade in live stock, large droves of which were driven to the cattle market in Brighton, Mass. Moses, on horseback, used to accompany these droves with their five or six drivers. The trip was not without excitement and actual perils. The most dreaded part of the journey was through the five miles of woodland on Boscawen Plain, N. H., for robbers infested the woods. He had more than one narrow escape and only by putting spurs to his horse did he outride the danger. He always rode armed with a heavy black whip and a brace of pistols.

Children:

1. SUSAN MATILDA, b. 20 Sept. 1816; m. 9 Aug. 1837, AMOS FRENCH of Lebanon, N. H. They made their home in Enfield Center. After Mr. French's death, 5 Nov. 1871, Mrs. French returned to the little "red house on the hill"—the old family home—and there she spent eight years caring for her aged mother who died 25 July 1879. Children:

JOHN J., who was for many years station agent at Pittsfield, N. H.

WILLIAM W., whose last years were filled with suffering from blood poison, caused by an imbedded bullet received in the battle of Fredericksburg.

GEORGE B., who was for many years a baggage master and a U. S. Express Company manager in Concord, N. H.

CHARLES F., a hardware dealer and a hotel proprietor, who died 31 March 1881, when hardly 27 years of age.

2. JAMES WILLIS, b. 24 Feb. 1826, in Enfield, N. H.; m. SUSAN A. SMITH, daughter of REV. URIAH SMITH of Barnard, Vt., 20 Dec. 1846; d. 18 Dec. 1886.

HON. JAMES WILLIS JOHNSON

James Willis Johnson began life in Enfield, N. H., as a poor country boy. One of his early recollections, when 7 or 8 years old, was walking, barefooted, over snow-covered ground, from his home to the village store, a distance of a mile and a quarter, on an errand for his mother. With twenty-five cents which his mother had earned by doing some weaving for a neighbor, he was to purchase one pint of molasses, three cents worth of tea and the balance of the quarter was to be taken up with flour.

A family in such straightened circumstances today would not scruple to solicit aid from Uncle Sam because of his delight in serving on dole chicken and ice cream with beer and cigarettes for Sunday dinners, but such unearned luxuries would have been sawdust and gall to the Johnson-Hardy family of a century ago. They were brought up on the adage, "Root, hog, or die." And by their rooting they eventually developed a keenness for values and a love for independence that changed the barefooted Jim Johnson into the Hon. James Willis Johnson—a man who made his fortune not by sheer luck, college scholarships, or political pull, but by hard work, self-denial, thrift, good business sense and strict honesty. He paid for what he got. Later it was said of him that no one was ever the loser who dealt with him and that he was not known to be in debt to any man.

But, it may be asked, "How did he get his start?" After a very limited education, he became a clerk in the country store where he soon showed signs of being a born trader. At the age of 26 years, he made his first venture on a trade of some magnitude, for he bought a carload of "long red" potatoes which he sold at a profit in Boston. Next he bought cattle from Northern New York and Canada which he sold to advantage.

During the Civil War period, when wool was in demand, he soon became one of the "largest, boldest, and most successful dealers in wool and produce in the New England States. In one day his neighbor, James F. Bryant, disbursed in currency for him between $60,000 and $70,000 for wool received." (Grafton County Gazetteer.)

My great uncle, Edwin C. Hardy, used to tell this story about "Cousin Jim": "Jim used to ride about the country buying sheep pelts. When he had secured a load, he took them to Boston to sell. As he felt no call to put on style for this business trip, he was somewhat stirred when the clerk at the Quincy House treated him rudely because he was not 'dressed up.' Jim said to the clerk: 'You may laugh at me now, but some day, let me tell you, I will own the Quincy House myself', and he did!" But before that event, he continued in trade and he did not confine his trading to live stock and their products. He became interested in barley and soon became one of the largest shippers in New England of that grain from Canada and Northern New York. In one transaction with a Boston brewer he sold 10,000 bushels. At another sale, which took about five minutes time, he had cleared $5,000 on a sale of 50,000 bushels of barley.

Thus he was able in 1874 to make good his boast to the clerk of the Quincy House, for he bought that famous hostelry and made it something to be talked about to this very day. It had been built about 1818, and its opening was celebrated in a unique way. For days before the event, a cart in which was a huge sign stating that on such a date the oxen, drawing the cart, would be barbecued and a banquet served free to all. Such a crowd of people attended that there came to be nearly a riot. Some fifty years after that time, James Willis Johnson took possession and, at once, it became his ambition to make the hotel the finest and largest in the city. He invested a million of dollars on the property, rebuilding it from its very foundations, making it a granite structure seven stories high, which boasted 460 rooms, each with a fireplace and a marble mantel, and a bar that kept 18 bartenders on duty. It had a dozen dining halls and banqueting rooms where at times 2,000 were served in one day. Indeed, it became famous for its distinguished guests—John L. Sullivan, William Jennings Bryan, Woodrow Wilson, Josephus M. Daniels, Chauncey E. Depew, Sir Thomas Lipton, King Edward VII of Great Britain and hundreds more of leading citizens. The Quincy House was a great meeting place of all the New England governors and a great political center for all parties. And the house was also noted for its cuisine "of rugged" foods. A guest might be served, at a sitting, with a dozen large oysters, a huge steak, a whole fowl, or a large platter of fish and all "the fixings." This was the hotel that introduced to New England palates, for the first time, planked steak and scallops.

Dr. James B. Woodman of Franklin, N. H., tells me he often was a guest at the Quincy House between 1885 and 1895, and that he vividly recalls a dining room scene. The Johnson family always had one table reserved for them in one of the large dining rooms. At this table he remembers seeing the "old gentleman", but most of all does he recall the famous yellow cat which became known to all the guests. This cat had a high chair at the family table with his food served on a plate like any other member of the family. His table manners were excellent—he ate with dignity and waited to be excused from the table. When excused, he sedately walked from the dining room to the office where there was the most magnificent highboy Dr. Woodman ever recalls having seen. The cat leisurely walked to the foot of the highboy and with one leap landed on the top where was his cushion upon which he settled for his after-dinner siesta.

James Willis Johnson spent the years from 1874 till his death in 1886, in this de luxe hostelry and then his wife and four daughters became sole owners of the property until it was closed in 1929. His son-in-law, William W. Hill, was one of the proprietors.

But now, the Quincy House on Brattle Street is no more, for it was razed to the ground in January, 1935, to provide automobile parking place.

James Willis Johnson never severed connections with his early surroundings in Enfield, N. H. He always kept his birthplace—the red house on the hill—and also his modern, more pretentious house nearby. Indeed, this place is still the summer home for his surviving family. It was built and purchased by Mr. Johnson of his uncle, David Johnson, and has been in the family 85 years.

In politics, Mr. Johnson was a Republican and he was elected to the State Legislature in 1860, 1865, 1866 and 1875. He was railroad commissioner in 1878 and 1879; State Senator in 1876 and 1877, and was Greenback candidate for Congress in the third district in 1878.

Thus this self-made man, who attained well-merited distinction, came into his own by his untiring effort, indomitable persistence, and abounding energy.⁷

8. DANIEL³ HARDY (*Jonas*², *Major Jonas*¹), born at Stoddard, N. H., 27 June 1781. He died at Hyde Park, Vt., 29 Dec. 1868. He married at Lebanon, N. H., 4 Sept. 1803, BETSEY PACKARD, who was born at Bridgewater, Mass., 25 Nov. 1780 and died at Lebanon, N. H., 18 May 1863. She was the daughter of ICHABOD PACKARD, whose immigrant ancestor was SAMUEL PACKARD, who came from Wyndonham, England, in the Good Ship Diligence in 1638. Through the good services of Miles Standish, SAMUEL PACKARD was able to purchase land from the Indians, negotiating with the Indian Chief Massasoit. The helmet which Miles Standish wore and the pike which he carried with him when the purchase was made are still in the possession of the PACKARD family in Bridgewater, Mass. For twenty knives, nine hatchets, eight hoes, four moose hides, ten and one-half yards of cotton cloth and seven woolen coats for men—it being specified that each coat should contain one and one-half yards of woolen cloth—Miles Standish bought all the land now known as Brockton and Bridgewater, Mass., or, as it is termed in the original purchase, “the territory from the wear at Satucket, seven miles due east, seven miles due west, seven miles due north and seven miles due south.” That parcel of land which was allotted to SAMUEL PACKARD has been in the family ever since that time, and is still lived on by a direct descendant. The PACKARD family was a large one, and many descendants of SAMUEL live in various parts of the United States. In 1780, while the Revolutionary War was on, ICHABOD PACKARD and his wife moved to Lebanon, N. H. His wife carried their six months’ old baby, BETSEY, in her arms on horseback all the way from Bridgewater, Mass., to Lebanon, N. H.

Daniel Hardy went to Lebanon, N. H., about 1801, having purchased his time from his father when he was sixteen years of age. He was now ready to embark on a career of his own. He found employment for a while in the mills owned and operated by Ichabod Packard. In the meantime, he wooed and won Mr. Packard’s own daughter, Betsey. The young couple started out to make a home for themselves on a farm. By hard work, careful planning, and thrifty habits, they soon were making a good living.

The family increased, for fifteen children were born to them. Mr. Hardy gradually added to his income by dealing in a small way, at first, in real estate. Later he became probably New Hampshire's largest dealer in farms. The State of Kansas was about to be formed at this time, and the attention of the entire nation was fixed upon the important question as to whether it would be admitted to the Union as a slave state or free. Of course, New England was eager for the territory to be admitted without slavery being permitted. The controversy raged furiously everywhere, and the farmers of New Hampshire were so deeply interested that many of them literally ran away from their farms and estates and moved to Kansas. Some of them sold their farms for little or nothing. Daniel Hardy took these farms off their hands one by one, first in his own neighborhood, and later in more remote sections, although it should be pointed out that he had no desire to take advantage of the anti-slavery zealots just for the sake of getting more land. He already had plenty. He continued to till his own original farm, and in time the lines of his property extended more than five miles in Lebanon and Hanover, N. H. He owned farm lands and other property also in Canaan and Hebron, N. H. In the meantime, he became acquainted with ex-governor Anthony Colby, the only Whig governor New Hampshire ever had. They engaged jointly in the extensive raising of mules, which were sent to Virginia, the Carolinas and Kentucky, a pair in those days being worth from $1,200 to $1,500. The driving of those mules to the southern states was a thrilling experience in itself which cannot be more than mentioned here. On one trip, Daniel Hardy stayed at a small hotel in Boston, and the proprietor discovered that he had in his possession a considerable amount of money for those days. Mr. Hardy was awakened by a strange noise in the middle of the night, and opening the door of his room quickly he was surprised to find outside, one Mr. Frothingham, the proprietor of the hotel, with a large knife in hand and with him his wife, holding a small lamp, evidently intending to rob and murder, if necessary, their guest for the night. The proprietor and his wife scurried downstairs, but this was warning enough. Daniel arose immediately, and left the hotel in the wee small hours of the morning, never to patronize that inn again.

When Daniel Hardy died at Hyde Park, Vt., at the home of one of his sons, he had sufficient money to leave one thousand dollars in cash to each of his daughters and a very valuable farm to the son who cared for him in his declining years, in spite of the fact that he began life in debt.

Possessing an indomitable will and an unconquerable courage to win success, he made good use of his time and wages. He was not able to get much education in his early years, but while a young man he spent the larger part of his evenings in procuring for himself the rudiments of an education. He studied diligently at night in front of the capacious fireplace, reading by the light of pine knots gathered in the autumn. When he died the local press was full of praise and tribute to him as one of New Hampshire's leading citizens. He was referred to as "a man of strong mind and brawny arm, intensely, forcefully, and almost ceaselessly active, who loved righteousness and hated iniquity, and left his mark upon his generation."¹²

OBITUARY¹⁴

Hon. Horace F. Hoyt

Horace Franklin Hoyt died at the home of his son-in-law, John D. Ayer, in Claremont (N. H.), Saturday, March 1 (1930), at the advanced age of 87 years and four months. He was born in Hanover on what was then known as Pork Hill, later changed to Etna Highlands, son of Horace Franklin and Caroline (Hardy) Hoyt, an older sister, Josephine, Mrs. Sleeman Berry, and a younger sister, Eliza, Mrs. Simon Ward, both having died several years ago. Mr. Hoyt attended school in district No. 10, later going to K. U. A. (Kimball Union Academy) for a short time. In 1869 he married Miss Minnie Coates of Sherbrooke, Canada, a school teacher. To them were born a son, Willis P., and a daughter, Caro, who died soon after marriage in the nineties.

The writer does not possess many of the dates and facts which should appear at this time, but Uncle Horace, as he was often called, was very much in the public life of this town and state. He was at the time of his death the oldest member of the First Baptist Church of Hanover, Etna. He served as deacon for many years, and filled other offices of the church, always a loyal and devoted member. Mr. Hoyt was a charter member of the Hanover Grange since 1875, having received all the honors of that order. He had been a Mason for 64 years.

A County Commissioner for many years, it was through his personal interest that our county farm was put on a much better basis. He was tax collector for a long term of years, also serving as select-man for a time. He was sent as representative from Hanover several successive sessions, later serving as doorkeeper at the Hall of Legislature. When the Etna creamery was at its best, he was treasurer, handling large sums of money. He was a member of trustees of trust funds, charter trustee of the library in Etna and held many other minor offices from time to time. He carried on the town farm at one time, very successfully.

14. This obituary notice is here reproduced by courtesy of Mrs. Ellen Emeline (Hardy) Webster, of Franklin, N. H., a grand-niece of Mr. Hoyt's mother, Emily Caroline (Hardy) Hoyt.

Mr. Hoyt possessed a genial nature, always friendly with those he met, a stalwart Christian character with a great love for, and a strong faith in, his God. Funeral services were held in the Baptist Church at Etna which he so much loved and to which he gave a bell that aids in the call to worship. Pastor Louis D. Vancelette took his remarks from the 91st Psalm. A quartet sang two of Mr. Hoyt's favorite hymns. A Masonic service followed.

There are left to survive him a grandson, Willis P. Hoyt, Jr. of Claremont and a great-granddaughter, also a niece, Mrs. Ora H. Hoyt of Mascoma.

- 31 vi. JULIA LOUISA⁴, b. 9 Mar. 1812; m. REV. CHARLES H. LOVEJOY, a Methodist minister. She died at Vineland, Kansas, 6 Feb. 1882. The following newspaper article written by Rev. Anthony Colby Hardy, brother of Julia Louisa (Hardy) Lovejoy, is of special interest and is reproduced in full, as follows:

JULIA LOUISA (HARDY) LOVEJOY
By A. C. Hardy

Julia Louisa Lovejoy was born in Lebanon, March 9, 1812. She was the third daughter of Daniel and Betsey Hardy, lifetime residents of the town. She received a good common school education in the schools of the town, supplemented by several terms of attendance at Kimball Union Academy at Meriden. Her father, who all through his life felt the loss to himself by being deprived, on account of poverty, of the usual advantages to procure an education, was determined that his large family of children should not suffer in like manner, gave to each of them such advantages as the times afforded. After teaching several terms of school, she married

Rev. Charles H. Lovejoy, who had just entered the ministry in the New Hampshire Conference, M. E. Church. She not only proved herself to be a good wife to him, but a "helpmeet" indeed. Her husband had entered the ministry with all the zeal and much of the ability of those old time Methodists—but with what, at that time was not unusual—a very scanty and defective education,—scarcely up in the rudiments of the mother tongue. She immediately commenced with him a thorough course of instruction, and so faithful was the teacher, and so apt and able the pupil, that soon in "gifts" and usefulness he stood the peer of his contemporaries, and his large and well read library stands as a memento of the faithful work and incitement of a loving wife.

Her husband was a clergyman of whom it was said, "He never can keep still." Holding protracted meetings in his own parish, or assisting others to do the same, establishing and attending social meetings in the distant and out of the way parts of his charges, he always found his wife his most able and successful assistant. Endowed with far more than ordinary ability, with a deep and fervent piety, she was a power to convict, convince and lead to Christ. Her powerful exhortations and prayers are still vividly remembered, and tearfully recalled, all over the territory where she has labored with her husband, in New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont, Illinois, Kansas. In the latter state, frequently performing the pulpit service, with much acceptance to the people. She and her husband were what are known as Original Abolitionists. They gave themselves to the cause of the slave, when to do so was to have their name cast out as evil. The brutal murder of her husband's cousin,¹⁵ at Alton, Ill., by a pro-slavery mob, only intensified their hatred to slavery. So when the struggle between freedom and slavery, for the possession of Kansas commenced, they were the first to forsake their eastern home and friends, and emigrate to that battleground of freedom. They were at Lawrence (Kansas) at the time of the sacking of that city by border ruffians. Mr. Lovejoy was in his pulpit when a messenger announced the approach of the ruffians. Like the patriots of old, he left his pulpit and shouldered his musket to protect his family and home. She by her correspondence to newspapers and magazines both at home and here in old New England, did much to attract attention and enlist the sympathies of the lovers of freedom to the deadly struggle going on in that disputed territory and lived to rejoice that 15. This cousin was Elijah Parish Lovejoy, who was born at Albion, Maine, 9 Nov. 1802; killed by a pro-slavery mob at Alton, Ill., 7 Nov. 1837. Colby College, Maine, has just paid a tribute to this alumnus, giving him a place in history as the first martyr to the freedom of speech in America. Three times his printing plant was destroyed by the mob, but he would not be silenced. He said: "As long as I am an American citizen and as long as American blood runs in these veins, I shall hold myself at liberty to speak, to write, and to publish whatever I please, being amenable to the laws of my country for the same." After he had set up his fourth press, the mob killed him at the age of 35. He left an invalid wife and an infant son.

Kansas was saved to freedom, and the first deadly blow had been thereby struck at the extension of slave territory, so soon and swiftly followed by the Emancipation Proclamation. Of course so active a partizan drew down the hatred of the ruffians, and when Quantrell's band invaded Kansas, on their murderous enterprise, she was especially sought after, to wreak their vengeance upon, but getting notice of the approach of his band of cut-throats, she caught up her young child—all remaining at home of her family—as her husband and eldest son were doing brave duty in the army—and fled into a field of tall corn, where she remained hidden till they gave over their search. She not only gave her husband and son (in service) to the Union Army, but as soon as schools could be established for the "contrabands" she went to Memphis and labored earnestly in teaching them till her health failed her, and she was obliged to return to her Kansas home. She leaves two children, sons—Rev. Charles J. Lovejoy of Kansas County Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. Irving Lovejoy of Boston University. She early developed a literary taste, which if she had cultivated would have given her a high rank among the writers of New England. Her correspondence with the New York Tribune, Zion's Herald, Independent Democrat, Free Press, etc., during "Kansas times" are still vividly remembered and recalled by many who read them at the time of their publication.

One or two incidents in her life in Kansas will illustrate her nerve and sorrows. On arriving in Kansas, her husband left her with the children at Lawrence, then hardly more than a rendezvous for emigrants, and with a party of men, went out to "prospect" for a town site; and decided upon, and laid out the present city of Manhattan. As soon as the site was selected, they sent for their families, who at once started with their household goods for the new home. Soon after starting her youngest child, Edith, the pet of the household, was taken violently ill; soon too ill to proceed; when the others passed on and left her with her family on the trackless prairie. So alone she sat and held her child till it died. No friendly voice to speak a word of sympathy—no friendly hand to close the eyes of the dead. So two hours later her husband found her, holding her dead in her arms. And father and mother dug the little grave on the prairie, and as they could, buried the form of their darling out of their sight.

One day a rattlesnake found its way into their cabin, and fastened its fangs in the arm of their eldest daughter, Juliette. The mother knew that what could be done must be done quickly. Sending in haste for a physician, she fearlessly placed her lips to the wound and literally sucked the poison from it, and saved her child's life.

Her death is the second—Mrs. H. F. Hoyt of Hanover, having died previously—in a family of ten children, during the space of 56 years. Her husband was the only relative present with her when she died, her sons being both absent from home on duty. She died at Vineland, Kansas, Feb. 6, 1882, of intermittent and pleurisy fever, aged 70.

Not faultless, yet her life was such that those who knew her best call her "Blessed."

ALMEDA AURILLA BARDEN lived to be almost 90 years old. She died 30 Nov. 1904. The following excerpt was taken from the Granite State Free Press account of her death:

"Mrs. Barden came from a strong and vigorous New England family, and inherited the virtues of her people. Her large family was what she lived for, bringing them up in accordance with her firm belief in duty, and in them she found her greatest glory. Her mind and heart and strength made her more than the ordinary woman, and to her was given more than the usual years in which to do her work."

3. EDWIN C. (b. at Washington, N. H., 25 July 1839; m. 15 Apr. 1865, SARAH COLBURN BLISS, daughter of John Baldwin and Emmeline Bliss, b. at Quechee, Vt., 19 May 1842; d. 10 Jan. 1933, in her 91st year. Before marriage, Mrs. Barden was a teacher and throughout her life her interest in books was unusual. She was a great lover of poetry and a writer of much ability. Some of her short stories were published in magazines and her witty poems and practical essays added much to the programs of the Lebanon Grange.

Mr. Barden was equally interested in books, but his preference was for biography and history. He himself grew up amid pioneer conditions and was one who could tell of the struggle of those who cleared the land and forced sustenance for themselves and their families from among the rocks of New England. In a true sense he had the granite of New Hampshire in his will and brain, for he was a thoughtful man and while busy at his farm work, he meditated on life's deeper questions, and brought forth from such meditations many interesting convictions. He died 6 Jan. 1925, in his 86th year.

Mr. and Mrs. Barden had eleven children, ten of whom survived their aged parents:

ELLEN E., b. 22 Aug. 1866; m. 31 Mar. 1888, HENRY A. FORD. She contributes articles for the magazine Vermonter. Children:

HELENE L., b. 25 Feb. 1889, who graduated from Valparaiso University, Indiana, in 1910 and is now teaching in Hackensack, N. J., High School.

WILLIS HENRY, b. 30 Aug. 1892; d. 23 June 1915.

DOROTHY M., b. 22 Feb. 1897, attended University of New Hampshire; m. 1 Aug. 1921, ORA BENNETT. They have one child:

WILLIS A. BENNETT, b. 5 May 1922.

ELSIE E., b. 8 Mar. 1868; m. ELMER E. WHEELER. She has published a book, Franklin Park, Boston. They have one daughter, MAUD L., who married HENRY TALBERT and they have a son, HENRY TALBERT, JR.

MAUD M., b. 12 Aug. 1869; m. 29 Nov. 1890, REV. WILLIAM BYRON FORBUSH. She was educated at Tilden Seminary, West Lebanon, N. H. Her chief interest, outside her family, has been in art. She studied painting in New York, and spent four years at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. She has been abroad five times, primarily to study the paintings in the Old World galleries. She has a woodland studio a short distance from Philadelphia where she spends much of her time studying and painting.

REV. WILLIAM BYRON FORBUSH was b. at Springfield, Vt., 20 Feb. 1868; d. 23 Oct. 1927. He graduated from Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., in 1888; received a Ph.D. from Union Seminary, New York City, in 1892; and Litt.D. from Hanover College, Hanover, Ind., in 1895. He served in various pastorates: Riverside, R. I.; Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; Warren, Mass.; Charlestown, Mass., and Detroit, Mich. Even before he retired from pastoral duties, he became notable as a writer and lecturer. He was in love with childhood and youth, especially boys, and the Forbush home furnished three tremendously alive specimens, mention of whom will be made more fully below. He founded the "Knights of King Arthur", which is the "largest church fraternity in the world." He also "unified the Street Boys' Club movement in this country, affecting several hundred thousand of the newsboy type." As an author, he is probably best known by his book, The Boy Problem, which is running in its twenty-fifth edition. Besides this book, his voluminous works include Boy's Life of Christ, The Manual of Clay, The Boy Problem in Honesty, The Coming Generation, Travel Lessons in the Life of Christ, The Broadening Path, and numerous other writings. He was widely sought as a lecturer and for editorial counsel. He held many important editorial posts, including general editor of the University Society of New York and general editor for a large publishing concern in Philadelphia. Rev. Ozora S. Davis said of him: "He was always a quickening spirit among his associates. . . . He was a critic and a satirist; but he was a lover of truth, never irreverent, although utterly a scorner of shams. He did not fit into the formal grooves. He was always cutting his own channels. He was a pioneer. He did not tread the common round and call the task complete. He struck a 'lead' which he mined with rich results."¹⁶

10. "DEACON" OLIVER³ HARDY (*Oliver*², *Major Jonas*¹), born at Weare, N. H., 19 Sept. 1779. He married, in 1805, SALLY JOHNSON, who was born at Enfield, N. H., 16 May 1785, and who died at the home of her son, JOHNSON ARAD HARDY, at Bradford, Vt., 26 Jul. 1870, in the 85th year of her life. He died at Bradford, Vt., 1 Aug. 1867, aged 87 years, 10 months, 12 days.

Oliver Hardy first served an apprenticeship in the business of tanner, currier and shoemaker, and settled in Bradford, Vt., in the fall of 1802, where he took up land and cleared much of it for his own use. He was a very prominent farmer, and the historians of his time referred to him as the "Man of ingenuity, who could do almost everything." He accumulated considerable property, which was not only sufficient for himself and family but for some of his close relatives.

Early in life he had an unfortunate accident which cost him one limb. A young lad was superintending the grinding of bark in a tannery where Oliver was working and put the machinery into motion before the subject of this sketch could get out of the way, with the result that he was crippled for life. This incident, however, made Oliver Hardy famous, not only in this country but in Europe, for instead of resigning to his fate he immediately put his inventive genius to work, and made for himself an artificial limb which was so far superior to any other known at that time that soon he was the maker of artificial legs and other aids for cripples. It is understood that his products were known far and wide and he made a neat little fortune from the venture.

He also held public office. For several years he was Justice of the Peace. He joined the Congregational Church of Bradford, Vt., in 1815 and in 1830 he was chosen Deacon. It was said of him that he was a "man of kind disposition and exemplary morality, a man of strict honesty, of firm integrity and at the same time of uncommon humility and meekness." A writer once said of Oliver Hardy: "His heart was full of good will towards all men. Seldom or never was he heard to speak unkindly of any human being."

Strangely enough, sorrow and suffering seemed to harass his life, for, in addition to being made a cripple as a young man, in later life he was called upon to bury six of his sons and one daughter. However, his courage was undaunted. These trials merely tended to bring out the greatness of his soul and personality. He was greatly mourned by the entire community when he passed away 1 Aug. 1867.¹⁸

She dearly loved her grandparents, Johnson and Mary Hardy, with whom she lived for a few years in her childhood, and recalls how her grandmother taught her to wash dishes when she was so small she had to stand on a nail keg to reach the dishpan in the kitchen sink. She was also taught to sew, knit, and milk cows. She never forgot her grandmother's admonition: "Frances, whatever you do, do it thorough, and always speak the truth because the truth will always stand when a lie will fush out."

day her face had been wreathed in smiles as she looked about the room saying, "See! See!" as if she were already in the presence of the Unseen.

Lunette Emeline Lamprey, granddaughter of Ichabod and Emeline Hardy, famous writer (her pen name is Louise Lamprey), has made the following contribution concerning her grandparents:

Grandmother was born on what was then almost frontier (May 1, 1815, at Rumney, N. H.) and I have heard her say that when she was a very little girl her father came home one day with a pair of Indian moccasins each for her and her twin sister, Adaline, which he bought of Indians. I asked her once what was the very first thing she could remember and she said she thought it was one day when she and Adaline were playing together on the kitchen floor and each had a colored handkerchief (probably a bandana), given them for a present, and Adaline held hers up and looked at it and then at her sister's and said: "Let's fwop!" The twins looked so exactly alike that nobody but their mother could be sure which was which; their father did not pretend to tell them apart. . . . Grandmother retained to the end of her life a deep affection for her twin sister, and spoke of her so often that she has always seemed very real to me. . . . After her sister's death, grandmother stayed for a winter, helping at a house there (Methuen, Mass.) and taking care of a baby, and the next year she took her savings and spent a year at the academy in North Parsonfield, Maine. I think she was seventeen then. She used to tell how the girls had to take care of their own rooms so as to suit the teacher who went around to inspect them, and how the teacher used to take a clean pocket handkerchief and run it along the window frame or chair round to see whether any dust would show on the white linen. After leaving school she taught, and had sixty scholars in her first school. She taught until she married. . . . She told me once that grandfather first saw her when she was teaching somewhere, and he rode over that way on some business. She was picking raspberries with the daughter of the family where she boarded, and when he saw her he said to himself that that was the girl he meant to marry. . . .

The way in which she and grandfather came to join the Church of the Disciples, or "Christian Church" was that when they were young married people there was so much quarreling and disputing over creeds that they did not like it, and when they found that this church was not dogmatic but simply "Christian" they decided that was the church for them. . . . Another thing I remember her saying was that he attended to all the work out of doors, and she managed everything in-doors and "that was the way we always got along." . . .

Grandfather's characteristics were hearty good will, generosity, hospitality, integrity, and pride, as I remember him with an abounding energy in all sorts of enterprises. One of grandmother's proverbs was that she liked to keep ahead of her work and not have her work drive her, otherwise she would have been swamped by what she had to do. Grandfather never thought he had a proper meal unless he had hot biscuit, and he generally did have them, three times a day. He was up at four o'clock or five at the latest, all the year round, and it was his hobby to be on time ahead of time. Hence an amusing scene that used to take place when the family was at home in the summer and there was preaching at Hebron (N. H.), about the time I was in my teens. Grandfather always wanted his Sunday clothes laid out for him, and grandmother did that first; then when he was dressed he would go out and harness the horses and get into the carriage a full half hour before it was time to start. Grandmother, mother and I would come out and get in, and then it was, "Where's Lucy?" "Oh", grandmother would reply, "she's getting ready." Five minutes later: "Lucy! Ain't you coming?" Aunt Lucy from the front window: "Just a minute, father." More minutes pass. "Lucy, what are you doing?" "I'm almost ready." More minutes. "Lucy, ain't you coming, before the horses are all et up with flies?" "All right, father, just a minute." Another pause. "LUCY!" Finally, when Aunt Lucy had arranged every wave in her hair and every quirk in her bonnet strings to the exact degree of perfection, buttoned the last glove button and shaken out the last fold, out she would sail, smiling and serene, and we would start—and get to church before there were half a dozen people on hand.³¹

Ichabod Packard Hardy was educated in the town schools and at the old New Hampton Institution, New Hampton, N. H. He was an energetic business man, and was noted for large undertakings. He had several teams of oxen and horses, and with them he carried merchandise from Boston and Concord to Hebron, N. H. In the later years of his life he owned large areas of woodland and did a large business in lumbering. He owned and operated a saw mill. He used to carry logs on rafts down a stream to Newfound Lake and tow across the lake.

He was a man of progressive ideas, helped to establish schools in his town and was one of the earliest members of the Republican party. He and his wife were leading citizens wherever they lived. He was a lavish provider for his family and the best was none too good for them. He was noted for his hospitality and many of his relatives and friends looked forward to frequent visits at his home for that reason. His house was always a stopping place for visiting ministers, some of whom stayed six weeks at a time. He was by nature generous and liberal, too much so, perhaps, for his own good, for it cannot be said that all his business ventures were successful. When he died, at Groton, N. H., 17 Mar. 1887, it was said of him that he was "land poor."³²

- 79 iii. LUCY EDWINA⁵, b. 26 July 1840; m. 26 July 1869, GEORGE J. CUMMINGS. Lucy Edwina (Hardy) Cummings, on 15 Oct. 1934, in her 95th year, wrote the following brief sketch of her life to date:

"In 1849, when I was nine years old, my grandfather, Daniel Hardy, came to Hebron, where my father, Ichabod Packard Hardy, then lived, to ask the said I. P. H., his eldest son, to come to take his farm in Lebanon, N. H., and care for his parents, as it was thus considered the duty of the eldest son to do. Father sold out his farm and six horse teams doing freighting from Concord, and went to live with my grandfather. We children attended public school summers and winters, and a private school in Hanover, N. H., fall terms. When I was almost thirteen years old, having completed the work usually done in the schools (then ungraded and no high schools) and a term of Latin, under a teacher who advised my parents to send me to an academy, I was sent to Kimball Union Academy in 1853, and was graduated there in 1856.

"I taught my first school of thirty-five pupils in my home district the summer I was sixteen in July. Then I taught in public schools for ten years, one year in Thetford Academy and one year in Mr. Orcutt's boarding school, then married Mr. Cummings, who had just graduated from Dartmouth, and had been called to teach Latin and natural science at K. U. A. (Kimball Union Academy), our alma mater. We began our married life there in 1869. I was not expecting to teach but an epidemic of typhoid fever broke out in the school just after Thanksgiving vacation. Both lady teachers were victims and I was called to help out. On her recovery, one of the ladies was called to teach in Abbot Academy, Andover, Mass., and I was given her position which I filled for five years. The variety of subjects I was called on to teach would not appeal to a present day teacher. French and beginners in German, geometry, botany (a hobby ever since), mental science, seniors' review of Algebra, and I do not remember what else! After five years, I gave up the position, expecting the birth of my first child, a daughter, whose life you have as the wife of H. C. Sanborn. In 1878, another daughter was born to us, who lived only two and a half years, but was noted for a musical ear as she could sing tunes correctly before she could talk plain."

The Bristol Enterprise, of Bristol, N. H., in its issue of 13 Sept. 1934, printed the following obituary of Prof. George J. Cummings, husband of Lucy Hardy, referred to above.

"Prof. George J. Cummings died Thursday, Sept. 6, at his summer home in Groton. Prof. Cummings had been a remarkable character, wonderfully well preserved for one 96 years of age.

"With the family, he had expected to return to Andover, Mass., on Labor Day, but the illness that proved fatal prevented it and he entered into the joy of his Lord on Thursday, 6 Sept. 1934.

"A private funeral was held at the home Friday afternoon, followed by a public interment in the Hebron village cemetery. Rev. Wynn Fairfield of Newtonville, Mass., an old family friend, officiated, and Granville F. Wheeler was director. Rev. Mr. North of Andover, Mass., assisted by Rev. R. Barclay Simmons of Hebron, officiated at the cemetery. The bearers were relatives: two grandsons, John W. and George K. Sanborn; and four nephews by marriage, Edward D. Hardy of Washington, D. C.; Elihu Q. Sanborn and Elbert D. Currier of Franklin, N. H.; Mr. Davis of Vermont.

"Prof. Cummings is survived by the wife, Lucy E. (Hardy); a son-in-law, Henry C. Sanborn, superintendent of schools of Andover, Mass.; two grandsons, John W. Sanborn of New York and George K. Sanborn, a teacher in Phillips-Andover Academy, Andover, Mass.; a granddaughter, Lucy Coburn Sanborn, a teacher in the high school, Haverhill, Mass., and a niece, Mrs. Sadie Clark Davis of Vermont.

"In July, on the 26th, Prof. and Mrs. Cummings had celebrated in a quiet way the 65th anniversary of their marriage, and as usual they had spent the summer at their Groton home.

"Prof. Cummings' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jotham and Mary (Cheney) Cummings, settled in Groton over 100 years ago, and here Prof. Cummings was born, 6 July 1838. He fitted at Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H., and at the time of his death was the oldest living alumnus of Dartmouth College from which he was graduated in 1869.

"Prof. and Mrs. Cummings resided in Meriden, N. H., 1869-80; Monson, Mass., 1880-1885, and in Washington, D. C., 1885-1919, where he had been dean at Howard University. At Meriden, he had served as headmaster of Kimball Union Academy, and had a similar position at Monson. In each place, he had been a member of the Congregational Church.

"The revered Prof. Cummings had been an annual speaker at Groton Old Home Day gatherings. He was a man of sterling qualities, and will be greatly missed in Groton and at his Andover home."

It should be added that when Prof. Cummings retired from active work at Howard University at 80 years of age, President Johnson of that institution commended his services to the University as follows:

"The labors and influence of George J. Cummings, Dean and Prof. of Ancient Languages, were a benediction to Howard University. In nobility and absolute up-rightness of character, in his insistence upon the best standards for Howard, in the considerate kindness and generosity of his soul, it is difficult to speak of him except in superlatives. He built his life into Howard University, and was a dynamic and constructive influence for good in the lives of young men and women. He kept the faith."³³

Lucy Coburn Sanborn gives this account of her mother, Lucy Webster Cummings, the first daughter of George J. and Lucy Hardy Cummings; b. 6 Mar. 1875; d. 4 Apr. 1928:

"My mother was born in Meriden, N. H., where her father, George Jotham Cummings, was principal of Kimball Union Academy. She fitted for college in the high school at Washington, D. C., her parents having moved there, and graduated from Wellesley with the class of 1897. She did a great deal with music throughout her life, studying under Dr. Gloetzner in Washington and teaching and participating in musical groups at frequent intervals.

"While she was employed as a teacher in the Franklin, N. H., High School, she met Henry Coburn Sanborn, the superintendent of schools, whom she married on September 1, 1903. During subsequent years in Franklin and Danvers, Mass., we three children were born.

"In 1916 we moved to Andover, Mass., where my mother's life was filled with club, church, and family activities. During the summers my parents had a small boys' camp which my mother enjoyed and worked enthusiastically for. In 1927 her busy life was interrupted by the illness of which she died on April 4, 1928.

"The intelligent management of her home and numerous activities, her unostentatious but complete devotion to her family, her unhesitating acceptance and splendid discharge of duties and responsibilities in the community, and her keen joy in living signalized a character of rare beauty."

HENRY COBURN SANBORN was born at Webster, N. H., 22 May 1872. He was reared on a farm and prepared for college in the local schools. He graduated from Dartmouth College in the class of 1895. During the year 1897-98 he traveled and studied in Europe. He received credit for one year of work at the George William University, Goettingen, Germany. He took up teaching as a profession, and served as principal in New England high schools until September, 1901, when he became superintendent of schools at Franklin, N. H. In 1907 he was called to Danvers, Mass., to become superintendent of the schools there. In 1916, he was elected superintendent of schools at Andover, Mass., and he will have completed nineteen years of service in that position June, 1935. After the death of his first wife, Lucy Webster Cummings, he married, 29 June 1932, DOROTHY FLORENCE FARNHAM.

Henry C. and Lucy Cummings Sanborn had three children:

The eldest son of HENRY COBURN and LUCY WEBSTER (CUMMINGS) SANBORN is JOHN WEBSTER SANBORN, born at Franklin, N. H., 22 Jul. 1904. He graduated from Phillips-Andover Academy, cum laude, in 1921. He was elected to the honor society of Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year, 1924, at Dartmouth College. He then went to Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Boston, Mass., where he graduated in 1927, receiving the two degrees of B.S. and M.S. He was invited to enter the employ of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company as construction engineer, being assigned to Havana, Cuba, and Buenos Aires and Santiago in South America. He returned to the United States in 1932 and continued to work for the International Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York City. He married, 11 Oct. 1933, ALICE PERKINS. On April 10, 1935, he and Mrs Sanborn started for Hong Kong, China, where the International Telephone and Telegraph Company of New York City has sent him, as their representative, to install a radio station.

ALICE MAY (PERKINS) SANBORN, daughter of EVERETT C. and LOUISE MARIE (TODD) PERKINS, was born at Farmington, N. H., 11 Oct. 1906, where her father was a practicing physician. In 1912 her mother died. In 1914 he married again, this time a school teacher, MATTIE C. BYRDIA, of Vergennes, Vt. In 1918, the family moved to Dover, N. H.

She graduated from Dover High School in 1923; received a B.S. degree from the University of New Hampshire in 1927, and an Ed.M. from the same university in 1932. She taught biology and sociology in the high schools of Portsmouth, N. H., and Concord, N. H., and biology and general science in Andover, Mass. During her years of teaching she attended summer school in the University of New Hampshire, the Marine Laboratory on the Isles of Shoals, and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Her elder sister, BEATRICE L. PERKINS, M.D., is a specialist in women's and children's diseases at Gardner, Mass. An older brother, Clifton T. Perkins, M.D., who has done extension research and experimental work in the field of physio-therapy, is Assistant Superintendent of the Worcester State Hospital. A younger brother, DANIEL, teaches German in the high school of Garden City, Long Island. A half-sister, MARYLYON, is now a student in Dover High School.

GEORGE KNIGHT SANBORN, born at Franklin, N. H., 8 Jan. 1907, and married at Andover, Mass., 1 Jul. 1933, FRANCES LEIGHTON FLAGG. He attended first the public schools of Franklin, and prepared for college in Phillips Academy of Andover, Mass. He entered Dartmouth College, and graduated in 1928 with cum laude honors. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, summa cum laude, after three years of college work. He was appointed an instructor in mathematics at Phillips Academy, his alma mater, in the fall of 1928. In 1933, the American Book Company published his Exercises in First Year Algebra. In 1934, Harcourt and Brace, textbook publishers, published his Review Outline and Exercises in Elementary Algebra. He was a prominent athlete in college. His wife, FRANCES LEIGHTON FLAGG, was born 12 June 1907. She attended the Briggs Allen School at Andover, Mass., for eight years, and graduated from Abbot Academy, cum laude, honor A, in 1926. She was president of her class. She graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1930 with A.B. degree. She was vice-president of the junior and senior class in college. She also graduated from Miss Sacker's School of Design, of Boston, in 1933, where she was president of the senior class. One child:

ANNE LEIGHTON, b. 25 Mar. 1935.

The third and last child of Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn is LUCY COBURN SANBORN. She was born 5 June 1909, at Danvers, Mass., where her father was then superintendent of schools. She attended the public schools of Danvers and of Andover and then prepared for college at Abbot Academy where she graduated, cum laude, in 1927. She received a substantial prize for having passed the highest grade in the entrance examinations of Bryn Mawr College of all candidates for admission in the fall of 1927. The death of her mother in 1928 forced her to leave college for one year. She graduated summa cum laude, with honors in psychology, in 1932, and was appointed alternate to the senior "European Fellowship." She spent one year in clinical psychology and then took a position as instructor of English in the Haverhill (Mass.) High School where she is now employed.

The daughter LOUISE, who has won world fame as a writer, has contributed the following concerning her mother:

"As to my mother, she certainly had a good deal of talent in one way and another, especially in drawing, and could no doubt have done something in that line if she had lived a generation later, either in crayon or pencil. In her later years she studied a good deal by herself, especially in connection with the Chautauqua course and her Concord, N. H., clubs. I think perhaps the most remarkable thing she took up was a correspondence course in mineralogy including qualitative analysis with test tubes, etc. That was when she was somewhere around fifty. She had two or three thousand specimens of minerals, collected in the places where we lived or obtained by exchange. She was also very much interested in the study of art and belonged to a Shakespeare club in Concord. Also she was a member of the Wild Flower Club there, and had a considerable collection of mosses. Unfortunately the bulk of magazines, papers, clippings and so on, and note-books which in her later years became almost illegible, made it impossible to do anything with a lot of matter she collected, and

34. Vital Statistics for Rumney, N. H., gives this as the date of birth, but the family record is 2 March 1844.

I had to sift out what might be some use to somebody, and dispose of the rest. . . . When a school girl mother seems to have had some ability as a writer. One of the relics I did not find, although I looked for it, was a collection of papers from the old Lyceum of her girlhood. . . . I don't know what has become of them. Among them was a piece of blank verse in the metre of Hiawatha about local people and incidents which she wrote. I have some pieces of dress she had on when she and father became engaged, a purple calico. He caught her in it, mopping the floor. I have also some of her letter-writing in the first year of her marriage. One letter to Aunt Lucy (Mrs. George J. Cummings) says she is writing on the bed, where Henry put her while he finished mopping the floor. Another speaks of his making her the tools for netting, probably for the elaborate netted edge of the two stand cloths I have. I have the work-box he made her and the tatting-shuttle, her crayons she used at school and her tools for making wax flowers, also the box with Oriental painting cover she made for grandmother. I have the two big copies of Cole's Voyage of Life in crayon, and the St. Agnes, but they are too big to hang on any available wall space I have; and I have a rug she embroidered in wools from her own design, which I expect to turn over to a museum in Concord."

She (Louise Lamprey) has also written some facts concerning her father, Rev. Henry Phelps Lamprey, as follows:

"My father, Henry Phelps Lamprey, eldest son of Ephraim and Bridget (Phelps) Lamprey, was born at North Groton, N. H., 3 Nov. 1832, and the family removed to Concord about 1849, where grandfather started a brick yard, and father served apprenticeship as a cabinet maker. I suppose there is some of the Lamprey brick and some of father's work in old houses in Concord now. The name was originally Land-pré, the estate on a waste land, or moor, and the family settled on the edge of Wales, and received the right to wear coat armor for service in the Third Crusade. It is curious that without knowing anything about this I placed the scene of the opening chapters of The Treasure Valley dealing with that crusade, just about where the family must have lived at that time. Another mediæval family that lived over there at the time was that of Guelpheley, or Whelpley, ancestors of James Davenport Whelpley, whose secretary I was at one time. On the Phelps side there is Quaker blood. My mother, Ellen Selomy Hardy, was born 2 March 1840, Rumney, N. H., educated at New Hampton, N. H.; married, if I have the date right, 11 Jul. 1867. Father graduated at Dartmouth in 1863 and was at New Hampton for his theological studies, was a Free Will Baptist minister for several years and about 1878-9 became a Congregationalist. He left the ministry, I believe, in 1889 and settled in Concord. He died in January, 1921."

Lunnette E. (her pen name is Louise Lamprey, or, more simply, L. Lamprey), has won fame as a writer, and for this reason her own autobiography as it appears in one of her books is reproduced as follows:

"L. Lamprey, b. April 17, 1869. Author of The Great Days in American History Series, Children of Ancient Egypt, All the Ways of Building, etc.

"Born in 1869 in my grandmother's house in Alexandria, N. H., a story'n'n-half cottage in the middle of a lumber tract, I spent my childhood as a country minister's daughter in New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont.

"I never went to a grade school until I was thirteen, being taught at home mainly. My real education in those years was thru miscellaneous reading, the old St. Nicholas and other magazines, and one village library that had the old Mühlbach novels, Scott and Dickens. We read Shakespeare together at home, and other classics, and I learned to read French by myself at the age of ten. My favorite amusement used to be telling myself stories when alone, and I always tried to make them sound like the stories I read, which probably was some value to my vocabulary.

"I was one of the first Mount Holyoke graduates after it became a college, taught a short time, went to Washington, and was for eight years an editorial writer on the Washington Times (daily) and the Capital (weekly).

"My first job in New York was in the Republican campaign headquarters in 1904, and after that I held various writing and office jobs, including one that took me to London in 1912-14. For five summers I was story-teller, craft teacher, and dramatic councillor in a children's camp, where The Treasure Valley and some of the stories in Children of Ancient Britain were written for the boys and girls of the 'play age' at camp.

"I'd always told stories to children when the chance offered, but that experience confirmed the belief left over from my own childhood, that children like a story with real literary value better than trash. I think they naturally like history, Bible stories, folklore, and the great plays and novels, when put in a form they understand. Included in the material I have used in story form with children between seven and twelve are Ivanhoe, The Talisman, Merchant of Venice, The Tempest, and The Mysterious Island, which I told to the junior group of five-and-six-year-olds one year. I think little children always like desert-island stories. One year I had a 'dictionary class' to satisfy the youngsters who asked where words came from, and another year we made a Punch and Judy Show."

Miss Lamprey is listed in Who's Who in America and the following facts concerning her are of interest:

She was born at Alexandria, N. H., 17 Apr. 1869. Educated at home, Concord, N. H., High School 1884-5; B.L., Mount Holyoke College, 1891, the first year in which a college class graduated under the college charter granted in 1887, and the first year in which there was a Literary Course, afterward discontinued. Editorial writer, The Capital (weekly), Washington, D. C., 1894-1898; on the Washington Times (daily), 1896-1904, and writer in Republican National Campaign of 1904. Magazine, newspaper and secretarial work in New York, Washington and London, 1905 to 1919; with World Book Company, Yonkers, New York, 1916-18; edited three books for them and as co-author wrote two. Five summers in 1912, 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1919 as story-teller and craft teacher at children's camp, The Bluebird, East Berkshire, Vermont, founded by Mary Perle Anderson in 1912. Wrote and staged plays for the camp, also one for the Music School Settlement in New York, "The Pipes of Peter Pan," and one for the Laughing Loon Camp at East Waterboro, Maine, "Klooskap, the Magician." Has taught white and color embroidery, wood-carving, stenciling, basketry and doll-dressmaking to children's classes at camp and elsewhere. Guardian of Limerick Camp Fire Girls, Soan-ge-ta-ha Chapter, 1933. Went to England and Scotland, spring of 1912, and in the following December returned to London and remained until June, 1914, doing office work and writing.

Miss Lamprey resides at Limerick, Maine. Some of her most famous books are: In the Days of the Guild, Wonder Tales of Architecture, Great Days in American History Series (six books dealing with the outstanding events in American history from the time of Lief to the invention of the radio in the form of stories for children), The Alo Man, Natalia and Nikolai, Children of the Ancient World, The Treasure Valley (a story of the Third Crusade, written for children at camp), All the Ways of Building (a history of architecture for children), The Tomahawk Trail.

Miss Lamprey has also written the following facts concerning her sister, MYRA LAMPREY, who is a musician:

"My sister, MYRA, was born 21 Oct. 1878, in Northwood, N. H., educated in Concord High School and, as I remember, the Harold Bauer School in Boston, where she specialized in music."

40. REV. ANTHONY COLBY PICKERING WICKS⁴ HARDY (*Daniel*³, *Jonas*², *Major Jonas*¹), born at Lebanon, N. H., 13 Oct. 1828. He married, 30 Aug. 1848, ELIZA MARTIN of North Ferrisburgh, Vt. He died at Concord, N. H., 15 Sept. 1902, and she died Sept., 1922.

Rev. Anthony Colby Pickering Wicks Hardy received his preliminary education in the Lebanon public schools and at the seminary at Orford, N. H. He prepared to enter Dartmouth College, but was prevented from completing his college career for financial reasons; however, later Dartmouth conferred upon him the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

37. Information regarding children of Edwin Constantine Hardy furnished by Mrs. Eleanor (Hardy) Trusselle, a daughter, of Warsaw, N. Y.

He was licensed to preach in the Methodist Episcopal Church conference in 1861, and was made a Deacon in 1863. In 1866 he was made an elder. He served as a Chaplain during the Civil War, in the 18th New Hampshire Regiment. Rev. Anthony Hardy was never happy in his connection with the Methodist Church, having a decided leaning toward the Episcopal denomination. In 1894 he left the Methodist conference and applied to Bishop Niles for deacon's orders in the Episcopal Church. He was made a deacon in November, 1894. He did not contemplate active parish work, but acted as "supply" or assisted in other services as his health and opportunity would permit. He was known as a thorough student of biblical literature, and is still remembered as an eloquent speaker.

Rev. Anthony Colby Hardy, as he was more familiarly known, was more of an able educator and writer than clergyman. During the seventies he was Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of New Hampshire and he founded the State Normal School at Plymouth, N. H. From 1875 to 1878 he was Principal of the Penacook Normal Academy at Penacook, N. H. He was a frequent contributor to newspapers and magazines.

Eliza (Martin) Hardy was educated in the private academy in North Ferrisburgh where her husband had come to teach. His friends often heard him remark, jokingly, that in Eliza Martin he found a pupil so bright and interesting in every study, especially astronomy—which she studied as long as she lived—that he found it necessary to make it a life work. And so they were married!

She knew and understood children as few mothers do, and fully believed they had their rights as well as adults. From their earliest years, their children were taught to think for themselves and to act accordingly. She believed that "experience" was the only real teacher. She used to say: "How, otherwise, could I cope with eight different temperaments and dispositions?" She was gentle and kindly in her criticism and had the love and confidence of all her children.

Children:

1. JOSEPHINE ALMY, b. in June 1872; m. CHARLES GETCHELL.
 2. CLARA KENDRICK, b. in 1878; m. WILLARD HOLTON. They have one daughter, DOROTHY.
 3. HAROLD, b. 4 Nov. 1888; d. at Winchester, N. H., 16 Jan. 1901.
 4. MARION, b. 18 Sept. 1895; m. They have three sons.

- 94* iv. WALTER DANIEL⁵, b. at Lebanon, N. H., 27 June 1857; m. 1886, JANE RANDALL.
- 95 v. WILLIAM HENRY⁵, b. at Lebanon, N. H., 11 Sept. 1859; m. at Newton, Mass., June 1892, LOUISE BURBANK; d. Sept. 1892. No children.

Mrs. Louise Burbank Hardy became a widow two weeks after her marriage to William Henry Hardy, in 1892. He was killed in a railroad accident. She found comfort in deeds of charity, serving as house mother, without salary, for several years in one of the diocesan charities of Rhode Island, St. Andrew's School for Boys, founded by Rev. William M. Chapin. While there she had erected in 1897 a gymnasium, called the "Hardy Memorial", in memory of her husband, who also loved boys. It is said that when a youngster he would often take off his coat and his shoes to clothe bootblacks. After doing this, he would appear half-clad before his mother but always with the same apology: "Well, he needed them more than I did!"

- 96 vi. ELIZABETH MARY⁵, b. at Moultonboro, N. H., 30 Aug. 1861; m. 8 Apr. 1885, ARTHUR FARNHAM SHEPARD. She graduated from Penacook Hall Academy in 1878, and she taught for a short time before her marriage.

Elizabeth Hardy Shepard is first, last, and always a personality to whom the term "exquisite" may be aptly applied. Everything she does is with infinite care and detail, nothing is ever left to chance. Of herself she would say, most modestly, "I am nothing but a home-maker", but in the management of her home, in the preparation of the meals, in the entertainment of her friends, there is a certain individual touch that gives tone and charm to everything. From earliest womanhood she has always been a quiet, dignified, gracious, self-controlled lady of sterling character and a lovable personality. She is orderly not only in her personal appearance and her personal possession, but in her thoughts as well. She has ideas and ideals and a tenacity of purpose and strength of will which enables her to hold to those ideals and to accomplish in many instances objectives which at first seemed beyond possible attainment. This, no doubt, is due to the vital force of her religious life which permeates her whole being. She has a strong sense of the mystic and a faith which has helped her to overcome great obstacles both within and without herself. Her church affiliations are with the Episcopalians of which organization she has been throughout life a most devoted member. Below is given a copy of a page of the Warden's Report of the St. Andrew's School in Barrington, R. I. (The Arthur F. Shepard was the husband of Elizabeth Hardy, daughter of Rev. Anthony Colby Hardy.) The report was as follows:

"Twenty-five years ago on St. Andrew's Day we became owners of our first property. On December 1st, 1895, the deed was recorded of our possession of what is now Warden's House, with eight acres of land.

"This was the ancestral home of the Bicknell family, dated back in its own life to Revolutionary times. Today the house stands substantially unchanged. Its construction was so strong and massive that it now gives promise of as long a life as it did when its builders laid down their saws and hammers. The purchase of $2,000 was made by the unsolicited and unexpected gift of $1,000 from Mrs. Charles A. Warland of Pawtucket, to which was added various other contributions, mainly through Bishop Clark's solicitation.

"In the two previous years of the School's existence, the boys had been moved in and out of five dwelling places; one was the Walcott barn at Rumstick, in which the school originated, and another, where there was absolutely no roof at all, the little building which the boys themselves constructed. This is now preserved as 'The Little Sanctuary.'

"In March of the same year a lease of this property for three years had been underwritten by several (then) young men, as a more permanent home for the school.

"The house was in a deplorable condition and had to be entirely purged and renovated. The great amount of work necessary to be done was appalling to our limited means. Just at this time a young man happened to be in town who was touched with sympathy and offered his services without compensation. His knowledge, skill and energy worked out the whole problem with the boys' assistance, and provided a wholesome and comfortable home for the boys when we brought them to occupy it.

"This was the beginning of Arthur F. Shepard's association with the school, and the beginning of a devotion which has gone on with increasing consecration. He is more than the invaluable and indispensable Vice-Warden, he is a part of the life of the school. It is not too much to say that he had given his life to St. Andrew's School and St. Andrew's School has given its life to him, for they have lived for each other. All our progress has been largely shaped by him, much of the training of the boys and the execution of our plans. Every building of our plant is a better building in itself, and more perfectly adapted to our use because of his suggestions and ideas. The Hardy building, the Cottage, Printing House and the new laundry are entirely his planning. He is really their architect. How great his faithfulness and loyalty have been, and how vital, only the Warden can know. Such a record cannot be allowed to pass unnoticed. It is too great a source of pride and honor to the school itself."

Mr. Shepard remained with the school described above until his health forced him to retire. The "Hardy Building" was a memorial to Mrs. Shepard's brother, William Henry Hardy, given by the latter's widow.

Arthur F. and Elizabeth Hardy Shepard had one daughter, MARGARET ELIZABETH, b. 30 Sept. 1886. She graduated from Wellesley College in 1909. An excerpt from "The Record of the Class of 1909" of Wellesley College, 1909-1914, written by Margaret herself, reads as follows:

"The years have been busy ones, although I can record no fame nor degrees attached to my name—not even an "M.A."—though I am married! The years 1909-1910 I spent at Hope Farm, a school founded by Bishop Greer, in Verbank, N. Y., where I taught children rescued from New York City, of all ages and conditions. It was a fascinating year in a most glorious country, and full of interesting, even exciting experiences; and like all pioneer work, this had its very rough periods as well as its periods of success. It was hard to leave the work, but a 'call' came to teach in my own home high school, and it seemed wise to come back and live with my lonely father and mother. In 1909-10-11 I studied towards a Master's degree at Brown University—along with my teaching—but gave up my ambition for it the following year—as I became assistant principal in the high school, which meant more work! I proceeded in this course until June, 1913, and on October 4th, I married Henry Edwin Fowler—Brown 1909; Harvard Law, 1910; 1912 admitted to the Rhode Island Bar, and practicing in Providence, R. I. At present I am engaged in the happy task of keeping house—and helping the outside world to run wherever it seems to need me."

Margaret Shepard Fowler died of the flu in the fall of 30 Sept. 1918. Her pastor, Rev. William M. Chapin, of St. Andrew's School, Barrington, R. I., said of her:

"She was so much to us all. She had grown up here from childhood; from here had gone to college, coming home in vacations and bringing her friends with her to brighten the lives of us all. We had taken pride in the high rank and name which she made at Wellesley College, and we were all a part of her happy marriage. . . . The unusual gifts of originality of Mrs. Fowler were devoted to our boys' instruction and entertainment, for her whole heart was in St. Andrew's School."

To Margaret Shepard and Henry E. Fowler was born one daughter, ELIZABETH, 17 May 1915. She is now (1934-1935) attending college at Colorado Springs, Colo., on a year's leave of absence from Pembroke College in Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Her husband died at East Concord, N. H., 16 Apr. 1926. The following newspaper account appeared in connection with his death:

"Mr. Robinson was one of the city's best known business men and had been active for years in public affairs relating to his own community in East Concord and in the city as a whole. He served three years as a member of the Legislature from East Concord, always being assigned to important committees. At the session just ended, Mr. Robinson was clerk of the Merrimack County delegation.

"Mr. Robinson was born in East Concord, the son of Cyrus and Mary Eastman Robinson. He was a member of Eureka Lodge, A. F. & A. She died at Bradford, Vt., 13 Apr. 1874. She was the daughter of WILLIAM and SYBIL (HEALD) CLARK of Kennebec County, Maine, where she was born. He died at the home of his daughter-in-law, MRS. MARIA L. HARDY, Fairlee, Vt., 17 Oct. 1874, in his 69th year.

Like his father before him, Johnson Arad Hardy was endowed with inventive genius. He was a jeweler by profession and opened the first scientific clock, watch and jewelry establishment in his home town in October, 1829. It has been said of him that he made a record for the number of timepieces cleaned and repaired. In nearly fifty years he cleaned, repaired and attended to at least 33,000 watches. In one year he put in order actually

1,333 watches, to say nothing of other timepieces that he worked on. He planned and made a valuable clock which required winding only once a month. This he gave to the Congregational Church of Bradford, of which he was a member, and it still remains in the gallery of the church, a memorial to his liberality and genius.³⁸

51. SAMUEL AUGUSTUS⁵ HARDY (*Ozias*⁴, *Silas*³, *Jonas*², *Major Jonas*¹), born at Hopkinton, N. H., 19 Feb. 1829. He married at Hopkinton, 11 Nov. 1858, ABBY ANN PUTNEY, who was born 15 May 1842. He died 4 Apr. 1904. She died 17 Aug. 1886.

Samuel Hardy was a prosperous farmer and resided near Contoocook, N. H., on his father's farm. He bought tracts of timber land and sold logs for ship masts.

Samuel Augustus Hardy was affectionately referred to by not only his close relatives but by nearly everybody in his neighborhood as "Uncle Sam." He was one of those typical, thrifty, proud, honest and honorable New Englanders whose name was as good as his bond. Being the oldest son of the family, according to the custom of the times, he provided a home for the older relatives. He continued to manage his father's farms, and he himself lived all his life at the old homestead where he was born. Although the court records show many deeds of transfers of tracts of land to him, there is no record of his having sold property, so that he probably was one of the largest property owners of his time in New Hampshire. He owned land in Hopkinton, Henniker and Warner.

By nature he was studious and inquisitive. He took great pride in being well informed. He was a prolific reader, reading about current events and becoming familiar with the best books, scientific and otherwise. He had a great love for poetry and memorized many poems. He taught poems to his children by reciting them during the long winter evenings. In 1893 he showed his continued interest in world affairs by going to the World's Fair at Chicago with his three brothers, Woodbury, Charles and Sanford. His honesty and integrity are still remembered and remarked about by those neighbors who survive him. It is said that when he made a sale of wood, lumber, or any other farm product he used to give the buyer "extra measure." It was a sad day among the people of Hopkinton and vicinity when "Uncle Sam" passed to his reward.

Soon after marriage, in the spring of 1862, this young couple, with a son only two months old, left for Illinois, near Marengo, where Mr. Hardy obtained employment on a farm. In the following August he answered the call for volunteers in the Civil War, enlisting in Company E of the 95th Illinois Regiment. He served three years, until the close of the war. In the meantime, his wife and son returned to her home at Peabody, Mass., to remain until her husband was mustered out. Mr. Hardy was educated in the common schools, and later graduated from Contoocook Academy. When twenty years of age he was employed on a farm near Danvers, Mass., where he remained for one year. Then, returning home, he became a farm assistant near Hopkinton. In 1860 he went to Illinois, where he became a foreman on a large farm. He held this position for five years, when he decided to return to his native State. In 1872 he purchased one of the finest and most fertile farms in Merrimack County, at Boscawen, N. H. The farm consisted of 135 acres. He died there 1 Jan. 1903. His widow is still living at Boscawen.⁴²

55. SANFORD⁵ HARDY (Ozias⁴, Silas³, Jonas², Major Jonas¹), born at Hopkinton, N. H., 13 Jul. 1836. He married, first, 20 Oct. 1859, probably at Freemont, Ill., LOUISE SANFORD, who was a school teacher. She died at Aurora, Ill., 11 Dec. 1863, at the age of 25 years. He married, second, 7 May 1868, ANTOINETTE ELOISE BARR, who was born at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., 7 May 1843. She was the daughter of OLIVER and MELINDA (GRIFFIN) BARR. Her father was an ordained minister of the Christian Church. He was employed for a time by the Bible School at Antioch, Ohio, an institution of which Horace Mann was formerly President. SANFORD HARDY died at Aurora, Ill., 17 Oct. 1896. His second wife died 17 Feb. 1910.

Sanford Hardy made good use of his time when growing to manhood. He studied diligently nights and was ambitious for a good education. He attended the common schools and graduated from the village academy. He move to Illinois when he was twenty-one years old. His first employment was on a farm, but later he took up teaching school. During the winters he attended "singing school." In 1862, when Lincoln asked for 600,000 volunteers in the Civil War, he enlisted in the 95th Illinois Regiment. He was mustered out in January, 1863. He was stricken with typhoid fever early in his service and was sent to the hospital at Jackson, Tenn., where he remained for fourteen weeks. The doctors had given him up to die, but gradually he gained strength, largely through his will to live, and he was taken to a farm for convalescence at Hampshire, Ill. Fire broke out in the house where he was living then with his invalid wife. She had to be brought out of the house in a rocking chair, and all that was saved of the household goods were the quilts with which she was wrapped. After his first wife's death, Mr. Hardy resumed teaching at Montgomery, Ill. Many of his former pupils to this day remember him with great affection and admiration.

Mr. Hardy was a devout Christian. He was one of a group of men to organize the first Y. M. C. A. in the city of Aurora, Ill. He was a member of the First M. E. Church of that city. He engaged in the coal business about 1870, but business did not interfere with his desire to assist in religious work. He organized and carried on for years a Sunday School for poorer children in the district adjacent to Stolps Island. He conducted this school in the Y. M. C. A. building, which was then located on the island near the East Bridge of Fox River. A believer in temperance, he was influential in the promotion of the temperance movement. He was an active member of the G. A. R., and in politics he was a Republican. His health began to fail, and in May, 1887, he withdrew from the busy life of the city to a farm in Sugar Grove Township, four miles west of Aurora. It was there that he died 17 Oct. 1896.

Anson Reuben Hardy attended the local schools at Lansing, and entered business. Later he became identified with many financial undertakings and was elected President of one of Lansing's banks. 78. DAVID PEABODY⁵ HARDY (Ichabod Packard⁴, Daniel³, Jonas², Major Jonas¹), born at Groton, N. H., 21 Aug. 1838. He married, 1 May 1859, SARAH DIANTHA FOX. He died at Franklin, N. H., 2 Apr. 1913. She died at Franklin, 24 Mar. 1930.

David Peabody Hardy spent his boyhood days in Groton, Rumney and Lebanon, N. H., and attended the district schools in those places. He also attended Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, N. H., for a short period of time. He began his career as a home-builder, working for his father and living in one of his father's tenements.

In the winter he drove a six-ox team, hauling logs from his father's lumber land to his saw mill. His labors were supposed to begin at 3 o'clock in the morning and to continue until after dark in the evening. While those hours were fairly satisfactory to him as a general rule, he occasionally resented the three o'clock schedule, especially after he had spent the first part of the night at a dance.

The wages of that period were very small, and as he saw the opportunity to earn more money as a blacksmith, he learned that trade. With a small amount of cash and a large amount of credit, he bought a good farm at Hebron, N. H., and established himself in a blacksmith shop at the same time. Thus, at 26 years of age, he had an attractive home, even though it was encumbered with a large mortgage. He worked about twice as hard as his neighbors and managed to liquidate the mortgage. In the meantime, his family was increasing in numbers.

He never consulted his family as to what should be done, and every morning it was his custom to announce the schedule for the day. He was very systematic about his work. His garden was always the first of the neighborhood to be planted, his haying never lagged, his crops invariably were gathered in season, the fences were repaired in the springtime, maple sugar was made at the proper time, logging was done to furnish sufficient timber for the repairing of buildings and fences, an enormous woodpile was never allowed to diminish—all of which required many weeks of industry during the winter season. Rainy days for him furnished time for mending tools, blacksmithing and odd jobs. The blacksmithing fitted into what would be slack time for most farmers, as the heaviest of it came in the fall, when horses and oxen not only had to be shod but their shoes had to be sharpened to prevent slipping on the ice. He always worked from daylight to dark in the long summer days. In the shorter winter days he worked in the early morning and evening by lantern light. On moonlight nights he was known to accomplish the equivalent of another day's work during the night. His ability to accomplish a prodigious amount of work was enhanced by his unusual gift of orderliness. As every tool was always in its place and kept in perfect repair, no time was lost in hunting for them or in extra labor because the edges were dull or out of order. He did not miscalculate, and have accidents. Instinctively, he knew how to do the right thing in difficult places, guiding his ox or horse team, heavily loaded, over rough and precipitous areas that most men would think impossible to traverse.

Although he took pride in his thoroughbred cattle, he was especially fond of horses, always having good ones, but he was not, like many of his neighbors of the time, a "horse trader." He spent some forty-odd years on a big farm, but in all that time he had only three spans of horses, with occasionally an extra one added. His working spans were so well trained that he could "gee" and "haw" them all over the fields plowing or haying without touching the reins. His horses had confidence in him and willingly undertook trips over rough roads, through deep snows. They would often ford rivers for him if he had the reins in his hand.

In March, 1869, he sold the smaller farm and purchased another larger one, containing 300 acres. The latter had formerly been owned at different times by his grandfather and also by his father. At the time it was considered the best farm in Hebron. The venture, however, took place at a rather unfortunate time, because the purchase of the farm, together with the stock and necessary implements, was made when interest on loans and the prices of commodities were high following the Civil War. Shortly thereafter, values gradually decreased. It required, therefore, the greater part of the remaining years of his life to liquidate fully the indebtedness incurred, but he did it! Aside from carrying the farm mortgage, he never ran up bills anywhere or allowed the members of his family to do so. Cash had to be paid for every purchase. Nothing was bought until it could be paid for.

He differed from every other man in the countryside in his dress. He was an exceedingly proud man, and always owned a fine broadcloth suit with a Prince Albert coat which he donned on special occasions. For everyday wear, although he farmed for more than fifty years, he never wore a pair of overalls. Besides, regardless of the type of work at which he was engaged, he always insisted on wearing a white shirt with a stiffly starched bosom!

Mr. Hardy was a large man, both physically and mentally, for in his later years he weighed 240 pounds and wore a $7\frac{3}{4}$ sized hat. He was very strong and active. He was good at figures, had excellent judgment, and was a natural leader of men. He was highly respected, being most honest and honorable, but he was somewhat feared by those who knew him, for it must be admitted that he had one rather noticeable fault. He had a high temper which showed itself when he considered some injustice or something hypocritical had been done. On those rather rare occasions, the victim of his wrath must have thought lightning had struck him, for the language used seemed inspired, although unprintable. He hated cant and the slightest evasion of the law or any tendency to dishonesty. His ability to judge the real character of a person was almost uncanny. No thickness of veneer could deceive him. His children remember him as a masterful man, one of large calibre whose greatness increases with the passing of the years.

He held many public offices. He was town clerk, first selectman, road surveyor, and served on the local school committee.⁴³

Sarah Diantha (Fox) Hardy, the daughter of David Page and Sally Powers Fox, was born at Groton, N. H., 1 Nov. 1840; married, 1 May 1859, David Peabody Hardy of Groton, N. H.; died 24 March 1930 at Franklin, N. H.

Diantha, as she was always called, was only two generations removed from early settler days, for her grandmother, Esther Powers, was a pioneer woman who went with her husband into the primeval forest, where they built a log cabin, cleared the land for a farm, and reared twelve children. Thus it was natural that Diantha was trained to be a resourceful home-maker in the truest sense of the word, skilled in every department of this art. She not only did the usual cleaning, laundering and cooking connected with a household, but she was also an adept with dairy products (butter and cheese making); with maple sugar making in its various forms of syrup, "tub", cakes, and "dry" sugar—it was a prodigious and very painstaking task to stir down, each year, one barrel of dry, pulverized, maple sugar without scorching the "batch" and having the same free from large, hard lumps; with soap making (a hogshead of it, made from a combination of the lye leached from wood ashes and the annual accumulation of fat scraps) ; and with the preserving of fruits and curing the products that came with the "butchering" season—lard, salt pork, pickled and smoked hams, corned and dried beef, hog's head cheese and sausage.

Being an expert at the spinning wheel, she prepared all the yarn, even to coloring it either a blue in the indigo dye pot or a brown made by steeping butternut shells. This yarn she knitted into stockings and mittens for her whole family. She was skilled in dressmaking and in tailoring, for, in the early years of her married life, she not only made the clothing for herself and her daughters but also most of that for her husband and son. Her needle work was exquisite, as is shown by her collar and cuff sets and the scalloped edgings done in elaborate patterns of button-hole stitch and eyelet work and in laces made by tatting and crochet.

She "doctored" her family through what illnesses they had and herself never knew the ministrations of a physician or trained nurse when she gave birth to her six children.

To provide for the physical needs of her large family necessitated long days of hard toil, but she did far more than to minister to the bodies of her children. She saw that they had the best education obtainable, and she "cyphered" through the arithmetics with them during the evenings, she read good books to them, and she played games with them. She sent them to church and Sunday School, to singing school and choir rehearsals. She herself was musical, possessing a soprano voice of such unusual quality that she was the "leading" singer in her young womanhood. She was naturally artistic and did several pieces of creditable work in crayons, pencil drawing and Oriental painting. She was a nature lover and, by her own efforts, she learned to "analyze" flowers for their identification, to know the native ferns, mosses and trees, to identify the birds, and even to call by name the stars of first magnitude and all the principal constellations. Her annual bird records, in her later years, had over 100 species, and her wild flower list, one year, was over 400 species.

After her children ceased to be too young to be left in the care of the older ones, and in the years after they left home, she was able to take more active part in neighborhood affairs. She attended church (she and her six children were all members of the Congregational Church at Hebron, N. H.), she taught in the Sunday School, she assisted the Town Clerk, she held offices in the local Grange and furnished papers for their programs, and she served on the School Board.

In spite of her lack in early life of "advanced" educational opportunities, she attained for herself an enviable education in things pertaining to her environment. In perfection of character she surpassed any other person we have ever known. She had a wonderful disposition and was the most unselfish person we can ever imagine. She was possessed of high ideals, patience, endurance and Christian fortitude. No wonder that she was respected in the community, that she was an inspiration to her children, dearly loved by all who knew her best, and cherished in memory as a woman of unusual ability and of a character beyond reproach. And life was sweet and she was loved by others because she had fitted herself so completely and with so little friction into her particular environment.⁴⁴

After graduation she was a very successful teacher for fifteen or more years, teaching in many New Hampshire towns and also in Monson, Mass., and Leominster, Mass. She, like all the other members of her family, was musical and sang in various church choirs in the communities where she was residing. On 25 Dec. 1898 she married ORIN M. SMITH of Stowe, Vt., and they lived in Stowe, Morrisville and Moscow, Vt., and Contoocook, N. H. She has always been prominently connected with church and temperance work, active as Sunday School teacher and superintendent of the Sunday School, and has been a faithful attendant of all church services. Since 1926, she has lived in Franklin, N. H., where she is a member of the Hospital Aid Society, the W. C. T. U., and the Franklin Woman's Club.

- 134* ii. EDWARD DANA⁶, b. 19 June 1864, in Hebron, N. H.; m. 4 Oct. 1893 in Washington, D. C., to Mary Noud.
- 135 iii. ELLEN EMELINE⁶, b. 16 July 1867, in Hebron, N. H.; m. 29 June 1893, CLARENDON PHILLIPS WEBSTER, who was born at Three Rivers, Canada, 14 Oct. 1857, and died at Franklin, N. H., 24 Mar. 1918.

Ellen Emeline Hardy Webster attended the local district school. As a young girl, she worked out, as they used to say, and received twenty-five cents a week for her services. She had her lodging and breakfasts at home. She did ironing, washed and wiped dishes, picked and prepared vegetables, washed floors, and, if the truth were known, got terribly weary with the long day's work. She ventured once to ask the lady for whom she was employed if she could not be paid five cents a day but only to learn that 25c per week was the limit. She attended Monson Academy, Monson, Mass., where she worked for her room and board for one year. She then took a position as teacher of a district school in order to earn money for more study. She then entered the New Hampton Institution from which she graduated. She then became an instructor in the Bishop Hopkins Hall School for Girls at Burlington, Vt., where she remained until her marriage to Doctor Webster in 1893.

After her husband's death in 1918, she started out again to further her education. At fifty years of age she entered Boston University as a freshman and completed the regular course, receiving the degrees of B.R.E. and M.A. Immediately she was appointed to a position on the faculty of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., where she was Assistant Professor of Biblical History and Literature. She held this position for twelve years, and taught Freshman English, all the books of the Bible and Apocrypha, historically and from the point of view of literature, church history down to the Reformation, and history of the living religions.

Mrs. Webster has had a varied and interesting career. She has always been active in church work and has held practically every church position that could be held by a woman, being organist, choir director, Sunday School teacher, president of the Ladies' Aid, president of the missionary society, etc. She has held many local civic positions of trust and responsibility, and is today one of the most highly respected citizens of her home town, Franklin, N. H. She has been president of the Village Improvement Society, president of the Woman's Club of Franklin, president of the Audubon Society, trustee and collector for Golden Rule Farm, an institution for delinquent boys. She has traveled extensively in this country, Canada and Newfoundland, and has also been abroad, traveling in Europe, Egypt, Palestine, and Syria. She is in great demand as a lecturer on a variety of subjects. She has filled as many as forty speaking engagements in one year. She is probably one of New Hampshire's foremost authorities on needle work, quilts and other achievements of early New England housewives.

Her husband, Dr. Clarendon P. Webster, was the son of Charles Gardner and Mary Burley (Cawley) Webster. His father was an engineer and surveyor of lumber, being employed by a large lumber company of Lowell, Mass., and temporarily stationed at Three Rivers, Canada, where Clarendon was born. When the family returned to the states, he was less than a year old. His father soon moved to Campton, N. H., where the young son received the usual schooling. Later he attended a private school at Thornton, N. H., then going to the Boston Dental and finally graduating from the Philadelphia Dental College in 1884. Dr. Webster entered into partnership with Dr. A. A. Marden of Franklin, N. H. He soon purchased Dr. Marden's practice. So conscientious and expert was he that patrons came from long distances to secure his services. During the last part of his life, appointments were made for weeks ahead. He was painstaking in all his work. He was an artist and master mechanic. He fashioned a set of silver cuff buttons from old silver thimbles. He made the wedding ring for his bride, mixing the alloy with his office gold, shaping it into a band, forming it into the circle and soldering it. No expert jeweller could surpass his workmanship. He made two cases for skeleton rifles. These were of walnut wood with the corners of the cases bound in brass. They were lined with soft cloth and fitted to hold the rifles and ammunition, and some fishing tackle. He was also an amateur photographer, and did work that gained recognition for its artistic qualities.

Dr. Webster was always public spirited and took an active part in community and church affairs. He was an officer in the local Y. M. C. A. and was president of the New Hampshire Dental Society. For several years, he was the local weather observer for the U. S. Government. He was trustee, treasurer, registrar, superintendent of the Sunday School, and deacon in the Baptist Church of Franklin. It was his practice to give a tenth of his income to the church and no vacations could ever be taken unless his quota for church expenses had been met. A more sincere, honest and kind man never lived. There was one man in Franklin whom even the scoffers of religion respected because of his genuine Christian living, and that was Dr. Clarendon P. Webster. His name is honored and revered by all who knew him.

She was organist for several years in the Hebron Church, of which she was a member, and active in the Young People's Christian Endeavor, as long as her health permitted, often having the meetings in her own home. She and her husband belonged to the Olive Branch Grange, in which organization they were both active, serving in several of the offices and contributing in the literary programs and music for the meetings. She was a leading soprano singer in church choirs in the various towns in which she lived, and in 1906-7 she was prominent in organizing the Franklin Choral Society, serving as its secretary and being one of its most ardent workers. At the age of sixteen years, she and her twin sister, LIZZIE BELLE, united with the Hebron Congregational Church in which their church activities begun and through all the later years these activities have been continued in the churches with which they have been associated in the communities in which they have lived. She was a woman of considerable business ability and fitted herself as a bookkeeper and accountant and has filled positions of trust in Natick, Mass., and in Andover, N. H., being associated with the Consolidated Hame Company in the latter place, for nearly five years as bookkeeper and accountant. In Andover she became acquainted with ELBERT D. CURRIER, whom she married Oct. 1, 1902, at the Hardy Homestead in Hebron. They went to reside in Franklin, N. H., where Mr. Currier was located as a photographer in The Currier Studio and she has since been a business

In Boston Mr. Currier had experience in retouching and studio work. He began the study of photography at the age of 19 years and has been engaged in that occupation ever since. He came to Franklin, N. H., in September, 1901, since which time he has conducted The Currier Studio, being familiar with all branches of photographic work, to which he has untiringly devoted his time, continually studying the new developments in the art in which he has always been interested.

Lucius Martin Hardy prepared himself for educational work and his first teaching position was in St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C. From there he went to St. Paul's School at Salem, N. H. He then was invited to become Principal of Yeates Institute in Lancaster, Pa., where he was ordained a deacon in the Episcopal Church. This was in 1882. A few years later he was called to take charge of Bishop Hopkins Hall School for girls at Burlington, Vt. He remained there until 1894, when Bishop Hopkins ordained him to the priesthood in the Episcopal Church.

From 1894 to 1899, Rev. Lucius Martin Hardy was rector of St. Philip's Church at Crompton, R. I. He was then named rector of Christ Church at Pomfret, Conn., where he remained until his death. He was Archdeacon of New London, Conn., from 1892 until he finally resigned that office a short time before he died in 1907. On the day of his funeral, a special committee was appointed by the Bishop from among the eighteen vested clergymen in attendance at the burial service to draw up a memorial statement. The memorial resolution adopted was as follows:

The committee appointed by the Bishop from among the eighteen vested clergymen in attendance at the burial service of the Rev. Lucius Martin Hardy — sometime Archdeacon of the New London Archdeaconry — at Christ Church, Pomfret, Conn., on Thursday, January 2, 1908, offers the following minute as an expression of appreciation:

The world of our day has fixed upon the Canon that it is not the office that counts but the man. Without conceding all that some would include in the dictum, one may yet see in it a considerable modicum of truth. And it is truth that was well illustrated in our departed brother. For Lucius Hardy was, first of all, a man—a man of large heart and broad, sympathetic nature. In part, doubtless, this came to him by endowment. He was gifted with a warm, genial temperament. But what he added to his native bent by the grace of God and the force of his own will was by no means inconsiderable. It made him uniformly courteous, affable, kindly, sympathetic. It enabled him to preserve his faith and his serenity under severe trials. It gave him tact and charity in his dealings with others. It won for him hosts of friends who felt that, before all things else, he was a man, benignant, gracious, broad-hearted and judged him as priest by the man behind the office. The one was well attuned to the other. And so it was as an administrator. Mr. Hardy made an excellent Archdeacon—having a realizing sense of its responsibilities. Mr. Hardy was a man of scholarly tastes. He had read largely and widely, and had the faculty of readily absorbing what he read. His long experience as a head-master had helped to develop in him habits of clear thinking and exact statement. Though a man of firm convictions and pronounced views, he endeavored to keep his mind receptive to new light. He had individualized himself to an extent that had made itself felt beyond the borders both of his parish and diocese, and leaves behind him a large circle of friends who will sincerely mourn his loss. “May light perpetual shine upon him!”

134. EDWARD DANA⁶ HARDY (*David Peabody*⁵, *Ichabod Packard*⁴, *Daniel*³, *Jonas*², *Major Jonas*¹), born at Hebron, N. H., 19 June 1864. He married, 4 Oct. 1893, MARY NOUD, daughter of JAMES and IREMA NOUD, a school teacher.

Edward Dana Hardy, like many other famous Americans, began life on a farm. He attended school at the nearest district school and, while not attracting attention because of brilliant achievement in textbook assignments, his teachers soon discovered that they had under their direction a budding genius. This young lad, who was later to become one of the nation's outstanding inventors and engineers, as will be noticed later, was always shy, modest and retiring, but nevertheless alert, industrious and creative. No doubt the problems of farm life irked him and he longed to devise some short-cut to make farm experiences easier to endure. In his boyhood days he planned and put into operation simple labor saving devices to the amusement and pleasure of other members of the family. Moreover, Edward Dana Hardy knew even then what he wanted to do for a life's work. He was going to be a civil engineer, he announced one day, to the surprise of the entire family, and that was at a time when few people understood what the term "civil engineer" meant in the hills of New Hampshire.

Well, this quiet, reticent, ambitious young man was not to be frustrated in his desire to become a civil engineer, and with more courage than money he entered Dartmouth College. The story of his struggles to stay in college and complete his course is an interesting narrative in itself. Mr. Hardy looks back to those days of scanty rations and hard work with some pride, notwithstanding the fact that the ordeal was a soul-trying one at the time. He knows now that such an experience had considerable value in preparing for the career that was to make him stand out among the civil engineers of the nation.

Graduating from the Thayer School of Civil Engineering connected with Dartmouth College in April, 1891, Mr. Hardy was invited to take a position in the U. S. Engineer Office of the War Department, and he remained in that office until his retirement in June, 1934. For more than forty years he worked quietly, but made a record that speaks for itself. Nobody, not even his closest friends and relatives, will ever know the many inventions that he conceived for the United States Government. If the truth were known, he was tempted many times to capitalize on his inventive ability, and, if he had done so, he would today be one of America's richest men, but no! He owed everything to Uncle Sam. As a trusted employe of the nation, his duty to the government came first. And, besides, he never talked about his achievements! Others with half his ability would have told the world everything. Others would have advertised themselves far and wide. This sort of thing always seemed cheap and unworthy in the mind of Edward Dana Hardy.

It would be difficult indeed to outline fully, even in general terms, Mr. Hardy's brilliant career as a scientist and engineer. Between 1891 and 1898 he served as surveyor, estimator and inspector on various river and harbor works carried on by the corps of engineers of the U. S. Army in the Washington, D. C., District. On 19 December 1898 he was placed in complete charge of the task of providing the capital city with an adequate and sanitary water supply. The present unsurpassed water system of Washington, which cost more than twelve millions of dollars, may be said to be a monument to his genius. The reclamation of the low, muddy flats along the Potomac River in the vicinity of Washington is another example of his planning and engineering accomplishments. The present, beautiful Potomac Park, for the most part, is the result of his designing.

Mr. Hardy rose in rank as his services gradually attracted attention. His titles, in the order given, were as follows: Rodman, Assistant Engineer, Inspector, Draftsman, Assistant Engineer, Superintendent, Assistant Engineer, Associate Engineer, Senior Engineer, and Principal Engineer. The latter title is the highest that can be given an engineer in U. S. Government service. His superiors in office frequently took note of his outstanding work, and their official reports contain such complimentary references as the following: "A highly competent engineer, both in design and construction"; "An expert in water supply engineering"; "He can design any kind of structure, and is especially experienced in concrete and reinforced design"; "A thorough knowledge of hydraulics"; "Has kept alert to new developments and changing situations"; "Mr. Hardy's value to this District is hard to estimate"; "No other assistant engineer could replace him, for, so far as I know, he is the only water supply expert in the employ of the Department"; etc.⁵²

A testimonial dinner was given by the Washington, D. C., Engineering District to Edward Dana Hardy at the Army and Navy Country Club, 29 June 1934, upon his retirement as Principal Engineer of the United States Engineer Department. The guests of honor, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dana Hardy, were: Major General E. M. Markham, Miss Grace Markham, Colonel and Mrs. W. T. Hannum, and Major and Mrs. Brehon Somervell. Forty-five prominent residents of Washington, D. C., with Lieut. Col. John C. H. Lee, District Engineer in charge, acted as hosts. The affair was one of more than ordinary significance, since Mr. Hardy was then completing forty-three years of quiet but eminently important and fruitful service. Ninety-five guests were present to join in paying homage and tribute to one of America's most brilliant engineers, whose works will live after him for years and probably centuries. A beautiful watch was presented to Mr. Hardy on this occasion, and in addition a testimonial booklet signed by all present in appreciation of the long and faithful service as a member of the United States Engineer Office was given to him amidst applause. The "Narrative" which formed the preface of the booklet was as follows:

Edward Dana Hardy, born at Hebron, New Hampshire, June 19, 1864. Attended the schools in that State and graduated in 1891, with the degree of Civil Engineer, from the Thayer School of Civil Engineering, connected with Dartmouth College. During vacations, engaged on railroad construction in his home State.

52. The citations above are excerpts taken from a letter written by Major M. C. Tyler, District Engineer in 1922. Major Tyler recommended in his letter an increase in salary for Mr. Hardy for various reasons, including those given above. The Major's recommendation was approved by the U. S. Government.

After graduation, came to Washington, D. C., and entered the United States Engineer Office under the direction of Colonel Peter C. Hains, Corps of Engineers. Worked on river and harbor improvements for about eight years, and then entered upon duty under the office of the Washington Aqueduct in charge of Colonel A. M. Miller, Corps of Engineers.

Designed and supervised construction of the McMilland slow sand filtration plant. Devised and placed in operation the sand washing apparatus and sand storage bins used in the mechanical handling, removing and replacing of sand in the 29 filter beds of one acre each. Served as superintendent of the plant.

Designed and supervised construction of the Dalecarlia rapid sand filtration plant, and the nine-mile conduit from the Great Falls of the Potomac, together with the tunnels, reservoirs, power plant and auxiliaries connected therewith. Served as superintendent of the entire water supply and purification system to the date of his retirement for age on June 30, 1934.

Author of numerous discussions appearing in the transactions of the American Society of Civil Engineers and of reports appearing in public documents.

The "Testimonial" itself read as follows:

We, who are only a few of the many friends and associates of Edward Dana Hardy, Principal Engineer and Superintendent of the Washington Aqueduct, Water Supply and Purification Systems, feel that we can but inadequately express and pay tribute by this writing, of our deep sense of appreciation and admiration for the qualities which have animated him in all of his activities connected with the public service. A man endowed with the highest integrity, practicing the true principles of engineer and friend, courteous and kind always, he departs from us for a well earned and deserved retirement, and leaves with us a feeling that we are the better for having enjoyed his friendship and counsel. His personality has graced the office for some forty-three years and the severance of official ties engenders feelings of profound personal loss.

We extend to him our best wishes for his continued good health and for an abundance of contentment and joy throughout the coming years.

Incidentally, many prominent army officers who were unable to attend the testimonial dinner to Mr. Hardy wrote him letters of appreciation which will be preserved with much pride by the family.

CHAPTER VIII

JONAS HARDY FAMILY OF SULLIVAN COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

1. JONAS¹ HARDY, born at Hull, England, 17 Aug. 1793; died 19 Aug. 1871; married, first ———; married, second, MARY ELDRED; married, third, MRS. NANCY BOYLE.

Jonas Hardy came to America as a young man and settled in Sullivan County, Pennsylvania. His father was a prominent manufacturer in the city of Hull, England, being the proprietor of woolen mills. The fact that the son's name was Jonas has led to the speculation that perhaps his father's Christian name was also Jonas. Moreover, this speculation has suggested the possibility of relationship to Major Jonas Hardy of the British Army, in charge of the garrison outside of Boston, Mass., during the French and Indian War. If there was a relationship between the two families, then this Jonas Hardy was a relative also of Thomas Hardy and his brothers, who came to America with Governor Winthrop about 1630.¹

Jonas Hardy did not remain long in Pennsylvania, for many pioneer families were pushing further westward soon after his arrival in this country. About 1838 he removed to Albion, Edwards County, Illinois.

Children by first wife, born in Sullivan County, Pa.:

- 2 i. WILLIAM², b. 8 Mar. 1818; m. ELIZA HEAN, 2 June 1844.

- 12 xi. GEORGE W.², b. 24 Mar. 1837.
- 13 xii. MARY E.², b. 5 Oct. 1838.

11. URIAH W.² HARDY (*Jonas*¹), born in Sullivan County, Pa., 18 Jan. 1836; died at Canton, Pa., 13 Feb. 1885; married, 4 Oct. 1869, ESTHER VIRGINIA MOORHEAD, born at Richmond, Ohio, 19 Sept. 1846, died at Albion, Ill., 1 Mar. 1888.

Mr. Hardy was a farmer, and went to Albion, Edwards County, Illinois, with his parents about 1838. He lived for a short time after marriage at Abingdon, Ill., later removing to the place of his birth. He was educated for the ministry in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) at Christian College, Abingdon.

Hon. Guy Urban Hardy was born on a farm at Abingdon, Ill. He attended the Albion, Ill., Normal School from 1888 to 1890. He then transferred to Transylvania University at Lexington, Ky., graduating in 1894.

In November, 1894, he went to Canon City, Colo., and obtained a position on the Canon City Weekly Record. In July of the following year he became the owner and editor of this newspaper, which he shortly after converted into a daily journal. The Canon City Daily Record today is an outstanding success in the small city field, and its success is largely due to the high standards which Mr. Hardy has imposed. On the front page of every issue is this statement of policy :

Devoted to Betterment of Industrial and Civic Conditions; to Development of Natural Resources; to Education and Improvements; to Higher Ideals and to Presentation of News and Views Impartially.

Mr. Hardy has always taken a keen interest in every forward-looking and worthwhile enterprise. He has always been an ardent Republican, and in 1890 President McKinley appointed him Postmaster of Canon City. He held that position for four years. His fellow newspaper editors elected him president of the National Editorial Association for the years 1918 and 1919.

In 1918 he was elected to the United States Congress and served continuously for fourteen years, until 1933. He was a popular member of Congress, and during most of his long term of service in the House of Representatives he was a member of the important Appropriations Committee. In the matter of spending the taxpayers' dollars he felt he had a sacred obligation of the utmost importance. At all times he advocated rigid economy and was at one time complimentarily referred to by Hon. Bertrand H. Snell, Republican Leader of the House, as "a watch-dog of the Treasury of the United States." While he is a very modest man and generally thought of as a conservative, those who know him best pay tribute to his superior judgment and sterling qualities of leadership. No more honest or honorable citizen of this country ever served the United States Government through its legislative branch. No suspicion of betrayal of public trust has ever been directed his way, for his integrity and exemplary conduct have been conspicuous at all times. Such a record is one to point to with pride and satisfaction. He has honored the nation and the Hardy Family. Fellow citizens in his home city respect and admire him. He is listed in Who's Who in America.

Mr. Hardy is a member of the Christian Church. He has been active in Y. M. C. A. work and has as hobbies the collecting of stamps and coins. He has many civic and fraternal affiliations.

George W. Hardy was the younger of two sons of William and Mary (Wright) Hardy. No doubt this family is descended from a common ancestor of the Jonas Hardy Family of Sullivan County, Pa.² William Hardy, the father of this sketch, was born in Hull, England, in 1770. For several years he served in the British Army. At one time he was the owner of a large woolen mill in Hull. He died in Hull in 1847.

George W. Hardy came to America in 1819, working his way across the Atlantic as a sailor boy. The trip took six weeks on a sailing vessel. He first located in Friendsville, Bradford County. Later, at the age of 19, he moved to Montrose, Pa., where he learned the blacksmith trade. A few years later he moved to Orwell Township, near Orwell Hill, where he purchased a farm and opened a blacksmith shop.

1. Information concerning this family has been furnished by Mr. Fred J. Hardy of New Milford, Pa.

2. See The Jonas Hardy Family of Sullivan County, Pennsylvania.

Eunice (West) Hardy died in Orwell Township 23 Nov. 1865, and George W. Hardy spent his last days in the home of his son, George N. Hardy, in Prattville, Pa. Both George W. Hardy and Eunice (West) Hardy were buried in South Hill Cemetery.

3. WILLIAM HEZEKIAH² HARDY (*George W.*¹), born in Friendsville, Susquehanna County, 3 Jan. 1832; died 21 June 1914; married CHARLOTTE JANE MOORE, who was born at East Rush, Susquehanna County, Pa., 13 Jan. 1838 and died 10
Aug. 1909.

William Hezekiah Hardy was born in Friendsville, Susquehanna County, 3 Jan. 1832. His boyhood days were spent on his father's farm and around the blacksmith shop of his father, near Orwell Hill, Pa. At the age of 14 years he left home and worked for some time as a farm hand. He later served a seven-year apprenticeship at the mason trade and afterwards worked for about two years at the same. After his marriage with Charlotte Jane Moore in 1855, he located on a farm in Orwell Township, which he had purchased in 1848, and lived there for thirty years.

Selling the farm in Orwell, he purchased a farm at Cold Creek, Pa. While living at this place he met with a very serious accident which nearly cost him his life. While hauling wheat on a steep hillside on a sled, the team became frightened and ran down the hill, dragging him about thirty rods and leaving him so badly crippled that he was compelled to sell his farm. He later purchased a smaller farm near East Rush, Pa., where he resided for several years. In 1902 he sold this farm and moved to Binghamton, living there until the death of his wife in 1909. After her death he resided with his daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Canfield, and his son, W. Erstine Hardy, until his death in 1914.

He was drafted in the Civil War in December, 1864, and was mustered into service at Troy, Pa., as a member of the Company I, 45th P. V. I., under Charles D. Hart. He took part in the battle of Weldon Railroad, Fort Steadman and Petersburg; at the last named place was wounded in his right hip and shoulder by a bursting shell, and was captured on the way to a hospital and held by the Confederates until their surrender.

After the Grand Review at Washington, D. C., he was taken ill with typhoid fever and was sent to a field hospital in Alexandria, Va., from which he was discharged 29 June 1865. For two years afterwards he was an invalid.

He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he served as steward and Sunday School superintendent for several years.

He was a supporter of the Republican party until 1894, when he left that party for the Prohibition party.

The children of William H. Hardy and Charlotte Jane Moore, daughter of James and Phoebe (Light) Moore, were:

Clara B. Hardy was sent as a missionary to Mexico by the Delaware Baptist Church of Syracuse, N. Y. She was a graduate of Montrose High School and the Baptist Missionary School at Chicago. A fine tribute to her life has been written by Rev. George N. Gardner and a few excerpts from this book follow:

UNDER APPOINTMENT

Miss Clara Hardy returned home July 4th, where she spent a few weeks in rest and preparation for the work to which she had been appointed by the Baptist Missionary Society. Although for that purpose, her rest was short. When it was learned that she was home, she was immediately called upon to address congregations in that vicinity. A willing worker could not say no, and forth she went. Her first address was given at the East Rush M. E. Church, July 26th, at which time she related some of her experiences while in Chicago. At the close of the service two silver dollars were pressed in her hand in a handshake, by a Christian worker, who said: "Miss Hardy, this is for you."

In the afternoon of the same day she gave an address at Retta, Pa., at which time $50.00 was raised for mission work. She closed the day by giving an interesting address at Rush Center M. E. Church when she showed the need of consecrated workers, and loyal supporters of the Woman's work. On August 2nd she spoke at Rush Baptist Church. This was followed on August 9th at Fairdale, where she spoke of her plans for the future and gave them something of what she knew of Mexico.

August 16th she gave an address of great interest at Auburn Baptist Church, where a large congregation greeted her and listened with much interest to her words. At the close of the service an old soldier of the cross came to her and putting his hand on her shoulder said, "God bless you my girl."

October 2nd she wrote: "I found at Philadelphia that engagements had been made for me up to November 4th. You don't know how I have dreaded working in the Philadelphia churches, even for a week. When I found I had a whole month of it, it seemed a little too much. I haven't heard from Chicago yet, and they may let me go before that time. I am willing to go or stay if it is only at His bidding.

"I dreaded my address at the Philadelphia association. There was that immense church packed and more than a hundred D.D.'s and hundreds of other people—and think of poor little me in the pulpit. But the Lord was there, too, because He knew I needed Him, and think of it—they actually cheered me. My subject was 'The Privilege and Joy of Working with Jesus.' Will you think I am getting puffed up if I tell you what I overheard one of Philadelphia's most prominent ministers say? I am not. If God can use a weak, sinful girl like me to accomplish anything, to Him be the glory—certainly not to me. He said, 'I can't bear those masculine women who get up and wave their hands and shout, but I do love to hear a modest, sweet woman speak—well, just as Miss Hardy did this afternoon.'

"I will give a big sigh of relief when my last address is given here; yes, in many ways the work has been delightful. It has been a wonderful privilege to meet so many of the grand Baptists of Pennsylvania."

THE HOME FAREWELL

A touching address was given by Miss Hardy at East Rush November 1st. The address was apparently under inspiration and left a lasting impression on the entire congregation. It was her last public utterance in Pennsylvania, and indeed a parting benediction and blessing to the people of East Rush and vicinity.

On November 3rd the family gathered round the familiar hearth almost in silence; neither can their thoughts be expressed. The evening, however, did not close in silence. Clara quietly moved to the table, and taking the old family Bible from its resting place, handed it to her brother, Fred J. Hardy, who read from its sacred page. Then quietly all kneeled while Fred feelingly talked with the Father in heaven. The hearts of the others were too full for utterance and they silently retired.

Miss Hardy reached Chicago the 8th of November and from there she writes: "I start tomorrow at 11 a. m. and reach St. Louis, where Miss Watts joins me at 7:12 p. m., and then go on to Laredo, Texas, reaching there at 4:02 Wednesday evening. A train leaves for Mexico City at 4:10, giving us only five minutes for tickets. She will leave me at Monterey, and Miss Galvan will join me there, unless she has gone on to Puebla. I hope she has not, it will be so nice to have her with me.

"We will reach Mexico City Friday at 9:55 a. m., if we make connections at Laredo. We stop in Mexico City over Sunday and go on to Puebla Monday or Tuesday.

"At last I am on my way south and soon must bid farewell to the 'land of the free and the home of the brave'."

CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO

On December 12th she wrote: "They never have Christmas trees, give presents, nor do any of the other things that are a part of Christmas to us. We are planning a very nice tree and Christmas entertainment in the mission, but smallpox is raging terribly in the city now and I am afraid it will interfere with our plans.

"Last week we visited one of our Sunday School girls. It was a wretched place; fourteen people live in one little room, with no furniture except a rough mat in one corner, on which a poor little baby was moaning, oh, so piteously. We were there half an hour and then asked if the baby was sick. She brought it to us, saying it had the measles. Its face was covered with ugly blotches that I thought strange measles, but we told her as best we could what to do and came away. On Sunday the mother sent word that she hoped we would excuse her little girls, as two of the babies had smallpox and she had no time to wash Euriquita's dress. They think almost nothing of the disease here. Fever is dreaded more."

THE SAD NEWS

In Puebla, Mexico, Miss Hardy had entered upon her labors with undaunted faith that seemed to lay hold of the very throne of God. It was the one earnest desire of her heart that she might lead Puebla to the foot of the Cross of Christ. Her work was simply begun as we look at it from the human standpoint; but in God's greater plan her life was complete and her work finished. She took smallpox while calling upon her Sunday School scholars, and after a brief week of terrible suffering, was called home to appear with the glorious King of Kings. Her last days were touching and her death indeed sad, as is seen by the following letter from her co-worker:

"Puebla, January 9th, 1897.

"Human words and phrases are hard and cold at best, and at such a time as this of little avail. We can only say, God comfort you.

"Clara passed to her rest this morning at half past seven. Last evening about seven she asked if she could live much longer. I told her I thought not. She said, 'It is much better to go soon and be at rest. I loved these people and wanted to work for them, but if God wills otherwise I am willing.'

"She suffered terribly and was very restless until a few hours before her death, when she lay back softly on the pillow and never struggled any more. Her breathing grew fainter and at exactly half past seven ceased. Her last words were, 'Let us hurry and go.' 'Go where?' we asked, and she replied, 'Home.'

"She was perfectly conscious until five o'clock this morning, when she seemed to take no notice of anyone. She told us to bury her in her new brown dress and we did so. We laid her to rest in a simple but neat casket at four this afternoon, with a simple service at the grave conducted by Mr. Green. A few faithful members went with us, regardless of danger; they loved her very much. Tomorrow we have a memorial service at the church.

"May God comfort you as only He can.

"Yours prayerfully,

THE GRAVE IN MEXICO

There's a lonely grave, dear readers,
In the land of Mexico,
Where remains the form of Clara,
Whom we loved and cherished so.

Little did we think that parting
Was to be the last one here,
When we saw her smile so tender,
Thru a gentle falling tear.

It was just the common good-bye,
 We so many times had said;
 But 'twas good-bye once forever,
 As away she joyfully sped.

To obey her loving Saviour,
 And fulfill His last command,
 Took to Mexico the Gospel,
 Then to join the martyrs' band.

Could the flames have been more cruel,
 Or the sword have caused more pain,
 Than the deadly flaming smallpox,
 As her life it broke in twain?

She has gone to be with Jesus,
 We are left to bear the Cross,
 While to her the gain is heaven,
 Sadly we sustain the loss.

Chords of love have not been broken,
 For we feel their tender strain,
 As they draw our hearts toward heaven,
 Where we soon will meet again.

CHAPTER X

RICHARD HARDY FAMILY OF CONCORD, MASS., AND OF STAMFORD, CONN.

1. RICHARD¹ HARDY, probably born in England; died about 1683; married, first, ———, who died at Concord, Mass., at birth of twins; married, second, at Stamford, Conn., 1650, ANN HUSTED, daughter of ROBERT and ELIZABETH (ANGEL) HUSTED.

She was born in England about 1623, and died 13 Oct. 1707. ROBERT HUSTED was born probably in Somerset, England, in 1596, sailed for Massachusetts in 1635, where he remained for a few years in Wollaston and then removed to Stamford, Conn. He was a witness in July, 1640, to the Indian deed of Greenwich, Conn., Old Town, to Robert Feake and Daniel Patrick, and was granted a parcel of land at Stamford in Oct., 1642, and died there 1652.¹

Mention has already been made of the presumable relationship of Richard Hardy, who was living in Concord, Mass., in 1639, to Thomas Hardy of Boston, Salem, Ipswich, Rowley and Bradford, Mass.² There is a persistent tradition in certain branches of the Hardy Family in America that three brothers came over from England to this country at or about the same time. If this tradition is true, it is only reasonable to assume that Richard Hardy was a brother to Thomas Hardy named above, also of John Hardy of Salem, Mass.

That Richard Hardy was closely related to Thomas Hardy may be inferred also from the fact that his son Samuel settled in Westborough, Mass., about the same time that descendants of Thomas Hardy also located there. Besides, there is a striking similarity in names, as will be noted in a comparison of the genealogical data of the two families.

He was a prominent citizen of Stamford, Conn., representing that town in the Connecticut General Court, and was made a "freeman" of the Connecticut Colony in 1662. In 1642 he owned land "adjoining a lot sold to James Swead."³ He served as Selectman for the town of Stamford, Conn., from 1666 to 1669.⁴

2. See Thomas Hardy Family, of Bradford, Mass.

3. See History of Stamford, Conn., by Rev. E. B. Huntington, page 44.

4. In the Genealogy of the Close Family, page 197, reference is made to Richard Hardy. The following facts are brought out. He was in Stamford in 1646 and possibly before. In 1645 Richard Hardy sold John Holly, Sr., seven acres of land at Norwaton River with house thereon. (Then follows a list of transfers.) In 1662 he was declared a "freeman" of Connecticut. In 1666 he was elected as Selectman, and served three years. He also represented Stamford three years in the General Court of Hartford. In March, 1682-1683, he distributed his property.

Richard Hardy was living in Concord, Mass., in 1639, according to Shattuck, the historian, but must have moved to Stamford, Conn., soon thereafter. The low land west of the Stamford Harbor was named "Hardy's Hole" for Richard Hardy. In 1683 he gave his son Samuel a house and land. In his will, on record at Fairfield, Conn., about 1683, he made bequests to his daughters: Mrs. Elizabeth Pearson, Hannah Austin, Susanna Sherman, Sarah Close, Ruth Mead, Mary and Abigail.⁵ All of his daughters, except the last two named, Mary and Abigail, were then married.

He gave testimony in a court session held at New Haven, Conn., 15 Oct. 1659.⁶

Children, all probably born at Stamford, Conn.:

- 2 i. ELIZABETH², b.; m. 1st, GARLICK (GARLICHE); m. 2nd, JOHN PERSONS (PEARSON, PARSON, PERSON, PIERSON).

Elizabeth (Hardy) Garlick is reported to have been under investigation and possible arrest for witchcraft delusions during the latter part of the seventeenth century.⁷

Child of 2nd marriage:

LYDIA LEARNING, b. at East Hampton, L. I., 10 Oct. 1680; d.; m. 8 Apr. 1695, WILLIAM SHAW. Their children were:

RICHARD, LYDIA, JOHN, JOSHUA and NATHAN.

- 3 ii. HANNAH², b.; d.; m. JOHN AUSTIN of Barnstable, Mass.

It is said that John Austin, husband of Hannah Hardy, submitted to the jurisdiction of the New Haven Colony 23 May 1673, granted four acres of land at Clapboard Hill or "somewhere on the East side of the Mianus river."

- 4 iii. SUSANNA², b.; d.; m. EDMUND SHERMAN.⁸ Their children were BEZALEEL, b. 1 Jan. 1674; SAMUEL, b. 8 Jan. 1678; EDMUND, b. 20 Mar. 1680; MATTHEW, b. 8 Jan. 1683.

8. See History and Genealogy of the Families of Old Fairfield, by D. L. Jacobsen (Vol. 1), page 543.

- 5 iv. SARAH², b.; d.; m. THOMAS CLOSE, 1669. It was said that she was his second wife. THOMAS CLOSE, son of GOODMAN CLOSE, was born about 1637. He died in Greenwich in 1709. He was the ancestor of the CLOSE family of Fairfield County, Conn., and also of Westchester and Dutchess Counties in New York, where many of his descendants settled. His will was dated 30 Dec. 1708, and probated in 1709. Executors, wife SARAH and son JOSEPH, mention the following children: SARAH, HANNAH, THOMAS, JOSEPH, BENJAMIN, ELIZABETH, RUTH, JOHN and LYDIA.
- 6 v. RUTH², b.; d.; m. JOHN MEAD, 27 Oct. 1681, at Greenwich, Conn.⁹. Their's was "the first recorded marriage in Greenwich, Conn.", although others may have preceded it. The children of this marriage were: JOHN, m. 1724, ELIZABETH LOCKWOOD; JONATHON, NATHAN and ELIZABETH.
- 7 vi. MARY², b. 30 Apr. 1659.
- 8* vii. SAMUEL², b. about 1661; m. 1st, at Stamford, Conn., 18 Nov. 1686, REBECCA HOBBS; m. 2nd, at Stamford, Conn., 12 May 1693, REBECCA FURBUST (FORBUSH).
- 9 viii. ABIGAIL².

2. SAMUEL² HARDY (*Richard*¹), born at Stamford, Conn., about 1661. He married, first at Stamford, Conn., 18 Nov. 1686, REBECCA HOBBS, daughter of JOHN HOBBS. There is no record of her death, but she probably died at Stamford, Conn., some time prior to 1693. For his second wife he married at Stamford, Conn., 12 May 1693, REBECCA "FURBUST." Her last name was probably incorrectly spelled and should be FORBUSH.

Samuel² received a house and land from his father in 1683, and he was listed as owning land in Stamford, Conn., as late as January, 1701.¹⁰ There is no record of his death at Stamford, Conn., and it is assumed that he moved to Westborough, Mass., soon after 1701, and died there.

Children:

- 10 i. HANNAH³, b. about 1690; m. 1 Mar. 1715, SAMUEL RUMBLE; d. 1786. Their children were: HANNAH (b. 16 Apr. 1716; m. 2 Dec. 1736, CALEB MEAD), REBECCA (b. 26 Feb. 1718; m.

He never accepted any compensation for his services in behalf of the town. He was also Justice of the Peace several years. He was described as "a man of stamina and worth, one that commanded respect wherever he went." He was appointed on the Willard Drake Hardy was only fourteen years old when his mother died. His brothers and sisters, like himself, were bound out to good families and it is not known what became of them. Willard was bound out to one of Ohio's most famous early settlers, General Paine, for whom Painesville was named. The General was a farmer and young Hardy worked for him until the spring before he became of age. At that time he bought his time from his employer, and in October of that year married. In 1833 he purchased a farm of 200 acres along Lake Erie. That section of Ohio was a solid wilderness then, but in a few years Mr. Hardy had cleared the land and made of it one of the finest farms in Lake County.³³

The following newspaper article appeared in the Dallas Morning News, Dallas, Texas, Friday, 10 June 1932:

PRESIDENT OF BAYLOR COLLEGE COMPLETES HIS TWENTIETH YEAR

Belton, Texas, June 9.—Dr. J. C. Hardy of Belton will begin Friday his twenty-first year as president of Baylor College for Women. For thirty-three years he has been a college president, the first thirteen of which he spent as head of Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College. Now for two decades he has been chief executive of Baylor College for Women.

Doctor Hardy is credited with the building of two of the greatest schools in the South and Southwest, whose names have been recognized over the Universe as institutions of higher learning, practical and worth while.

Doctor Hardy's public and educational life began immediately after his graduation from Mississippi College in 1889. He served nine consecutive years as superintendent of the city schools of Jackson, Miss., and at the same time was president of the Mississippi State Teachers' Association. He helped plan the State Capitol of Mississippi, which stands today one of the stateliest capitols in the United States, being a copy of the National Capitol in many respects.

In 1900, he became president of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, which position he resigned twenty-one years ago to become Baylor's president in 1912. When he came to Baylor he waded into a pool of impending and deepening debt. Through his efforts and those of his co-worker, Dean E. G. Townsend, Baylor College has been recognized as one of the leading educational institutions of the South. It is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and a member of the American Association of Universities and Colleges.

This was made possible through the internal organization which came about through the rearrangement of courses by Dean Townsend and by bringing a system of business administration to modern standards by adding new departments of instruction with the additional fourth quarter of the school year.

Since he has been at the head of Baylor College, the largest denominational school for women west of the Mississippi, Doctor Hardy has been the influential factor and power that has caused six new buildings to be raised. The most recently constructed are the Presser Music Hall, donated by the Theodore Presser Foundation of Music in Philadelphia, and J. C. Hardy Hall recreational building and dining hall named for him.

The power of Baylor College still lies in the palm of Doctor Hardy's hand. It has for twenty years. And now as he winds up his second decade, Baylor students bow their heads in reverence to their president and their ideal, Dr. John Crumpton Hardy.

ANDERSON, president of Wesleyan College of Macon, Ga. The first college diploma ever conferred upon a woman was conferred by Wesleyan. The first college diploma ever conferred upon a woman west of the Mississippi River was given by Baylor College when it was at Independence, Texas, and is now in Belton, Texas, so MARTHA has the distinction of being the wife of the president of the oldest college for women in America and the daughter of the president of the oldest college for women west of the Mississippi River.

WILLIAM MASON PHILLIPS, born on a farm at Chestnut Grove, Shelby County, Kentucky, 21 May 1884, a son of MASON LEANDER PHILLIPS and NANCY CATHERINE O'NAN, his wife, both natives of Kentucky. On either side of his family his ancestry is of ancient origin. Through the paternal line he is a direct descendant of CHARLES PHILLIPS, born in 1772, whose wife was JEMINA HARDY, born in 1775, both of English inheritance. CHARLES and JEMINA (HARDY) PHILLIPS were natives of North Carolina, and emigrated from there, by way of South Carolina and East Tennessee, to Kentucky and located in Clay County, in 1823, near the waters of Big Sturgeon, being among the first white settlers of that county, and enduring the hardships of the true pioneer. There they built their log cabin in the frontier woods, with no ambition but to seek an honest livelihood and do good to those about them; passed an honored and serene old age in peace and contentment, and died without a blot on their fair names. On the maternal side he traces his line to WILLIAM O'NAN, who came from Ireland and settled in Virginia toward the close of the 17th century.

WILLIAM MASON PHILLIPS was married, first, 27 April 1907, at Versailles, Kentucky, to ALINE EDWARDS, a most worthy woman; this matrimonial venture proved a failure and finally terminated in a divorce decree. On 2 June 1921 he was united in marriage, at Lebanon, Ohio, to HAZEL SPENCER, a native of Warren County, Ohio, a woman of fine sensibilities and ideals of life. In all the vicissitudes of life his splendid wife has lent a helping hand to him, and makes their home one of genuine hospitality. Anyone who calls at this pleasant homestead receives a cordial welcome, void of cold formality or intentional neglect.

When he was four years old, William Mason Phillips removed with his parents to Franklin County, Kentucky, where they purchased property, in 1888, at Hoge Station, and where his father erected a building and entered upon mercantile trade, which business he continued for thirty years. At the age of six years, he enrolled in the public school, at Jett, and continued until he had completed all the rudimentary branches of reading, writing and arithmetic and all the other courses taught in the common school; to these, however, he added an acquaintance with higher mathematics and the principles of business by attending the Frankfort Business College, at Frankfort, Kentucky, from which institution he graduated and received his diploma in 1902. Perhaps the most important of his intellectual education has been the result of a habit of industriously reading the best of books within his reach, augmented by a home-study course in Business Administration in the LaSalle Extension University, and his relations with the home-study department of Columbia University, where he satisfactorily completed a course in the Principles of Banking. At the age of eighteen, he accepted a position with a plumbing establishment, at Frankfort, and for five years he served his employer in the capacity of bookkeeper and office manager and in that position acquired a thorough knowledge of the details of the business. Then he organized the partnership of Phillips and Canty and started in the plumbing business on his own account, but in the autumn of 1907 he sold his interest in the firm and accepted an appointment in the Post Office at Frankfort. He retained that position for the next six years, during which period he alternated his activities between that of Post Office Clerk and Railway Mail Clerk. On 1 Oct. 1913 he resigned his government position and became connected with the Phoenix Motor Car Company, in Lexington, Kentucky, for which concern he worked for three years, serving as Sales Manager. During the month of October, 1914, he participated in a nationwide sales contest conducted by the Franklin Automobile Company of Syracuse, New York, and was awarded the second prize of $800.00 cash and a trip, with all expenses paid, to the National Automobile Show, in January of 1915. He organized, in 1916, the Franklin Motor Car Company of Lexington, and obtained a franchise to distribute Franklin motor cars in a territory comprising twenty-five counties in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky. The following year, when the United States was drawn into the World War and it became necessary to mobilize the nation's industries for use across the sea, he promptly enrolled for war service in the United States Public Service Reserve, under the Department of Labor, Washington, D. C.

D. C.

During the period of the World War he was prominently active in the various patriotic movements and especially so in connection with the different Liberty Loan drives. He submitted himself to registration under the Selective Service Regulations and was duly registered, 12 Sept. 1918, serial number 1334, and finally classified in Class 2, Division B, no exemptions being claimed on account of occupation or employment. On 22 Oct. 1918 he was officially notified by the War Department of his selection as a candidate for commission as second lieutenant to attend the Central Officers' Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, near Louisville, and on 29 Oct. 1918 he received orders to report to the local Draft Board to be inducted into military service and sent to training school as a student, on 7 Nov. 1918. In compliance with this order, his business affairs were wound up as expeditiously as possible, so that his departure for the training school might be accomplished within the time allotted. Then he motored to the home of his parents, near Frankfort, and bade them good-bye. Returning to Lexington in a heavy downpour of rain, he had almost reached his destination when he met with a serious accident when his automobile, on being struck by another, driven in a reckless manner by a passing motorist, skidded on the wet pavement, careened down a steep embankment and overturned, pinning him beneath the wreckage. He was alone in his automobile at the time of the accident, which occurred shortly after dusk; but, fortunately, an interurban car happened to be passing at the moment, and the motorman who was in charge of it, attracted to the scene of the wrecked automobile by the headlights, which remained burning after the crash, rushed to his assistance and, with the help of some passengers on board the interurban car, rescued him from the wreckage and arranged for his removal to his home, where he was placed under the care of a physician. Upon examination, it was found that he had sustained a crushed chest, several fractured ribs, and a deep cut across the left knee as a result of the collision, and his condition at the time was pronounced critical. At length he began to improve, but recuperation was slow, and before he had recovered sufficiently to leave his bedroom the World War came to an end, with the granting of an armistice to Germany, 11 Nov. 1918. With the cessation of hostilities, in consequence of which the production of automobiles was once more begun, he resumed the course of his former activities as head of the Franklin Motor Car Company, which agency commenced business anew, occupying larger and more elaborate quarters in a new building. For the next two years the business enjoyed unusual prosperity, but the post-war depression and panic of 1921-22 ultimately wiped out all earnings of the business and reached its climax when the directors of the firm voted that a voluntary assignment would be in the best interest of its stockholders and creditors. Several years later, William Mason Phillips sought out each and every one of his personal creditors and settled their claims in full, plus interest. In the fall of 1922, he organized the Franklin Garage, Inc., and re-entered the automobile business in Winchester, Kentucky, where he continued to distribute Franklin motor cars in a territory comprising a lesser number of counties than formerly. The following year he disposed of his interest in the firm and accepted a position as Sales Manager with a large automotive distributing agency, in Dayton, Ohio, and on 15 July 1923 moved with his family to Dayton, where he purchased a fine residential property and where he has since resided. On 15 April 1924 he identified himself with the Jonathan H. Winters Company of Dayton, Ohio, an industrial banking concern. He began with this organization as a bond salesman and rose to become its Secretary and Treasurer, faithfully discharging the duties of this position of responsibility and trust until 15 May 1929, when he resigned. Seeking a field of larger opportunity, he entered the industrial financing and loan business, organizing The Estate Acceptance Corporation, with an authorized capital stock of $100,000, building up an efficient organization and contributing much through his service to its success. As president and general manager of that company, which he founded in August, 1929, he occupies a prominent place in the personal loan field in Dayton, Ohio. He has always worked hard for his employer no less than for himself and has thoroughly deserved the place which has come to him in the city's business life through his own efforts.

In political affairs he is a Republican, with independent leaning; and his religious affiliation is with the Presbyterian Church, and particularly the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Dayton, Ohio, which church he with money helped to build. In spite of the fact that he has given his closest attention to the work of his life, he has found time for other interests and always lends a hand in all meritorious undertakings for public welfare. All of his business transactions have been discharged to the strictest letter of the moral and divine law; he is temperate in every habit, never indulging in liquor, profane language nor the use of tobacco in any form. Though warm-hearted and sociable, he is quiet and reserved in his manners. In company he is rather a good listener than a leading talker. He always evinces the tenderest attachment for his family, and what leisure time his professional and other activities leave him he devotes to their pleasure and entertainment.

CHAPTER XII

THE JOSIAH HARDY FAMILY OF VIRGINIA AND MASSACHUSETTS

1. JOSIAH¹ HARDY, born about 1750, probably in Virginia; died 15 Dec. 1786 (shipwreck); married, 11 June 1778, REBECCA HAMILTON, daughter of NATHANIEL HAMILTON. She died January, 1795.

Josiah Hardy was the ancestor of the New England branch of this Hardy line. He came from Norfolk, Virginia, and is connected with a large family of southern Hardys. There is, no doubt, some relationship between this family and the John Hardy Family of Isle of Wight County, Virginia, although the connection has not yet been discovered.¹

Josiah Hardy was a sea captain. In 1776, it is said, he and his fiancée were shipwrecked near Norfolk. The same year, in company with Nathaniel Hamilton and family, he sailed from the South for Massachusetts. He made his home at Chatham, which at the time could hardly have been more than a fishing hamlet.

An old record tells the tragic story of his death as follows: "Josiah Hardy, with Solomon Godfrey, Paul Harding and Joshua Harding, a boy, left Chatham Dec 15, 1786, with a fair wind and good weather, for Boston. The whole party were found 10 April 1787 in Great Permit Hollow, Truro, all frozen."

Although the mother also died at an early age and the children became orphans, it is a remarkable fact that from this family have come some of the most representative men of New England and of the nation, as will be seen later in this chapter.

10. ALPHEUS³ HARDY (*Isaac*², *Josiah*¹), born at Chatham, Mass., 1 Nov. 1815; died 7 Aug. 1887; married, 9 Jan. 1838, SUSAN WARNER HOLMES, daughter of CHARLES HOLMES of Boston, Mass.

Hon. Alpheus Hardy was one of the most prominent and best known business men of New England. He was a great merchant and was associated with others in the ownership of a fleet of merchantmen vessels which were engaged in an extensive and lucrative trade with foreign countries, especially with the Far East.

He was an active and ardent Christian worker, a member of the Congregational Church at Boston and an honored officer of its various organizations, especially with its missionary work in foreign lands. In this connection, it is fitting to narrate at this time the story of Joseph Hardy Neesima, since it reveals something of the character and influence of such an outstanding leader of the Hardy Family and also because it indicates how the Hardy name has been written indelibly into the history of Japan.

In August, 1865, the Wild Rover, one of the fleet owned by Alpheus Hardy and Co. of Boston, with Horace S. Taylor as captain, made port at Boston. On board was a young Japanese about twenty-two years of age. Penniless, he had paid his passage by serving the captain, who was a fine, Christian gentleman. This Japanese was born 12 Feb. 1842, a member of a cultured family and of princely rank. With this family background, he was, therefore, trained early for an official position. Until fifteen years of age he worshiped the family idols. A few years later he chanced upon, or providentially found, a Chinese translation of the Bible which impressed him profoundly. He was a great reader and a thorough student. In his reading he had learned much about the United States and western civilization and he determined to visit this country. But he had no means of his own and his family were not at all in sympathy with his purpose. Nevertheless, he went ahead with his plans. After months of thrilling and wearisome experiences, he finally reached Boston.

Through Captain Taylor he was introduced to Hon. and Mrs. Alpheus Hardy. Although not officially adopted, he was treated in every way as their son. His Japanese name was Joseph Neesima and he promptly took for his middle name the name of Hardy. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy paid all of his expenses at Phillips Academy, Amherst College and Andover Seminary, gave him a happy home and made possible for him not only a thorough education but the benefits of travel and the associations with the best people of the country.

Joseph Hardy Neesima returned to his native land in 1874, and the next year, through the generous financial backing of Mr. Hardy and others, he opened a school at Kyoto which eventually became the Doshisha University, now one of the largest and best endowed universities of Japan. Neesima died in 1890 at the age of 47 years. Of him at the time of his death it was said: "No private citizen has ever died in Japan whose loss was so widely and so deeply felt as that of Mr. Neesima." Joseph Hardy Neesima's name is indelibly written into the annals of Japanese history and, hence, also Alpheus Hardy's service to that nation in educating and influencing the young Japanese and the princely gifts which he contributed to the institution at Kyoto will never be forgotten by the people of Japan.

Alpheus Hardy was identified with so many agencies for the advancement of Christian and general welfare work at home and abroad and was the promoter of so many noble causes that it would be impossible to enumerate them here. The character and career of this remarkable man may be partially indicated by reference to a brief sketch of his life given by his pastor, Dr. George A. Gordon, of the Old South Church, Boston, at a memorial service after his death. It happened that at the time of Mr. Hardy's death that Doctor Gordon was traveling abroad. When he returned he conducted a special memorial service and, eulogizing Mr. Hardy, he said in part:

I do not think of him now in any of the special aspects of his life as a great Christian merchant—as a man holding great trusts, exerting a wide and wise influence in colleges and seminaries, opening his mind to the signs of the times and the coming of our Lord's Kingdom in all parts of the world, opening his hand liberally in the gift of time and means all these years in aid of so many causes—nor do I think of him in his home where the strength and sacredness of his life were nourished. In all these relations he was an extraordinary man and in all these respects his life would be an inspiration to all permitted to know him. I think of him as an individual victorious in the fight, successful in the race and faithful to every trust committed to him.

Arthur Sherburne Hardy, his famous son, in the preface to his Life and Letters of Joseph Hardy Neesima, has this to say about his father :

It is sometimes saddening to think that a long life of unrecorded benefactions should have no memorial. Still in the preparation of these pages which necessarily record one act of his life which to those who knew him was but the sum of such acts it has been a pleasure to a son to throw, as it were, this side light upon a noble nature without violating a father's wish. (Mr. Hardy was averse to everything of the nature of a biography of himself.)

45. ARTHUR SHERBURNE⁴ HARDY (*Alpheus*³, *Isaac*², *Josiah*¹), born at Boston, Mass., 13 Aug. 1847; died 13 Mar. 1930; married, first, KATE PERLEY WOOD, daughter of HENRY WOOD, U. S. N.; married, second, at Athens, Greece, ASPINWALL BOWEN, daughter of HENRY C. BOWEN of Brooklyn, N. Y., who had taken up his residence in Athens at the time MR. HARDY was Minister to GREECE.

Arthur Sherburne Hardy graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in 1864 and from West Point Military Academy in 1869. In 1872 he received an honorary M.A. degree from Iowa University. Dartmouth and Amherst colleges conferred a Ph.D. degree on him in 1873. He studied abroad at École des Ponts et Chaussées, 1873-74. He was an instructor at West Point and was Lieutenant in the 3rd Artillery. He was Professor of Civil Engineering and Mathematics at Grinnell College, Iowa, and at Dartmouth. He was editor of the Cosmopolitan magazine, 1893-95. He was appointed U. S. minister and consul-general to Persia (1897-99), Greece, Rumania and Serbia (1899-01), to Switzerland (1901-2) and to Spain. In this service he enjoyed the acquaintance and often the friendship of many of the most distinguished people of many lands.

Mr. Hardy was an author and writer of distinction in a wide range of literature. Among the best known of his books are the following: But Yet a Woman, The Wind of Destiny, Passe Rose, Diane and Her Friends, Helen, His Daughter First, Aurelia, No. 13 Rue Du Bon Diable, Things Remembered, Book of Poems, Songs of Two, A May and a November Correspondence, The Letters and Life of Joseph Hardy Neesima.

Among his mathematical works may be mentioned Elements of Quaternions—Analytic Geometry, Elements of Calculus, New Methods in Typographical Surveying, Imaginary Quantities. Space does not permit reference to shorter stories and scientific articles, but the facts cited above show that Professor Hardy was a very remarkable man. Few persons excel in more than one major field of effort. He was distinguished in four fields—army officer, educator, author and diplomat. During his army career he made for himself an enviable reputation as an expert shot with the rifle. He was keenly interested in hunting and fishing, and while a Minister to Greece he helped to establish the first golf course in Athens. He was a member of the first football team to be organized in America, as will be seen elsewhere in this book.

In the Boston Transcript 4 Apr. 1930, soon after his death, an article entitled "Recalling Prof. Hardy, Aristocrat of Dartmouth" appeared. In this article reference was made to the Aegis, the college annual, with the statement that the volume which contained the most scandalous cartoon or skit was held to be the most successful. While Arthur Sherburne Hardy was a professor in Dartmouth the Aegis appeared with a full page showing a yard full of dogs of various breeds, each bearing the well drawn face of some professor. We quote in part from the article:

In the picture Professor Hardy was the aristocratic greyhound and he looked the part. In fact, that was the impression he always gave through his long career as author and diplomat, that of an aristocrat of life and letters. There were some fine men on the Dartmouth faculty in those days, but no aristocrat save Hardy. In the first place, he was the only wealthy professor in Hanover at that time. His father, Alpheus Hardy, had a fleet of vessels engaged in world-wide trade which amassed for him a very comfortable fortune, much of which he devoted to the support of Christian missions in Japan. The son built, owned and occupied the finest house in Hanover, a house much better than that of the president. In fact, it became the president's house after the Hardys left Hanover.

Mr. Hardy was a fellow of the National Academy of Arts and Sciences and received the decoration of the Grand Cross of the Lion and the Sun from Persia. He was chairman of the Board of Trustees of Woodstock Academy, a member of the Authors'

Club and the Century Association of New York City, and identified with many other associations and societies.

46. EDWARD ELDRIDGE⁴ HARDY (*Alpheus*³, *Isaac*², *Josiah*¹), born at Boston, Mass., 17 Oct. 1850; died 12 Oct. 1903; married, 22 Oct. 1873, ELIZABETH RANDOLPH BATES, daughter of WILLIAM G. BATES of Westfield, Mass. She was born 6 Sept. 1848 and died 11 Jan. 1910.

Edward Eldridge Hardy received his early education in Stuttgart, Germany. On his return to the States he graduated from the Amherst Agricultural College, his purpose being to go to the Far West and to run a ranch on scientific principles. But his plans were changed by his marriage to a delicate, highly bred and cultured wife, ill adapted to life on a western ranch, so he entered the insurance business, in which he was very successful. He was a sportsman, a hunter, a breeder of pedigreed dogs, but his chief joy was found in horses. He rode and drove all his life and owned some well-known racers. His wife was an invalid for many years.

A daughter-in-law has spoken of him as "the most charming man I have ever met or known and the center of his heart he gave to his children and their friends." He lived at Auburndale, Mass. For many years he was a trustee of the Newton Cottage Hospital and for a long time was a member of the local board of education. He built a new public school building which the citizens wished to name for him, but he declined the honor. He was musical and attended the Boston Symphony Concerts and the Appolo Club Concerts. He also composed music, and his brother, Arthur S. Hardy, wrote the words for one of his compositions. This song was sung at his funeral.

Alpheus Sumner Hardy graduated from Harvard University in 1887. He is an extensive reader and has traveled widely. He has spent the most of his life in the rubber business and has devoted considerable time to the cultivation of the rubber tree. He made several visits to Central America studying the subject in those countries. In 1910 he went to the Far East to investigate further, particularly in the Malay Peninsula, Java, and Borneo. As a result of these researches, he was principally instrumental in buying control of the rubber plantation for his company in Java. This venture proved most successful and profitable.

When Mr. Hardy first became interested in the problem it was thought that the cultivation of rubber was impossible. Now the greater part of the world's rubber supply is obtained from cultivated trees. Mr. Hardy retired from business 1 Jan. 1935. He is a member of the Loyal Legion, Harvard University Club of New York, the New England Society and various other social and business associations. His business relations and experience have been so unusual and interesting that he lived a life rich in adventure and by his research work has made a valuable contribution to a very important and worldwide industry.

62. THORNTON SHERBURNE⁵ HARDY (*Arthur Sherburne*⁴, *Alpheus*³, *Isaac*², *Josiah*¹), born 13 Nov. 1876; married, 12 Sept. 1900, BUELAH GREENOUGH, daughter of JAMES CARRUTHERS GREENOUGH, LL.D. She was born 30 Sept. 1874.

Children :

- 67 i. GELSTON⁶, b. at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., 9 July 1901. He graduated from Princeton University in 1923.
- 68 ii. EVELYN⁶, b. at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, Pa., 28 Oct. 1902. She graduated from Smith College in 1924.

63. CHARLES ASHLEY⁵ HARDY (*Edward Eldridge*⁴, *Alpheus*³, *Isaac*², *Josiah*¹), born 6 Nov. 1874; died 29 Nov. 1929; married, 3 May 1899, ALICE ELIZA ADAMS. She was born at Norwich, Conn., and belonged to a Boston family.

Charles Ashley Hardy prepared for college at the Hopkinson School and graduated from Harvard University in 1897 and later (1904) from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a mining engineer. He was unique among his contemporaries in the possession of vision, enterprise and extraordinary courage. From his early youth he was noted for his intense love of life out of doors and he became a sportsman of high accomplishments. In college he was captain of the shooting team and during his college days spent two winter months in Colorado with the famous hunters, Wells and Patterson, shooting mountain lions and other big game. This trip was notable from the fact that a professional photographer accompanied the hunters, and their exploits and the results thus recorded are among the earliest contributions to big game photography.

In the interval between his graduation from college and from M. I. T. he was active in business enterprises in Boston and was one of the original incorporators and officers of the Pureoxia Company. In the summer previous to his graduation from M. I. T. he went to Alaska in the employ of Gen. Charles J. Paine to explore and examine Alaskan coal fields and he spent some time on the Arctic Ocean. For his thesis at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology he and his classmate, George Harrington, presented a joint dissertation of such exceptional merit that they were retained by large financial interests in New York to go to Mexico as mining engineers and prospectors in Sonora County. When the work of exploration was accomplished, they formed a company of Moody, Hardy and Harrington, mining engineers, and in their further explorations brought to Mrs. Hardy the rare experience of being the first white woman to cross the Sierra Madre Mountains on horseback.

After the dissolution of the engineering firm Hardy remained in Mexico as owner and operator of a large cattle ranch, but his activities were brought to an abrupt conclusion by the Mexican Revolution under the leadership of the noted Villa. During his residence in Mexico, Mr. Hardy served as Consular Agent of the U. S. in Sonora County.

Of Cape Cod ancestry and himself a sailor of marked ability, he was particularly interested from early boyhood in the town of Chatham. After his return from Mexico he gave himself wholeheartedly to the task of revealing to the outside world the delights and opportunities of this part of Massachusetts for intelligent, healthy development. Many of the old public and private buildings were thus rescued by his enterprise. These properties were merged into a Massachusetts Real Estate Trust under the name of the Chatham Associates and he remained at all times the managing trustee and guiding star.

When golf was in its early stages of development he co-operated with the foremost Massachusetts golfers, the late Herbert Jageres and G. Herbert Windler, in the creation of the Eastern Ho Golf Links at Chatham, designed by the famous golf architect, W.

Herbert Foroler of Walton Heath, England, and supervised by Hardy. He was closely associated with these and many other activities up to the time of his death.

Mr. Hardy traveled extensively in his own and other lands and acquired a vast store of knowledge from his personal contacts and wide acquaintance. He was intensely fond of music and the fine arts. He frequently visited European art galleries and museums, where he was well known. He was a student of French and Spanish literature. Inevitably his tastes and activities brought him into the field of finance, and at the time of his death he was closely associated with his life-long friend, Robert Drysdale of New York.

Here then, in brief outline, is the life of a true pioneer who was distinguished alike by his character, his attainments and the affectionate regard of his companions and associates—the span of the years has been no measure of its value to them and to posterity.²

CHAPTER XIII

SAMUEL HARDY FAMILY OF BEVERLY, MASS.

1. SAMUEL¹ HARDY, born in London, England, about 1645; died after 10 Feb. 1699-1700 and before 14 May 1700; married, 24 Jan. 1675, MARY DUDLEY, daughter of the REV. SAMUEL and MARY (BILEY) DUDLEY and granddaughter of THOMAS DUDLEY, Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. She was born 6 Jan. 1649-50 and died in 1715.

The father of Samuel Hardy was Robert Hardy, "citizen and haberdasher" of London, born in 1612 and died in 1662. From the Records of the Worshipful Company of Haberdashers of London, England, it appears that Robert Hardy (Hardie) was a son of John Hardy of Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland County, and according to the same records, he was apprenticed to become an haberdasher June, 1626. The information concerning the place of birth of Robert Hardy (Kirkby Lonsdale) seems to coincide with the data on various Hardys of Westmoreland County, England, as given by Charles Frederic Hardy in his book entitled The Hardys of Borbon (page 76). Robert Hardy married Mary Olcott (Alcock).¹ Robert Hardy's wife, Mary, remarried after his death in 1662, her second husband being Steven More, as is indicated in the following excerpt taken from the New England Historical and Genealogical Register:

Mary More, wife of Steven More, citizen and clothmaker of London (by virtue of an agreement before marriage, etc., and bond bearing date of 14 January 1666) 22 Aug. 1670, proved 19 Oct. 1678 a conditional bequest (of three hundred and fifty pounds) to said husband. Otherwise fifty to my son Samuel Hardie of New England, fifty to his son Robert Hardy of New England, one hundred to my daughter Sarah Duke, one hundred to my grandchildren Adam Jordain, fifty of it to be divided amongst the children of my deceased brother of New England. Only I will that my aged mother, if she should survive may have the improvement of that hundred pounds to Samuel and Robert Hardy during her life. Also I will unto said Margaret Chalfont, the profit of my lease in Fore Street near Cripplegate (ten pounds a year) during her life. After her decease I will said lease to my daughter Sarah Duke. To my son Samuel Hardy out of other estate, fifty pounds and to his son Robert twenty pounds and to his wife Mary Hardy my diamond ring and my silver tabkard. To my daughter Sarah Duke the several sums due upon bonds put out by her in her aunt Norris's name or otherwise (and other bequests to her). The two children, Bequests to above said grandchildren Adam and Sarah Jordaine at age of one and twenty. If the said Sarah Duke should have no other child or children . . . My sister Sarah Norris, my daughter-in-law Ann Aney and each of her children and each of my deceased brother's children in New England.²

The mother of Mary (Olcott) Hardy was Margaret, who married a Mr. Olcott for her first husband. Her second husband was a Mr. Chalfont. In her will, Margaret Chalfont, widow, of the city of London, written 12 Aug. 1678 and proved 9 Oct. 1678, mentioned her daughter, Mary More, and her "grandchild, Samuel Hardy", and others.³

The will of Robert Hardie (Hardye), citizen and haberdasher of London, written 28 May 1661 and proved 18 Dec. 1662, was as follows:

Personal estate, according to the laudable custom of the City of London to be divided into three equal parts, one part whereof I give to my dear and loving wife Mary as due to her by custom of London, another third to my children viz. Mary, Elizabeth, Sarah and Samuel to be equally parted and divided between them; viz. to Samuel at one and twenty and to Mary, Elizabeth and Sarah at one and twenty or days of marriage. The other third I reserve to myself at my disposal To wife twenty pounds, To son Samuel twenty pounds and also my seal ring with carnelian stone and my arms engraved thereon, to my brother John Hardy and to my mother Margaret Chalfont, widow, twenty shillings apiece, To John, Edward, Mary and Martha Hardy children of said brother John ten shillings apiece To my sister Gillian Taylor widow twenty shillings and to her son Joseph and to her daughter . . . ten shillings, The residue to my wife and children, Wife to be executrix and brother John and Mother Chalfont overseers.⁴

Samuel Hardy came to America before his father died and was under age at the time. This would indicate that relatives had preceded him in coming to this country, and the suggestion has been made from time to time that there must have been some family connection with Thomas Hardy of Ipswich and Bradford, Mass., and with John Hardy of Salem, Mass., as well as with Richard Hardy of Concord, Mass., and of Stamford, Conn.

Samuel Hardy is usually referred to as "Schoolmaster", although he was also a physician and prominent citizen. The first school house was built at Beverly, Mass., in 1677, and the assumption is that he was the first schoolmaster to teach in the building. It is said that he taught school prior to this in the "meeting house" during the summer and elsewhere in the winter. His salary was one hundred dollars a year. He witnessed several wills and on 5 Nov. 1674 he was chosen town clerk, a position he held for a number of years. In 1684 he was employed to transcribe town records into a new book. It is a known fact that he was one of the best educated men of his time. His will, dated 10 Feb. 1699, was as follows:

I Samuel Hardy of Beverly, student of physic, being weak and infirm of body yet of a disposing mind and memory etc., etc., I give my loving wife Mary all ye rest and residue of my real estate and personal estate consisting in housing, lands and Chattels whatsoever and wheresoever to be found, excepting what is herein otherwise by me given and disposed of during ye term of her remaining my ye said Hardy widow or relict,

My absolute will is that my wife be executrix and that my said wife shall make no sale of any part of ye said estate without ye consent of Left Conant and Joseph Herrick Jr., both of whom I appoint as my overseers hereof. In case of either of them should die, then I leave the whole matter with the survivor. Item—I give my two youngest children, Theophilus and Elizabeth, 10 pounds a piece to each of them,

Item—I give unto my wife all ye time and service that I have of my son Theophilus until he come of ye age of one and twenty years, but in any case my said wife do or shall have occasion for herself or ye bringing up of ye children then I fully empower her with ye consent of ye overseers to make sale of any part of said estate for ye use aforesaid: and further my will is that all ye rest of my estate that is not already disposed of shall be equally divided between my wife and children at her second marriage, I said Samuel Hardy do nul and void all former wills and testaments and I ratify and establish this my last will and testament.

Mary Dudley, wife of Samuel Hardy, as already stated, was a daughter of the Rev. Samuel and Mary (Biley) Dudley. Mary Biley was daughter of Henry Biley (Byley) of Sarum, England, born 1616, married 1643 and died 1651. Her husband, Rev.

Samuel Dudley, had as first wife Mary Winthrop, daughter of Governor John Winthrop. The father of Rev. Samuel Dudley was Thomas Dudley, Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony four times and founder of Harvard University, a Puritan, and born probably at Northampton, England, in 1576. The Dudley family in England at one time owned Kenilworth Castle by grant of Queen Elizabeth. Captain Roger Dudley, who was slain in the Battle of Ivory under Henry IV, was a member of this family.⁵

Albert Stevens Hardy grew up on a farm at Springfield, N. H., and migrated with his family to Guelph, Ont., in 1870, and thence to Uxbridge in the spring of 1874. He became one of the leading citizens of Uxbridge, as will be seen in the following excerpt taken from the account of his death as it appeared in The Journal, the local newspaper, under date of 20 Nov. 1924:

In the death at Dunnville (Ont.) on Sunday, November 16th, of Mr. A. S. Hardy, Uxbridge loses one of its oldest citizens. Mr. Hardy came to Uxbridge in the early part of 1874, so that he had been a resident here for over fifty years. During that time he had identified himself with the life of the town in a good many ways, having served as a member of the Town Council and a member of the Public Library Board. He was also very much interested in the I. O. O. F., having been Noble Grand and D.D.G.M. for this district. Some years ago Nipissing Lodge No. 79 presented him with the Veteran's Jewel, of which he was very proud.

Mr. Hardy was a man of a very varied experience, having been at different times in his life spinner, merchant, soldier, tuner, manufacturer and traveler. He had been connected with the Mason and Hamlin Organ and Piano Company of Boston; McLeod and Wood, Guelph; the Uxbridge Organ and Piano Company, and other organ and piano companies and was a wonderfully skilled tuner. He was very fond of music, both vocal and instrumental, and was particularly fond of the violin. He had a good deal to do years ago with the development of orchestral music in Uxbridge. In his earlier life, he had a fine tenor voice. He had written and published several musical compositions. He was a man of strong personality, with a decided vein of independence, with a good deal of the pioneer instinct, a very fine sense of humor, and a great belief in education.

He belonged to the Puritan stock of New England, and was descended from many New England families of distinction. . . . On his mother's side Mr. Hardy was descended from Edward Spaulding who came to Virginia in 1619 and afterwards settled in New England about 1630.¹⁵

Edwin Austin Hardy was a small boy of three years when he moved with his parents to Guelph, Ont., Canada, where he started on his educational career as a youngster at school. From the very first day of attendance upon instruction it was apparent that this lad would make a name for himself educationally, for books and everything literary appealed to him. But he was destined to be more than a scholar. His love of people and his genius for leadership and organization have made him a "man among men" and one of Canada's leading educators.

For sixteen years he was English Master at the Lindsay Collegiate Institute at Lindsay, Ont. Since 1910 he has been on the faculty of the Jarvis Collegiate Institute at Toronto, and is Head of the Department of English. Although he has given more than forty years of his life to educational work, and has earned retirement from active service, he is looked upon by his associates as one of the most vigorous and dynamic personalities of the profession today. He has been honored on many occasions, as will be seen in a summary of his career below. He recently retired as editor of The Bulletin, the official publication of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, and the following tribute was paid to him in the February, 1935, issue:

After eight years as editor of the Bulletin, Dr. Hardy retired. At the December Meeting of the Federation he was unanimously and enthusiastically made Honorary Life Member on the Executive. No honor was ever more deserved. No man in Ontario has done more during the past forty years to raise the status of the teacher with the public and to give teachers increased respect for their own profession. He was one of the first to obtain the doctor's degree in Pedagogy. He was one of the first to realize the value of organized co-operative effort. He was one of the founders of the Toronto Teachers' Council of our own Federation and of the Canadian Teachers' Federation. Of each of these organizations he became president. He has become known far beyond our own Dominion and since 1927 has been Treasurer of the World Federation of Education Associations. In every province and in many countries he has represented the teachers of Ontario with a dignity and a charm that reflected most favorably on his own province.

At all times he has wisely advocated the closest co-operation between teachers and trustees and the Department of Education. The Fireside Conference of last winter was a unique and successful demonstration of his resourcefulness in this direction.

His wide interests have indirectly helped the profession, no less effectively perhaps, than his more direct activities. He has been Secretary and President of the Ontario Library Association, National Secretary of the Canadian Authors' Association, and President of the Toronto Branch of that association, President of the Ontario Sunday School Association, and Chairman of the Council of the Ontario College of Art. A few days ago Yorkminster Baptist Church where he has been active as associate S. S. Superintendent for more than 25 years elected him a life deacon.

In all his work his method has been "suaviter in modo, fortiter in re." His courtesy in debate has not diminished his resolution in the advocacy of policies he approves. He has done much in the past but he always presses on towards a higher mark. For the profession he has a fair vision which it would be well for us all to capture: a Headquarters Building, a professional library, a Travel Bureau, a monthly Bulletin, higher qualifications for secondary teachers, a full-time secretary for our federation. How he has survived his many duties is a source of wonder to those who know best what hard work some of these duties involve. May he long continue to give inspiration to his fellow teachers. May the new editors catch something of his fine spirit.

Dr. Hardy, in addition to his keen interest and active participation in educational and religious affairs, has found time to become actively engaged in other worthwhile pursuits. He is an author and literary critic. He has written several articles for magazines and periodicals in Canada, Great Britain and the United States. He is editor of Selections from Wordsworth and Tennyson. For ten years he was educational editor of the Toronto Globe. He is a member of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers of Great Britain. He is a member of the Arts and Letters Club of Toronto, vice-president of the Ontario Branch of the English-Speaking Union, vice-president of the Canadian Branch of the League of the Empire, vice-president of the Community Welfare Council of Ontario, member of the Magna Carta Association, member of the I. O. O. F., and vice-president of the Hardy Family Association.

Mrs. Hardy graduated from Moulton's Ladies' College at Toronto, and before marriage was a teacher. She has been actively engaged in Girl Guide work, in women's work of various kinds, social and political, and is devoted to gardening.

DURHAM, N. H.

Below are given family data of descendants of Theophilus Hardy, Jr., of Durham, New Hampshire. Authorities disagree as to the parentage of this Theophilus Hardy. Doctor E. A. Hardy of Toronto, Canada, who has done a great deal of research work in connection with his family, has become convinced that the father of Theophilus Hardy, Jr., was a son of Theophilus and Sarah (Follett) Hardy of Durham, New Hampshire, mentioned above, and for this reason the names of some of the members of the Theophilus Hardy, Jr., family are given here as possible lineal descendants of Samuel Hardy of Beverly, Massachusetts, although the authors and compilers desire to point out that there are conflicting evidences and it is equally possible that Theophilus Hardy, Jr., was the son of another Theophilus Hardy, who came to this country about 1720.

1. THEOPHILUS¹ HARDY, JR., born 1748; died 1778; married, 4 May 1768, MARY SULLIVAN, only daughter of JOHN and MARGERY SULLIVAN, born 1752 and died 1827.

Theophilus Hardy, Jr., was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and served under his brother-in-law, Major-General John Sullivan, who was President (Convener) of New Hampshire and a lawyer at Durham, New Hampshire.

The parents of Mary and Major-General John Sullivan came from Ireland to Berwick, Maine, about 1723, according to John H. Goodwin, Librarian of South Berwick, Maine, who has compiled the family pedigree, and the family claims direct descent from the Sullivan whose name was taken by the Sept of Sullivan and hence, from the fourteenth King of Munster. John Sullivan was born at Limerick, Ireland, in 1692 and died at Berwick, Maine, in 1796. His wife, Margery Sullivan, was born at Cork, Ireland, in 1714 and died at Berwick, Maine, in 1801.

Theophilus Hardy, Jr., was a felt-maker and lawyer.

CHAPTER XIV

THE HUGH HARDY FAMILY OF THE JUNIATA VALLEY, PA.

By Alexander D. Hardy of Brantford, Canada

The name Hardy is one of considerable antiquity in Scotland and is understood to be of French derivation.

The traditional account recorded by Sir George MacKenzie relates the incident gathered from various sources of the imprisonment of King David II (1324-71) of Scotland and King of France in the Tower by the English King, Edward III. On their release King Edward ordered his cup bearer to fill to the worthiest. He naturally filled to his master, Edward III, whereupon the officer of the French King gave him a box on the ears, thereby bringing on himself a reproof from his master, who said, "Tout Hardi", meaning "too bold", from which utterance of the French king the family name and motto is said to have taken its origin.

The French officer subsequently accompanied King David to Scotland and was granted the lands of Corgarff in Marr on the upper reaches of the Don in Aberdeenshire. Here Sir Hugh Hardy, at a later period the representative of the family, lived.

After many vicissitudes of fortune the family was to be found among the Covenanters of Scotland, those Presbyterians who withstood much persecution for the sake of their religion. A number of the Hardys who participated in the Battle of Bothwell Bridge against the forces of Charles II in 1679 took refuge in the North of Ireland. Subsequently one Hugh Hardy came to America, being a first settler in the Juniata Valley, Pa., in 1750. The river of that name enters the Susquehanna River 14 miles above Harrisburg, now the State Capital. John Hardy and others of the same family later settled there, including also Thomas Hardy, who acquired the McQuire Tract in the same region in 1767.

At the outbreak of the Revolution in 1776 the family was divided, some adhering to the Crown and others to the cause of the Revolution. Those of the family here set forth who went to Canada after the Revolution, and received land grants from the Crown, in recognition of military service, are the descendants of Thomas Hardy.

John Hardy, an officer in the Grenadier Company of the 84th Royal Highland Regiment, who had served throughout the war, on settling in Canada received considerable grants of land in the vicinity of Niagara Falls. As Captain John Hardy he also took an active part in the battles of the Niagara frontier, 1812-14, and is buried at Lundy's Lane.

A younger brother, Alexander, accompanied Captain John Hardy to Canada and later settled in the region now forming part of Brant County, Ontario. He married Katharine Brackbill of New Jersey. Among their children was Russell Hardy, who in 1833 married Juletta Sturgis, whose forbears were among the earliest settlers of that name in Philadelphia. Issue of this marriage included the late Honorable Arthur Sturgis Hardy, K.C., LL.B., for twenty-four years a member of the government of Ontario and Attorney General and Premier of the Province, 1896-99. His Honor Alexander David Hardy, who is still presiding judge after nearly forty years on the County Court of Brant, also local judge of the High Court of Justice at Brantford, Ontario, is another member of this family. The Honorable Senator, Arthur Charles Winnett Hardy, K.C., P.C., Brockville and Ottawa, a former Speaker of the Senate of Canada, and a member of his Privy Council, is a son of the late Honorable Arthur Sturgis Hardy.¹

1. The following concerning Honorable Arthur Sturgis Hardy is taken from Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, Vol. III, page 80:

"Canadian statesman, b. at Mount Pleasant, Brant County, Ontario, 14 December 1837. He was educated at a grammar school and at the Rockwood Academy, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1865. He then began practice at Brantford, was appointed city solicitor in 1867, and in 1875 elected a bencher of the Law Society of Ontario. In 1873 he was elected to the Legislature of Ontario for South Brant, re-elected for the same constituency in 1875, by acclamation, and in March, 1877, became provincial secretary and registrar of Ontario. Mr. Hardy has introduced and carried through the Legislature measures consolidating and amending the juror's act, and others relating to the liquor-license law, the jurisdiction of division courts, and joint-stock companies."

A brother of Honorable Alexander David Hardy, Eugene Brackbill Hardy, now deceased, resided at Galesburg, Illinois. Two sons, Arthur K. and Guy, attorneys at law, still reside in Galesburg. The wife of Eugene Brackbill Hardy was Jennie Killam, a member of a well-known family in that district and who survived her husband for some years.

BRADFORD, MASS.

1. THOMAS¹ HARDY, born in England, 1605; died at Bradford, Mass., 4 Jan. 1677-8; married, first, LYDIA; married, second, ANN (or ANNAH), who died 1 May 1689.

Practically all writers of Hardy history are agreed that Thomas Hardy came to America with Governor Winthrop in 1630. This is the common tradition held by different branches of the family. By a process of elimination the proof seems conclusive. It is known positively that on 12 March 1632-3 Thomas Hardy and his wife were members of the company of thirteen families who joined in the settlement of Agawam, later called Ipswich, in Massachusetts. It is further known that the members of the party were carefully chosen some time previous to 17 Jan. 1632-3 by the Board of Assistants of the Bay State. It is, therefore, clear that he could not have come to this country in 1633 or late in 1632, as immigrants did not attempt to cross the ocean during the winter months. During the years 1631 and 1632 only about 340 persons came over from England. There were 90 in 1631, and 250 in 1632, nearly all of whom are accounted for. Unfortunately, the list of those who came with Winthrop was lost. At the same time there are other evidences which lead to the same conclusion—that Thomas Hardy came to America in 1630 with Governor Winthrop's expedition, which numbered 17 ships and more than 1,500 passengers. It is known that some of his most intimate friends, such as John Gage, came over at that time, and the families of Gage and Hardy frequently intermarried.

Again practically all of the historians of the Hardy family are agreed that there were at least two brothers, Thomas and John; the former settling at Ipswich, Mass., and the latter at Salem, Mass., while those who have made the most careful study of the family history are convinced that there was a third brother (a Richard, a James or a Samuel). Moreover, there is a tradition among certain members of the Hardy Family that a third brother "went South." This suggests a possible relationship to the Hardys of Isle of Wight County, Va., although no proof of any relationship between the two families has yet been established.¹ However, it is known that John Hardy of Isle of Wight County, Va., belonged to the landed gentry of England, or the yeomen class, sometimes referred to as "statesmen", a term which formerly meant persons living upon small "states" (or estates) that were cultivated by the same family from generation to generation, and were held by the peculiar tenure known as Border Tenant-right.¹ It is believed that Thomas Hardy, subject of this sketch, belonged to the yeomen class. The suggestion has been made by certain investigators that Thomas Hardy came from Westmorland County in England, and this is plausible, since it is a fact that at least nine contemporary Hardys, heads of families, were living in that county between 1538 and 1600.² Their names were Peter, Leonard, Stephen, Roland, John, Edmund, Thomas, Richard and James. Then, too, the suggestion has been made that Thomas Hardy was born in Dorset County, England, since there were Hardys, presumably of the yeomen class, residing in that county prior to 1600. Among those Hardys were: Thomas, John, James, Robert.³ The John Hardy of Isle of Wight County, Va., could not have been a brother of Thomas Hardy of Ipswich, Mass., but might have been a cousin.

There can be no reasonable doubt that Thomas Hardy was married when he arrived here. The early settlers of Agawam were married men in 1633, and there is rapidly accumulating evidence that his wife's name was Lydia and that she was the mother of all of his children. Reference to her is made in the *New Hampshire Genealogical and Family History*⁴ as follows:

His first wife Lydia who probably accompanied him from England was the mother of all his children. His second wife Ann or Annah survived him more than eleven years.

There is evidence that Lydia, the first wife of Thomas, died and was buried at Haverhill, Mass. That Lydia was his first wife and the mother of his children is now generally accepted by the best research students of genealogy.

Milton C. Hardy, deceased, one of the best of the early authorities on Hardy history, was convinced that he had found evidence that Thomas Hardy, as well as his brother John, lived in Salem. In the New England Family History it is stated that he lived in Boston. Some students of the Hardy Family believe that he lived in Dorchester, Mass., and support their positions with suggestive evidence. That there are these various traditions strengthens the conclusion that Thomas Hardy came to this country in Governor Winthrop's party.

Reference has already been made to the fact that Thomas Hardy was one of twelve men chosen to join in the settlement of Agawam, Mass. The Rev. T. Frank Waters, in Ipswich, in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, has given such an excellent account of the purpose and character of the settlement of Agawam, now Ipswich, Mass., that we quote:

John Winthrop, Jr., was selected (1633) as the leader of the expedition—the settlement of Agawam. There was a great fear that the French who were more and more encroaching on the settlements of the Bay Colony might take possession of this most desirable district, consequently the Governor and Council (Court of Assistants) determined to get in ahead of the French and the Indians. He (John Winthrop, Jr.) was but 27 years of age, yet a man of large practical sagacity and undoubted gifts of leadership. Twelve were assigned with him (by the choice of the Court of 17 Assistants) with the promise of more when the ships arrived, but of these twelve the names of only nine have been preserved, Mr. Clerk, Robert Coles, Thomas Howlett, John Biggs, John Gage, Thomas Hardy, Mr. Thorndike and William Sargeant. The settlement was begun in March 1633. There were no roads, and the journey was undoubtedly in a shallop skirting the coast. They probably did not take their wives until later. All the twelve were picked or chosen men. They were all young men and married, moreover they were friends not only one with another but evidently friends of the Governor's son. The establishment of a settlement at Agawam was of the utmost importance and it is obvious that only young men prominent in the affairs of the colony, of courage and high standing, would be selected to accompany John Winthrop, Jr. in an undertaking so difficult and dangerous.

Agawam was not a wilderness settlement. The Indians had cleared the forests, burned the brush and tilled the fields; the river and the bay provided excellent fishing. For many years the Indians, because of the attractive location, the fertile soil and the fishing, had established there a permanent encampment. Because of its strategic position the Indians, the French and the English were each eager to control the settlement. It appears that the Indians had been driven out by the incoming of nondescript French and English adventurers. Late in 1630 (Sept. 7) the Court of Assistants voted: "A warrant shall be presently sent to Agawam for those planted there to Come away." The Court of Assistants orders, 17 Jan. 1633, "that a plantation be commenced at Agawam (being the best place in the land for tillage and cattle) lest an enemy finding it should possess and take it from us. Governor Winthrop's son John is to undertake this settlement and to have no more out of the colony than twelve men, the rest to be supplied at the coming of the next ships." Action of the Court of Assistants 1 April 1633: "It is ordered that no person whatsoever shall goe to plant or inhabit att Agawam without leave of the Court, except those who have already gone." (Then follows the nine names.) We note that the expédition had already gone before 1 April 1633, and that the members had been selected in January. It is safe to presume that when the party reached Agawam the latter part of March they found there huts or log cabins which would shelter them temporarily until they could build for themselves.

Almost immediately on the arrival of the settlers there was an allotment of "house lots." Thomas Hardy's house lot is now well known, and its boundaries defined. The well which he dug was in constant use until recently, and is now easily recognized by the efforts of the artist Mr. Carl H. Nordstrom of Ipswich, who lives near by. The foundation outlines of the original house are clearly distinguished. The Maine Historical and Genealogical Recorder states:⁵

The first frame house in Ipswich was erected by Thomas Hardee, one of the twelve who came with John Winthrop, Jr. It was near the ship yard of Mr. Edward Choate. The trace of the cellar was discernable within the recollection of people now living (1898) and the old well is still used.

This must have been in 1634, as there are records of a house being built in 1634-5. Records have been recently found which show that there were saw-pits, and probably a sawmill was built the second year of the settlement, viz. 1634. Thomas Hardy and his wife were charter members of the village church. Unfortunately, all the records of the town and church were destroyed by fire many years ago.

The house was built substantially on a solid foundation with a stone doorstep. The house was, of course, very small. An ample fireplace provided means for heating and cooking. Around the house was probably at first a stockade of poles driven into the ground. Within the stockade were beds of old-time flowers and herbs which would be dear to both as a reminder of old England. The Agawam settlers carried with them garden seed and sapling fruit trees, for they were enjoying apples, pears and plums within a few years. For the first year they had no church. In 1634, a year and a few months after their arrival, a large body of immigrants arrived, and on 4 Aug. 1634, by order of the Court of Assistants, the name of Agawam was changed to Ipswich in honor of the newcomers.

The authors of this book, with a somewhat wide acquaintance with the character of the early New England settlements, have no hesitation in asserting that the settlers of Ipswich in mentality and character were unexcelled. The pastors of the church were always listed as among the most eminent scholars and distinguished preachers of the Bay Colony, and we may hazard the guess that in proportion to the population more of the distinguished families of America trace their ancestry back to Essex east coast of the old Bay State than to any other part of our country.

A quotation from Dr. Waters, the Ipswich historian, is of interest:

The little colony of a town of a dozen souls became at once a conspicuous center of light and influence. The leader, John Winthrop, Jr., eldest son of Governor John Winthrop gave great prestige. He had been a student of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, and after a course of legal study had been admitted a barrister by the Inner Court 28 Feb. 1624-5. A few years later he enlisted in the navy with the fleet under the Duke of Buckingham for the relief of French protestants at La Rochelle. He spent more than a year in foreign travel. Cultured and companionable, he drew about him by the force of his personality that group of eminent men which made Ipswich a town of rare quality. An air of dignity attached to the new settlement. Three of the little company were gentlemen as the title "Mister" prefixed to their names proclaimed.

Cotton Mather, writing of the ordination of Mr. Rogers at the Ipswich church, 1638, has this to say:

Here was a renowned church consisting mostly of such illuminated Christians that their pastors in the exercise of their ministry might in the language of Jerome perceive that they had not disciples so much as judges.

Numerous similar quotations might be cited did space permit. It is sufficient to note that Thomas Hardy was a prominent citizen in such a settlement. The meagre town records of that period indicate that he was honored by positions of trust and responsibility. On 21 June 1637 he was one of the signers of the Petition of Remonstrance against the departure of John Winthrop, Jr., from Ipswich. The petition was sent to the Governor and to the Court of Assistants. John Winthrop withdrew, however, and later became the governor of Connecticut. This action on his part was, no doubt, due to the death of his wife at Ipswich and the breaking up of his home.

In 1653 Thomas Hardy removed to Rowley, Mass., and ten years later to Bradford, where he became the owner of one thousand acres of land in the most beautiful section of that district. Here he built a house and dug a deep well. The house has long since disappeared, but the well has been located on a tract of land now owned by Dr. J. Hazen Hardy of New York City, who plans to have it restored for use. Bancroft, the historian, in his History of the United States of America, has written of the men who came over with Governor Winthrop.⁶ Most of those who came to this country with Governor Winthrop in 1630 were persons of high standing, of substantial means, and of good education, according to Bancroft, as indicated in his own words as follows:

Many of them men of high endowment and large fortune; scholars, well versed in the learning of the times; clergymen, who ranked among the best educated and most pious in the realm.⁶

In an address at the unveiling of the Memorial Tablets on South Common 29 Jul. 1896, the Rev. T. Frank Waters, the Ipswich Historian, said:

Here some of the finest men of this age or of any age, built their homes, thought and wrought, trained their children, entertained their friends, and their names and the work they did are known and felt and honored of all who knew the story of New England in the first eventful century.

In the old records we read: "There was great distress when it was learned in 1637 that John Winthrop, Jr., was likely to withdraw from the Ipswich Colony." A Petition of Remonstrance was sent to the Governor and the Councillors. It was drawn and signed by the pastors and fifty of the leading citizens, and Thomas Hardy was one of the signers. It should be noted that the settlement had made rapid growth since 1634.

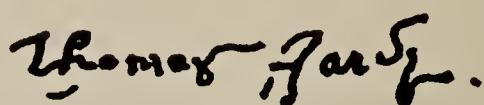

One of the references in the Remonstrance is especially interesting, and is as follows:

It was for his sake that many of us came to this place and without him we should not have come. His abode with us hath made our abode here much more comfortable than otherwise it could have been. . . . Some of us that were members of the Church in Boston are bold to clayme this promise from Mr. Winthrop for whom we write, that if we would come hither with him he would not forsake us but live and die with us. Upon these promises we came with him to begin this plantation.

This old manuscript was found among the Winthrop papers, and first published in 1887. Special reference is called to the signature of Thomas Hardy, shown on this page, because a few writers have drawn the hasty conclusion that he could not write, since, due to an infirmity, he failed to sign his name to his will in his old age.

In the Memorial History of Bradford, page 94, we read that in 1676 Thomas Hardy, Sr., and his two sons, Thomas and John, gave two acres of land for the village church, which was soon to organize. The church was incorporated in 1682. Annah, widow of Thomas Hardy, was a charter member, joining on confession.

The village names of the district where the Hardys early settled are a bit confusing. As we have already stated, very soon after the settlement of Agawam, later Ipswich, in fact the very next year, there was a large accession to the population. In 1638 Rev. Ezekiel Rogers and about sixty industrious families made a new settlement near Ipswich which for a brief time was called Rogers Plantation, but in 1639 was incorporated under the name of Rowley, so named because the pastor and many of the families came from Rowley, England. Rowley then included the whole district now divided into Georgetown, Graveland, Bradford, Rowley and Boxford. Until 1672 the district including Bradford and Groveland was first called Rowley village and later Merrimack, and became incorporated, 1673, under the name of Bradford. In 1726 a portion was set off as East Bradford. References are often made to Thomas Hardy of Bradford or Merrimac or Groveland.

Thomas Hardy made his will 4 March 1671-2 and added a codicil 12 Dec. 1677, at which time he declared that he was about 72 years of age. He was, therefore, born in 1605. He died

4 Jan. 1677-8. His will reads as follows: His wife to have sole use of the house and buildings, etc., during her life; Thomas Hardy, his eldest son, to have 200 acres of land that had been laid out to him lately. John, Joseph and Jacob each to have 100 acres with meadow; Mary and her children and her husband, Samuel Currier; Sarah, whose husband was William Hutchins; William Hardee to have the residue when he came of age. The will was proved 26 May 1678. In it he mentioned his wife, but not by name. However, we know that her name was Ann or Annah, and that she was his second wife. She survived him eleven years, and died 1 May 1689. His residence in his will is described as Merrimack, near Haverhill, but as indicated already, that section had been incorporated as Bradford in 1637. His will was witnessed by Jona Danforth and James Riggs. The codicil was witnessed by John Neromarck, Sr., Samuel Worcester and Jonathan Danforth, Sr.

His marriage was the first to be recorded on the Rowley records. She was born at Rowley 17 June 1644 and died 15 Aug. 1716, "aged 72 years." He was THOMAS, JR., until his father's death. After that he was called THOMAS, SR. His wife MERCY was admitted to the Bradford Church 4 Sept. 1694. He was admitted to the same church as "Old Thomas Hardy" 12 Jul. 1713. He died at Bradford 6 Feb. 1716 "in his 82nd year." He made a will 3 Mar. 1714-5 with witnesses Thomas Symms, Jon. Pemberton and Edward Wood. The will was proved 19 Mar. 1716. He made his will 24 Nov. 1729, witnessed by Samuel Tenny, Jno. Pemberton and Thomas Stickney. The will was proved 2 Feb. 1729-30. His wife, ESTHER, was to have all the use of his real property and personal estate to be at her disposal. His brother DANIEL was excluded from any share in his estate because DANIEL had received more of his father's estate than the rest of his brothers. ISAAC directed that his land, after the death of his wife, ESTHER, be divided among the rest of his brothers and sisters. At that time there were left three brothers besides DANIEL, viz., WILLIAM, JACOB and BENJAMIN, and two sisters, HANNAH and SARAH. ISAAC had no children. His widow, ESTHER, probably m. at Bradford, 4 Mar. 1730-1 for her second husband, SAMUEL POTTER.

6. WILLIAM² HARDY (*Thomas*¹), born probably at Ipswich about 1644. He married, first, at Bradford, Mass., 3 May 1678, RUTH TENNY. She was a daughter of DEACON WILLIAM TENNY and was born at Rowley, Mass., 16 Mar. 1653-4. She died at Bradford 27 Apr. 1689. He married again, probably about 1689. His second wife was SARAH, presumably SARAH SAVORY, daughter of ROBERT SAVORY.

William Hardy was one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church, organized at Groveland 7 June 1727, and served as Deacon. After 1690 he was known as William, Sr. He died about 1722 without making a will. His son William, at the request of his mother, Sarah Hardy, supported by Richard Kimball and Samuel Hardy, was appointed administrator of the estate 30 Jan. 1722-3. The estate was divided 3 Nov. 1725 by agreement between the widow and children.

A widow, Sarah Hardy, was living in 1729, according to David W. Hoyt, noted historian and genealogist, and probably in 1743. She died at Bradford, he states, April or May, 1752, in her 96th year.⁷

He and his wife were both admitted to the Bradford Church 26 Apr. 1691 and he was one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727. He died at Bradford 3 Apr. 1706, "in his 58th year." She died at Bradford 24 June or 29, 1737.

Jacob Hardy died without making a will. His widow, Lydia, was given administration of the estate 6 May 1706. Division of the real property took place 2 Nov. 1713. It was agreed that she was to receive one-third of the estate, while the remaining two-thirds was to go to sons Jacob and Joseph with the understanding that they were to give to their sisters, Lydia, Ruth, Eunice and Mehitable, equal shares when they became 21 years of age.

The administration of the estate of widow Lydia was granted son Joseph 25 Sept. 1737. Division of the real property took place 26 Sept. 1737.

Until about 1722 he was known as William, Jr., probably in order to distinguish him from his uncle, William. After 1722 he was known as William, Sr. The Bradford Church records show that he was admitted to that church as William, Jr., 24 Apr. 1720.

William Hardy died at Bradford 14 Apr. 1752, "in his 83rd yr.", without making a will. The administration of his estate was granted to his son "Thomas, Jr." 27 Nov. 1752.

She was born at Rowley, Mass., in 1679. For his second wife he married DAMARIS DICKINSON of Rowley, Mass., at Rowley, 16 June 1746. His first wife, MARTHA, died at Bradford 24 Feb. 1745, "in her 66th year."

According to the Bradford church records, Daniel's wife, Martha, was received into that church 3 June 1706. He himself was received 26 June 1720. He was one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727.

Daniel³ was Captain of the company of local militia and was the father of Capt. Eliphalet Hardy (See No. 54) and the grandfather of Eliphalet Hardy, Jr., of Bradford, Mass., and Pelham, N. H., also a military officer of high rank.

Captain Daniel Hardy died at Bradford 31 Jul. 1756, "in his 82nd year." On 24 May 1749 he made a will, which was proved 1 Nov. 1756.

Widow Damaris Hardy died before 21 Jul. 1763, probably at Bradford, Mass. She made her will 7 Oct. 1761. The will was proved 19 Sept. 1763. She is called in the will "Damaris Hardy, alias Lever." Mention is made of the children of her deceased sister, Sarah, "wife of Jonathan Dresser of Pomfret, Ct.", also of those of her sister Lydia, "some time wife of Stephen Jewett of Rowley."

8. Some authorities think William Hardy had other children, perhaps by a first wife. If so, he might have been the William Hardy of Concord, Mass., who had five children born between 1689 and 1698.

Until about 1722, he was known as "WILLIAM, 3RD", to distinguish him from WILLIAM (11). After the death of his father, WILLIAM (6), about 1722, he was known as "WILLIAM, JR.", to distinguish him again from WILLIAM (11), who had become WILLIAM, SR. After the death of WILLIAM (11), 14 Apr. 1752, he was called "WILLIAM, SR."

William Hardy was chosen "Deacon" of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727, being elected to serve in that capacity in 1728.

Thomas Hardy, Jr., was received into membership of the Bradford Church 26 June 1720 and was one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727.

Some descendants of Thomas³ and Martha Hardy have believed that this Thomas was a son of Thomas² and Mercy (Tenny) Hardy instead of William² and Sarah (Savory) Hardy, as here given. The authors have taken special pains to examine all available evidence in this connection, and have come to the conclusion that the record as given in this book is correct beyond any question of doubt. David W. Hoyt, eminent genealogist, in his compilation entitled The Hardy Family of Bradford,¹⁰ has listed Thomas³ Hardy as son of William² and not of Thomas². Besides, as Hoyt has implied,¹¹ Thomas³ (born 29 June 1667) probably died as a young man unmarried, since he was not mentioned in his father's will in 1716. Dr. Louis A. Woodbury of Bradford, Mass., one of the most reliable authorities on Hardy genealogy, as far as the Bradford records are concerned, has also stated that Thomas³ Hardy was a son of William² and Sarah Hardy.

Mention has already been made of the fact that William² Hardy, father of Thomas³, died intestate.¹² In the settlement of the estate it appears that the four sons, Samuel, William, Thomas and Edmund, bought out their sisters, Ann and Sarah, and agreed with their mother in reference to the rights of dowry. Doctor Woodbury has corroborated these facts in a letter as follows:

William (Ephraim?) Lacy of Andover and his wife Ann and Sarah Hardy of Bradford, daughters of William Hardy, late of Bradford having received their legacies in their father's will released to their brothers, Samuel, William, Thomas and Edmund all their right to the personal and real estate of their father William Hardy.

Thomas died at Bradford 19 Dec. 1736, without making a will. Administration of his estate was granted his widow, Martha, 7 Feb. 1736-7, and the real estate was divided in 1744. She moved to Hollis, N. H., with her son Phineas, and died there 27 May 1783, "age 82 years."

On 29 Dec. 1757, at Bradford, he married again, this time SARAH JEWETT.

Edmund Hardy was admitted to the Bradford Church 7 Feb. 1725 and was one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727.

There is no record of the death of Edmund, but it is known that he was living in 1759. It is possible that he moved to Pelham, N. H., with his son, Edmund, Jr (See No. 96), and died there.

He died "very suddenly, being abroad the greater part of the day", at Bradford, 24 Jan. 1747.

Joseph Hardy was called "Joseph, Jr." until after the death of Joseph (5), 11 Jan. 1726-7, when he was known as Joseph, Sr. A widow, Mary Hardy, "ancient", died 3 Sept. 1762. He was a soldier in 1710-11.

Mary Hardy, wife of Joseph, was received by the Bradford Church 4 or 14 May 1704. He was received by the same church 24 Apr. 1720. He was also one of the first 101 members of the new church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727.

Joseph has been referred to by some authorities as "Corp" and by others as "Cooper." The latter is probably more correct, indicating his occupation. He owned the oldest house now standing in Groveland, on King St., built in 1676.

The date of the death of JOHN (32) is not known. He was living in 1727. The date of the death of his wife, ANNE, is not definitely known either, although the Bradford records state: "ANNA, ancient widow, mother of JONATHAN, died 10 Mar. 1740-1."

John Hardy and his wife moved to Westborough, Mass., soon after their marriage. After the death of his father, 1 Feb. 1714-5, he became John, Sr. Prior to that he was known as John, Jr.

Richard Hardy was received into the Bradford Church 28 Jul. 1723 from the Haverhill, Mass., Church. He was also one of the 101 first members of the new Congregational Church organized at Groveland, Mass., 7 June 1727. She was admitted to the Bradford Church 30 June 1723.

14. John 32 settled in Hassanamisco, Indian name for Grafton and originally part of Westborough, Mass. It is possible that he had other children, in addition to those named above. David W. Hoyt, genealogist, thinks "John, a young man, who died at Bradford, Mass., 14 Jul. 1737" was his son. (See The Essex Historical Collections, Vol. XLVII, page 177.)

He died probably in the early part of the year 1724-5, without making a will, since his widow, PRUDENCE, was given the administration of his estate 8 Feb. 1724-5. The estate was divided in 1735. The Boxford records give intention of marriage of widow PRUDENCE and EDWARD CLEMENT, "May-Oct." 1725. She married, 30 May 1729, ROBERT DANIELSON.

In the administration of his estate, Nathaniel Hardy is referred to as a brother of Jonathan Hardy. This probably meant his brother John.

25. It is an interesting fact which can hardly be duplicated that the three sisters, Alice, Sybil and Hannah, married three brothers, Nathaniel, Hinksman and Jephtha Coburn, without a change of name. 81. GIDEON⁴ HARDY (Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Bradford, Mass., 7 May 1722. He married, first, at Bradford, Mass., 24 May 1744, MARY GAGE, a daughter of DANIEL⁴ GAGE and granddaughter of DANIEL³ GAGE, who was a grandson of JOHN¹ GAGE. The latter came to America from Suffolk, England, in 1630, landing at Salem, Mass., 12 June in company with John Winthrop, Jr. JOHN¹ GAGE was, with THOMAS¹ HARDY of Salem, of Boston, of Ipswich, of Bradford, Mass., immigrant ancestor of GIDEON (81), one of the twelve first settlers of Ipswich, Mass., under John Winthrop, Jr. MARY GAGE was born 31 Aug. 1722. She died at Bradford, Mass., 9 Mar. 1753, "in her 34th year." For his second wife GIDEON (81) married at Bradford, Mass., 28 June 1753, MERCY HARDY, a daughter of MOSES (57) and DOROTHY HARDY (See No. 180). His second wife was probably a widow at the time of their marriage.²⁶ She died at Bradford, Mass., 29 Apr. 1783.

Gideon Hardy served in the French and Indian War. He was one of the twenty-two Hardys on the "Alarm List" of 97 men

26. In his will, Gideon 81 mentioned wife Mercy, her father, Moses 57 Hardy, and "her daughter Mary which she had before our marriage."

Reuben Hardy served in the French and Indian War. He was one of the twenty-two Hardys on the "Alarm List" of 97 men from Bradford, Mass.

27. David W. Hoyt, genealogist, in his genealogy of The Hardy Family of Bradford, intimates that Richard Hardy married for a second wife Elizabeth Adams, 21 Mar. 1742-3, the same date of the marriage of Reuben and Elizabeth Adams. The Bradford vital records do not show a marriage of Richard Hardy and Elizabeth Adams. The only Richard mentioned is the one who married Sarah Hardy, 23 Jan. 1723-4. Therefore, it would appear Hoyt was in error.

83. PHINEAS or PHINEHAS⁴ HARDY (*Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Bradford, Mass., 11 Jul. 1726; died at Hollis, N. H., 7 Mar. 1813. He married at Haverhill, Mass., 19 May 1749, ABIGAIL GAGE. They moved to Hollis, N. H., in 1751 or 1752. His wife ABIGAIL died also at Hollis, N. H., 12 April 1808, "aged 82 years."

According to a son Moses, Phineas Hardy, soon after his marriage, removed from Bradford to a "clearing", west of the present city of Nashua, more recently known as the Riverside Farm, "but he was so lonely that he moved up to Hollis (N. H.) Long Pond (now Silver Lake), in order to be near civilization."

In the spring of 1751 he purchased the homestead of John Atwell at the head of Long Pond. In 1735 Atwell, the eighth settler in the town, engaged in hunting and fishing, purchased from the original proprietors eight acres of forest land on the lake shore, clearing a portion and building thereon a log cabin. In 1751 Mr. Hardy, his wife Abigail and a baby daughter, Elizabeth, 28. There was an Israel Hardy, Minute Man, from Bradford, Mass., who might have been this Israel. He had other Revolutionary War service; was perhaps killed. William B. Ladd, historian and genealogist, of Groveland, Mass., thinks Israel 236 died young, as shown above.

29. William B. Ladd, historian and genealogist, of Groveland, Mass., gives dates of birth of Judith 238 and Reuben 239 as shown above. A child of Reuben died at Bradford 9 or 10 Mar. 1768. Might have been Judith instead of Israel.

born in Bradford, took possession and made this log cabin their home for thirteen years; there a daughter and five sons were born.

In 1764 Mr. Hardy built a commodious, attractive gambrel-roofed house, now standing (1935) in excellent condition, the oldest house in Hollis. There is, however, very little of the antique about the house except its age. The old log cabin was located on the hillside a short distance from the shore of the lake. The house is beautifully located close to the water's edge, and architecturally is a rather remarkable building, the dormer windows being a later addition. The house is a monument of frugality, good taste and substantial workmanship. It seems impossible that a growing pioneer family could erect such a house in those pioneer days. Phineas Hardy's descendants owned and occupied this homestead for more than a century.

Martha, mother of Phineas Hardy, soon after the house was built came from Bradford to Hollis, and made her home with her son, dying there 27 May 1783, at the age of 83, and was buried in the Hollis Churchyard.

Mr. Hardy's name first appears as a taxpayer in 1752. He was listed as a member of the Hollis Congregational Church in 1755. His wife Abigail had joined the Bradford Church at the age of nineteen years. Probably both joined the Hollis church soon after their arrival in town.

At the outbreak of the Revolutionary War Mr. Hardy, although nearly fifty years of age, enlisted and served in the garrison at Portsmouth three months. Four of his sons, Phineas, Jr., Thomas, Noah and Jesse, were also Revolutionary soldiers at the same time.

His wife represented one of the best of colonial families. She was a direct descendant of John and Annie Gage, who came to New England with Governor Winthrop in 1630. They were intimate friends of Thomas and Lydia Hardy. The Hardys made their home in Salem, the Gages in Trimount or Boston, uniting with the first church there August, 1630. The Gages and the Hardys and ten other families, under the leadership of John Winthrop, Jr., were first settlers in Ipswich, removing there in March, 1633. It is a coincidence worthy of note that Phineas Hardy and Abigail Gage, of the fourth generation of these old-time friends, should unite in marriage.

Mr. Hardy was an honest, industrious, frugal, Christian man, gifted with genial humor and an abundance of common sense. He was an excellent and patriotic citizen, respected and honored by all who knew him.

Abigail died at the homestead 12 Aug. 1808 at the age of 83; Phineas died there 7 May 1813; both were buried in the Hollis Churchyard after a wedded life of 58 years. Well may the numerous descendants take pride in such noble parentage!

234. MOODY⁵ HARDY (Reuben⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Tewksbury, Mass., 22 Aug. 1751. He married at Nottingham, West, N. H. (now Hudson, N. H.), 21 Aug. 1779, HANNAH WICOM. There is no record of the deaths of MOODY HARDY or of his wife. He died first, evidently, for in 1848 his widow, HANNAH, sold land (lot No. 7, formerly owned by Jonathan Bell of Goffstown, N. H.) to Thomas Richards.⁸¹ He was buried in the Goffstown, N. H., cemetery, grave number 23. A small monument marks his burial place.

Moody Hardy was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. He was a Minute Man from Bradford, Mass., and marched on the Lexington Alarm, 19 Apr. 1775. He took part in the Battle of Bunker Hill. There is a tradition among descendants of Moody Hardy that he was the first soldier to be wounded at the Battle of Bunker Hill. He was also in the engagement at Charlestown, Mass. He served in the Revolutionary War until December, 1776. His residence at the time he applied for a government pension was Goffstown, N. H.

Moody Hardy was on the tax list of Nottingham, West, N. H.,⁸² in 1779. His name first appeared on the tax lists of Goffstown, N. H., in 1796.⁸³ He probably moved from Nottingham, West, N. H., to Goffstown, N. H., about 1780. In 1828 he purchased land (lot No. 7) from⁸⁴ Jonathan Bell at Goffstown, N. H. In 1835 he purchased the old portion of the present Amoskeag cemetery.⁸⁵

243. THOMAS⁵ HARDY (Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Hollis, N. H., 11 June 1756; died at Dublin, N. H., 25 Jul. 1816; married at Hollis, N. H., 1 Jan. 1784, LUCY COLBURN. She was born at Hollis, N. H., 12 Jan. 1761, daughter of LIEUT. ROBERT and MARTHA (RUNNELLS) COLBURN, and died at Hollis, N. H., 28 Sept. 1846.

Thomas Hardy was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, serving three years. He served under General Stark. He fought under General Wayne at Stony Point. He was a Minute Man, and marched on the Lexington Alarm, 19 Apr. 1775. He took part in the battles of Bunker Hill, Bennington, and Trenton. He was at West Point, N. H., at the time of Arnold's treachery.⁹⁵ He was with General Greene in the southern campaign, and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va.

There is a tradition that General Washington offered him a commission because of valiant service at West Point and elsewhere, and that he refused to accept on the ground that he was not educated. His descendants claim that later he was made a Lieutenant. This seems confirmed by the gravestone inscription at Dublin which reads as follows:

Erected to the memory of Lieut. Thomas Hardy who died July 25, 1816 at the age of 60 years.

Four of his sons, like their father, were over six feet tall and of remarkable physical strength. The father's prowess is well illustrated by an incident of the war. At the Battle of Trenton, Thomas engaged in a personal encounter with a husky Hessian soldier, and wrested from him a very fine musket which our kinsman used to marked advantage from that time on during the war as he undoubtedly did in the first encounter. This musket was preserved in the family for seventy-five years, but has mysteriously disappeared. He was very highly respected as a citizen in Dublin, and especially because of his fine family.

He purchased, July, 1777, part of lots, ranges 5 and 6, at Dublin, N. H., from his brother-in-law, Thomas Wakefield (married Elizabeth (240) Hardy), who resided on the south part of lot 21, range 5.⁹⁶

244. "DEACON" NOAH⁵ HARDY (*Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Hollis, N. H., 17 Sept. 1758. He married at Townsend, Mass., 1 Feb. 1787, SARAH SPOFFORD. Both spent their declining years with their daughter, HANNAH BUCKMINSTER, in Roxbury, N. H., and later in Antrim, N. H., where he died 21 Dec. 1839 at the age of 77, and where she died 9 May 1850 at the age of 85.

Noah Hardy enlisted in the Revolutionary War at the age of seventeen, and served under various enlistments until 1781. He removed from Hollis, N. H., to Packersfield, N. H. (now Nelson), from which place his last enlistment was made in 1779. It was during his last period of enlistment that Deacon Noah Hardy witnessed the execution of Major John André. He was also present at West Point when the Arnold treason was discovered. General Simon G. Griffin, a Hardy descendant, in an historical sketch written in 1871, relates the following incidents which he heard himself directly from Deacon Noah Hardy while the latter was still living and which have since been verified:

Dea. Noah Hardy was in the army from this town (Nelson, N. H.) and was at West Point when the place was sold by Arnold. When the treason was discovered, orders were given for all the soldiers to remain in their quarters. An officer coming along, Hardy asked him what it meant and was told that the place had been sold to the British—that Arnold had gone over to them—that spies were about, and orders were issued for the purpose of capturing them.

The day Arnold left, Washington arrived there on a visit to West Point, entirely unsuspecting of what had happened. Hardy saw him when the papers taken from André's boots were handed him. He said Washington took them, read them with evident emotion, then crumpled them in his hands, and crammed them into his pockets—walked a short distance and back, took them out and looked at them again, and again crammed them into his pockets and retired to the Commander's station. Presently, horsemen were seen darting out this way and that, riding at full speed across the country. Arnold had sent detachments of the troops out into the country under one pretence and another and had had the guns unlimbered for repairs, all for the purpose of putting the place in the worst possible state for defence so that the British might easily take it in case his schemes failed. These horsemen were sent out to call in these detachments and very soon the place was again prepared for defence.

Deacon Noah Hardy was present at Tappan, N. Y., 2 Oct. 1780, when Major John André was hanged. David Kimball, himself a Revolutionary War soldier from Packersfield, N. H., whose daughter Jerusha married Noah Hardy, Jr., and who thus became an ancestor of a large branch of the Hardy Family, was also present at the execution of Major André and described the scene to General Griffin as follows:

He said he was one of the finest looking gentlemen he ever saw, and when he saw him led to the scaffold he thought he would give anything to save so noble an officer. He was splendidly dressed in uniform—a deep blue coat trimmed and faced with scarlet, buff breeches, white vest, buff gloves, cocked hat and military boots. When all was ready he did not wait for them to remove the plank from under him but settled into the rope himself.

Under date of 9 Aug. 1832, Deacon Noah Hardy made a declaration for a pension, now on file at Washington, D. C., showing Revolutionary War service as follows:

. . . at Winter Hill, near Boston, in 1776 for six or seven weeks; at Portsmouth, N. H., for nine months service, beginning in April 1776; took part in the march to Ticonderoga the latter part of June 1776; took part in the march to resist Burgoyne's Invasion in 1777; went to Rhode Island in August 1778 to take part in a proposed attack upon the British which did not occur due to the failure of the French Fleet to arrive as planned; served at West Point for three months in 1780.

A more detailed account of the Revolutionary War record of Deacon Noah Hardy is given elsewhere in this book. (See page 40.)

Deacon Noah Hardy was a skillful and successful cooper by trade. In addition he was a thrifty farmer. In 1788 he joined the Packersfield Congregational Church and was chosen deacon in 1811. He was very active in church and town affairs. He was a great reader and became a charter member of one of the earliest circulating libraries. He was much respected for his mental alertness and for his strong, Christian character.

- 541 iii. SALLY⁶, b. 8 Dec. 1791; m. 23 Jul. 1812, DAVID AMES, JR., of Hancock, N. H. After marriage they settled as pioneers as Hoosic Falls, N. Y. In 1813 they removed to Hancock, N. H., and settled on the old Ames homestead where they remained until 1823 when they removed to Franklin Falls, N. Y., thence later to Cameron, N. Y., and finally in 1835 to Charlotte Center, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. They were among the first settlers of this township, and the farm purchased by them has remained constantly in the possession of the Ames family, being now owned and occupied by a great-grandson, OSCAR E. AMES (1935). In this section of New York their numerous descendants have made their homes, and there he d. 3 June 1848. She d. 28 Nov. 1879.

DAVID AMES was always doing more or less of farming was a carpenter and builder—building houses for sale. For a number of years he was in the hotel business and sold liquors but becoming convinced of the great evil in drinking and the benefits of prohibition he sold his tavern and became a teetotaler and one of the first prohibitionists of that district. He served for many years in different places as Deputy Sheriff and was influential in town affairs, was a member of the Congregational Church and was especially kind and thoughtful in the home and as a neighbor.

SALLY AMES was a woman of unusual mentality coupled with much affection and rare common sense; she was very religious and conscientious. She was totally blind for sixteen years before her death. This great misfortune did not embitter, but seemed to beautify her life. DAVID and SALLY AMES maintained a Christian home of the highest type. The church next to the home claimed and received their affection, service and loyalty. One son, five grandsons and one grandson-in-law served in the Civil War. Wherever the Ames family lived they were respected and esteemed and it is the proud declaration of the Ames family today that there has been neither pauper nor criminal to stain their record.

A few references to the early family history of DAVID AMES will be a vivid reminder of the stirring and painful experiences of early colonial life to which our ancestors were subjected. DAVID AMES, b. 22 Dec. 1786, was the son of DAVID who moved from Boxford, Mass., to Hollis, N. H., and from there to Hancock. He was the ninth child of JACOB AMES, Groton, Mass. This JACOB saw his father, JOHN AMES, killed by the Indians at the door of his garrison 9 Jul. 1724. JACOB later killed the Indian who killed his father, applied for and received the bounty offered at that time by the Province for the killing of an Indian. His father was the last man killed by the Indians in that township. This JOHN m. PRISCILLA KIMBALL, who as a child saw her father killed in his own dooryard by the Indians, and she and her mother, brothers and sisters were taken captive but later rescued unharmed. JOHN's father, ROBERT AMES or EAMES, pioneer settler of Boxford, Mass., m. about 1660, REBECCA BLAKE of Gloucester, Mass. On 19 Aug. 1692, REV. JOHN BURROUGHS was hung for witchcraft on Gallows Hill, Salem, Mass. Among the spectators was REBECCA AMES of Boxford, then 58 years of age. That very day she was arrested under two indictments for witchcraft, passed a rigid examination, was imprisoned and received the sentence of death 17 Sept. 1692. The execution for some reason was delayed, but she was held as a prisoner until March when she was reprieved and liberated. 22 Jul. 1693, four months later, her husband d. and she remained a widow until her death, 8 Mar. 1721, at the age of 82 years. In 1710 she sent a rather remarkable letter to the General Court of the Province asking it to restore her name to its former purity and to allow certain bills of charge relative to her imprisonment. The Court granted her request in every particular. She seemed to have had the respect and esteem of the people. From her own testimony at the time of the examination, it is clearly apparent that she was mentally unsettled by the Great Delusion and honestly thought she was motivated by occult influences. He knew the men of his company so well that he could stand at the door of his tent and call by name every member of the company. He was a big hearted, jovial, competent and fearless officer, loved and respected by his associates. Did space permit, much might be written of this most interesting man. He was endowed with an extra amount of the Hardy humor. Asked on one occasion if he ever drank, he replied, "I never take a drink unless I am alone or with some one." He moved soon after his marriage to Kansas, and then on to the Pacific Coast. Children:

MARGARET M.⁷, b. 23 Sept. 1825, at Franklin Falls, N. Y.; m. 1847, the HON. HENRY C. LAKE. He was b. 30 May 1822, at Charlotte Center, N. Y. His father and mother represented the best of New England and Puritan ancestry. After graduating from Fredonia Academy he taught school for a season, and then engaged in manufacturing wood mills. In the early sixties, he moved to Fredonia, and there established a pump factory which became a large and prosperous business.

MR. LAKE early espoused the principles of the Republican party; was elected supervisor of Charlotte, and in 1862 was representative to the New York Assembly from Chautauqua County, and there served on important committees and enjoyed the warm friendship of the Governor, Reuben C. Fenton; and for six years was Assistant Surveyor of the Port of New York.

His interests, however, were not confined to business and politics, for he was one of the first to champion the cause of temperance; was largely instrumental in securing the location of the State Normal School at Fredonia; was for many years a director of Dunkirk and Fredonia R. R., and served the State as the Secretary of the Board of Charities.

In 1847, MR. LAKE m. MARGARET M. AMES, the daughter of SALLY HARDY and DAVID AMES. It was a very happy union; his talented wife loyally and efficiently sharing in all the large and varied activities in which he was interested.

MR. LAKE was even tempered, firm of purpose and unswervingly loyal to the best in all the relations of his life. A controlling impulse of his nature was a warm devotion to his kin, the clan spirit being so strong in him that family relationship was ever the passport to his bounties. In public as well as in private life he was ever the model citizen, and the helpful friend, loved by many and esteemed by all. He d. Sept. 1901, gray in years and full of honors and ended as he had lived, "an honest man—the noblest work of God." Children:

CLARENCE H.⁸, b. 20 Nov. 1851, at Charlotte Center, N. Y.; m. June 1875, BELLE C. WEBSTER of Fredonia, a woman of much culture and refinement who entered whole heartedly and efficiently into the manifold activities of MR. LAKE.

MR. LAKE in his boyhood moved with the family to Fredonia where he attended and graduated from the Fredonia Academy. He further pursued his studies at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., afterwards engaging in mercantile and manufacturing interests at Dunkirk and later joining his father there as a partner in the manufacture of pumps.

In the early eighties he was appointed Deputy Sheriff. Three years later he became Under Sheriff and later Sheriff of Chautauqua County. When elected in 1885 to this important office, he was thirty-four years of age, the youngest sheriff in the State of New York. At the expiration of his term of service, he moved to Jamestown where for seven years he was the cashier of the Chautauqua National Bank. He then became financial clerk in the postoffice, and on 20 Feb. 1920 was appointed superintendent of a new postal sub-station established in the city. For over a quarter of a century MR. LAKE thus served his country. When he retired 1 Aug. 1924, the then Postmaster General wrote him in part as follows:

"During all this time you have gone about your duties, faithfully serving your government, your supervisory officials and the many people with whom your duties brought contact."

While a resident of Jamestown, MR. LAKE served as a member of the Board of Aldermen and represented the city on the County Board of Supervisors for three years. Like his father, he was an active, enthusiastic and influential Republican.

MR. LAKE lived forty-five years in Jamestown, and d. there 25 Jan. 1934, a greatly honored and respected citizen. Children:

FRANCIS WEBSTER⁹, b. 1876, at Fredonia, N. Y.

He graduated from the Fredonia Academy, 1893, and from Stanford University, California, 1897. His untimely death occurred that same year, and ended what promised to be a very brilliant career.

HOWARD CLARENCE⁹, b. 3 Apr. 1881, at Fredonia, N. Y.; m. 1909, ELIZABETH LYON, a woman of refinement and winsome character. MR. LAKE graduated from the Jamestown High School, 1899; worked for a year as a reporter on an evening paper of that city, and then entered Cornell University. There he spent four years combining with his legal studies the allied branches of history and economics, graduating in 1904 with honors in public speaking. The same year he was admitted to the practice of law in New York State, and a few months later removed to New York City where he practiced actively and successfully for twenty years. For a number of years he was a deputy under District Attorneys Whitman and Perkins.

In 1920, MR. LAKE, with his family, removed to Pleasantville, Westchester County, N. Y. He has since then successfully practiced law there and in White Plains, the County Seat. He is admirably sustaining the honor and reputation of both the Lake and Ames-Hardy families. Children:

Y.). He was a very handsome young man, and at once attracted the attention not only of the girls in the school but also those of the neighborhood. The most attractive, talented and winsome girl of the school freely boasted that his charms did not interest her, and said, "I would like to see him try to get me." He not only got her but they were married very soon after the close of the school, he at the age of twenty-five and she eighteen. It proved to be a remarkably happy union, and tradition is rather lavish in its praise of the young couple.

They lived in various places in Chautauqua County. First at Charlotte Center where their three children were born; next at Mina where he owned a farm; then Findley Lake where he conducted a hotel for two years. Being elected School Commissioner of Chautauqua County, he removed to Sherman to be nearer the center of his district about 1870. Ten years later he was appointed to a very important position in the New York Custom House. He lost this position when Grover Cleveland was elected President, but had held it during the administrations of Hayes, Garfield and Arthur. While thus employed he made his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., and after his retirement he moved back to Sherman, where he happily spent his last days.

JENNIE B.⁹, b. at Hollis, N. H., 31 Dec. 1882; m. 1 June 1904, F. ERNEST MARVELL of Hollis, N. H. MR. MARVELL is a prosperous and respected farmer. MRS. JENNIE COLBURN MARVELL at the compilers' request has given some reminiscences of her life lived in the old PHINEAS HARDY house. She, her sister MARY and brother FRED were all born and reared in the old house and on the old homestead. The place was owned for a period of about forty years by their father, GEORGE COLBURN, who remained there until the death of his wife. MRS. MARVELL writes as follows:

"Many people came to the old house in my childhood days. Visitors were always welcome, for mother never refused to let anyone roam from room to room. We could soon tell whether the visitors were Hardys or not. If the men wore straw hats and had light sandy hair we knew they were surely Hardys and I don't think any of them went away without telling us the family connections. My sister and I as small girls were experts with the oars, and nearly always some member of the party would ask us to row them around the lake. If we got ten cents as a reward, we would class them as Hollis Hardys, but if we got a quarter they were classed as Boston Hardys and of course the money paid us included baiting the hooks and rowing the boat for those trolling for pickerel. Up to the time when father purchased the place in 1875 and sold it in 1921, only one new sill was put in, and that on the north side of the house. The doors, latches, floors and ceilings are the same as in the original building. We tried to find out from some of the old settlers if they could remember anyone making a change, but no one could. In fact, the old house was strongly built and has remained practically unchanged for many years. I think I would be safe in saying that sunset hour in those days was the most beautiful I have ever seen. Situated in the valley at the head of the lake with reflections of the trees and sky on the water, the singing of the birds—bob-white and bob-o-link calling, and later the whip-poor-will—the ripple of the water, possibly the sound of young people singing as they rowed about the lake, or the sound of a wagon coming down the road, the mooing of the family cow at the pasture bars waiting for someone to come to drive her to the barn, it was such a quiet and charming place, and best of all, a typical New England home.”

Aaron Hardy, Sr., on the 19th of April 1775 was covering corn when he heard the alarm gun (signal) fired on the Old Parade Grounds (the Hollis Common). He immediately went to the house, exchanged the hoe for his gun and ammunition, hastened to the Common and was one of the 92 Minute Men marching from Hollis to Lexington. They tramped the whole day on that memorable occasion. Soon after reaching Cambridge, Captain Dow met him and said, "What, you here, Mr. Hardy—you are discharged, your family of little ones needs you more at home than we need you at present." He returned home where he was greatly needed, but he was not to care for them long, for he died the same year Dec. 26, 1775 and was buried in the Hollis church yard.

365. STEPHEN⁵ HARDY (Jonas⁴, Thomas³, John², Thomas¹), born at Bradford, Mass., 30 Nov. 1764. He was baptized at Bradford, 18 Mar. 1764-5, according to the vital records of that town. He married at Bradford, Mass., Sept., 1786, MARY ("POLLY") JOSEPH. It is said that her father was a Spaniard, and that at the time of the "Boston Tea Party" he furnished food for the British in Boston Harbor.¹²⁷

Stephen Hardy was a farmer and one of the first settlers of Stoddard, N. H., and vicinity. He died at Hopkinton, N. H., 1846, age 82 years.

Stephen Hardy's father, Jonas Hardy, took into his home the two small sons and the widow of the Major Jonas Hardy, of the British Army, who was in charge of the garrison at Boston during the French and Indian War, and who was massacred by the Indians after the Battle of Fort William Henry in 1757. The two sons of Major Jonas Hardy were Jonas, Jr., and Oliver. Since Jonas Hardy, Jr., Oliver and Stephen were brought up together, and located near each other in New Hampshire, it has been thought by many members of the family that Stephen, Oliver and Jonas, Jr., were brothers. They were distantly related, but not brothers.

upon her ability, the Bangor Daily News in its issue of

"Mary Ann Hardy, sister of Jeremiah, was also a painter of skill. Nine years younger than her brother, she was much in the atmosphere of painting with her brother, and her greatest interest was miniatures which she executed with dexterity and unusual color. Many of her miniatures are owned in this section, and one collection of them was bought by the historical library in New York. Her miniature of Lord Byron is especially fine."

Miss Mary C. Robinson of Bangor, Me., educator and writer of note, knew personally MARY ANN HARDY, and under date of 20 Aug. 1934, wrote the following concerning her:

136. This information furnished by Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm of Brewer, Maine, great-granddaughter of Solomon 382 Hardy.

"With Mr. and Mrs. Hardy lived Miss Mary Ann Hardy, sister of J. P. Hardy, nine years younger, and herself an artist of talent and success. Her chief work was miniature painting; many families treasure the wonderful miniatures she made; the ladies and gentlemen of the nineteenth century in these tiny ivory ovals are represented as persons of character and individuality—but with what brilliant clearness of complexion, what elegance of bearing, what magnificence of clothing! When Miss Mary Ann painted a picture of boys and girls playing, every child was alive; the red-shirted boy waved his cap and the gate on which he was perched seemed to swing as you looked at it. Romance was not lacking in Miss Mary Ann's life; her wedding gown was made; her lover was a splendid youth, but typhoid took him not long before the wedding day."

She d. at Bangor, Me., in 1884.

TO THE WORLD

But especially to the inhabitants of Pelham and its vicinity;

This may certify that Doct'r Manly Hardy, of said Pelham, has been for six months past reading the theory and Practise of physick and surgery with us, the subscribers; and also visiting the sick at all convenient and proper opportunities; it further appears he had been attending to the theory and Practice of the arts with Doct'r Grovner of said Pelham, a distinguished character, for considerable time previous to his being with us. We are confident Nature has been liberal to him even unto excess; and that his acquired abilities are great and good, so far, that we think we can with boldness recommend him to the world (so far as we are judges), to be well qualified to undertake the very important business of practising physick and surgery. We make no doubt if he is employed and he pays that attention to the business its importance requires, which no doubt he will, he will shine with distinguished luster, and will be an Ornament to the Profession, therefore we do recommend him to your attention and employ.

447. AMOS⁶ HARDY (Abel⁵, Benjamin⁴, Benjamin³, Thomas², Thomas¹), born somewhere near Hampden, Me., in 1771; married at Hampden, Me., 26 Sept. 1797, POLLY WHEELER, who was born probably at Durham, N. H., Oct., 1768.¹⁴⁸ Her father, BENJAMIN WHEELER, was a first settler of Hampden, and POLLY was a second child. She died at Hampden, 6 June 1863, "age 94 years and 9 months." He died 13 Sept. 1851. According to the tombstone marking his grave at Hampden, he was 80 years old when he died. He was baptized by the Rev. Paul Coffin of the Buxton, Me., Church of Christ, 23 Aug. 1772.

Soon after his marriage to Polly Wheeler, it is said that he settled on "Hardy Hill", probably named for him, in the town of Hampden, four miles below the city of Bangor on the west bank of the Penobscot River. Within a radius of two-thirds of a mile from this spot, fifteen Hardy houses were built, all of the owners being descendants of Abel Hardy, father of Amos. The original homestead at the top of Hardy Hill was built in 1786, and burned to the ground in November, 1934. Of the original fifteen Hardy houses only nine remain. On the site of the present school building was the old Hardy Hill School, opposite the original homestead. It was built by the Hardys for the education of their children.

Amos E. Hardy, grandson of Amos and Polly (Wheeler) Hardy, one-time registrar of deeds and of Probate in Bangor County, Me., under date of 26 Mar. 1910, wrote the following concerning his grandmother, Polly Wheeler Hardy:

I remember well my grandmother, Polly Wheeler Hardy. She was a tiny, little old woman with the reddest of red heads. I used to light her pipe for her, and when she pulled on the pipe her nose and chin would almost meet. Her husband stood six feet two, and she could walk under his arm. He said, in building a fireplace, that he would make it just right for her to walk into without stooping. She used to declare that her father, Benjamin Wheeler, the settler, was Scotch and that he was as red-headed, which may perhaps show the reason why Benjamin Crosby Wheeler, his grandson, received his name, his hair being very red.

Polly Wheeler used to tell how when her mother first came there the Indians were over-curious. One day when her husband was away from home, the chief came in and demanded food. She said she had none. She did have a small brown bread loaf baking in the oven made of hand-made bricks with a piece of sheet-iron for a door propped up by a stick. The chief pulled down the stick and looked in when she, a very small woman, seized him from behind, rolled him over and threw him out of doors. Not content with this, she picked up the axe from the chopping block and charged into the group of Indians outside, while their chief continued to roll down the bank, and was considerably hurt. The Indians respected her valor and declared her "little squaw, big fight." The husband was extremely angry with them and forbade them ever to come into the house unless his wife told them to. They would come with game and peace offerings but would wait to be invited in.

JAMES GILBERT⁸, b. at Dexter, 21 May 1861. DR. JAMES GILBERT RIGGS was b. at Dexter, N. Y., at the beginning of the Civil War. His parents were thrifty farmers. His father, invalid mother and elder sister early discovered that the son and brother was destined to go far educationally, for he was very diligent and successful at school. "JIMMIE", as he was called as a boy, walked a considerable distance every day, through all kinds of weather, to attend school in the village. When the blizzards came, however, it was a novel experience for this country lad to find outside the school building waiting for him his kind and encouraging father with the sleigh drawn by spirited horses. Away they would go, and soon reach the comfortable home in safety. Those exciting days are now pleasant memories to this distinguished educator.

At sixteen years of age, he was granted a "third grade" certificate to teach school. This permitted him to take charge of a district school at Sherwin's Bay, opposite historic Sacket Harbor. He began his educational career that was to last many years at six dollars a week.

162. This information furnished by Dr. James G. Riggs, formerly Principal of Oswego Normal School, Oswego, N. Y., grandson of Gideon 499 Hardy.

He had thirty-six pupils, all sturdy sons and daughters of farmers, all of whom had Revolutionary War ancestry. Thirty-six pupils in a district school sometimes means thirty-six classes a day as in this case. DOCTOR RIGGS says of this first experience in teaching, that he learned more than the pupils themselves. "It was fun", he says, "of a snowy morning to kindle the fire in the big stove and then to kindle the interest of boys and girls in the lessons of the books."

DOCTOR RIGGS has prepared a modest outline of his life to date, and his autobiography is here reproduced, as follows:

"A portion of a year at the Potsdam Normal School was followed by service in other district schools, and one day the preacher, a graduate of Hamilton College, said: 'Jimmy, would you like to study Latin?' That was more a symbol of learning to me than anything else, but it opened up a way. So along with the district schools came a period of committing Latin forms and two evenings a week reciting the same. Then a benevolent body where I had boarded two years said: 'If you want to go to college I will loan you the money.'

"This was a challenge, a beckoning road to eager feet. The encouragement of Dr. William K. Wickes, principal of the Watertown (N. Y.) High School, where I went for a final preparation, kept the purpose strong, and in 1884 I entered Amherst College with a condition which was removed by the first Thanksgiving, a genuine cause for gratitude. I was graduated in the class of '88 with the Senior Latin Prize and the B.A. degree. Five years later the college granted me the M.A. degree for work done in the British Museum, and in 1913 the State College for Teachers at Albany, N. Y., gave me an honorary degree of Ph.D.

"Union Academy of Belleville, N. Y., had an Amherst alumnus as Principal, and on graduation from the college I was invited there to assist. After a year's service I went to Chittenango, N. Y., as principal for two years, and next to the Watertown High School, where I had prepared for college. At the end of a year's principalship under pleasantest auspices, an offer came to go to Europe as tutor to a young man, which at the time seemed so bright an opportunity that it was accepted, and a new quest was opened to me. Returning from an extended trip through the countries of western and southern Europe, the superintendency of schools at Plattsburg, N. Y., was open to me, and seven delightful years were spent there. In 1900 (Jan. 9), I married Elizabeth Spicer, a teacher, and a new field of the private school, at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., offered an advance which for five years gave me many interesting contacts.

"New Jersey gave another opportunity to serve as Superintendent of Schools at Orange, where I was for five years. The wider experience culminated in an invitation from the Oswego Normal School to be Director of the Training School, and, after two years, to be named its third Principal in succession to Doctor Isaac B. Poucher and Doctor Edward Austin Sheldon, the latter famous as the founder of the school and author of the historic Oswego Methods. My service in the Normal School extended from 1911 to 1933, the latter being the date of retirement.

"My first wife having passed away in 1915 (Feb. 5), I married in 1918 (Dec. 23) E. May Jones, '06 Michigan University, of Brooklyn. During the period covered above six trips have been made to Europe and one trip around the world, the latter on my retirement in 1933.

"Earlier, I had edited two books for high school use, Vicar of Wakefield and Sesame and Lillies. In the State Normal School, four events of note may be recorded as the result of persistent effort: the addition of Clarke Field as a gift to the state, the removal of the statue of Doctor Sheldon from the capitol at Albany to the front of the new normal building at Oswego, the establishment of a department for training teachers of sub-normal children, and an appropriation for an industrial arts building, the cornerstone of which was laid by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt. The school opened its doors and its shops during the World War period to a Students' Army Training Corps."

DOCTOR RIGGS has had many high honors conferred upon him. In addition to having climbed to the top in the educational world, he has gained recognition along many lines. He was a state representative at an international conference on School Hygiene, the famous White House Conference on Child Welfare under the administration of President Hoover, and served as a member of the Board of Visitors of the Rome (N. Y.) State School. At one time he was President of the New York State Historical Association, also President of Oswego County Historical Society. He was President of the Local Historians of Central New York, chairman of the committee to recommend rules governing the names of geographical points in New York, commissioner to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church at Baltimore, Vice-President of the American Association of Teachers Colleges and Normal Schools. He holds numerous affiliations with civic and educational groups. In collaboration with Ralph Faust, he is responsible for a chapter in Volume VI of the History of New York State.

He is a Republican by politics, and a Presbyterian by religion. His college fraternity was Theta Delta Chi. He is a charter member of the educational fraternity

Kappa Phi Kappa. He is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution on his paternal side, which goes back to the Barons of Runnymede. His name was listed in Who's Who in 1910. DOCTOR RIGGS resides at 150 West 4th St., Oswego, N. Y.

The Vacationist, the official organ of the Oswego Normal School, in its issue of Oct., 1933, paid the following tribute to DR. JAMES G. RIGGS:

"Doctor James G. Riggs, the third principal, is still with us, although his retirement took place on August 15, 1933. Let us call him Principal Emeritus.

"Doctor Riggs, we are speaking to you direct in these words:

"You have served the schools for more than fifty years. Thousands have been influenced by your great work as teacher and administrator. You have influenced both youth and maturity to better ways of thinking and of living. You have always pointed out the good life, the life that leads on. You have been the inspiring drive to many young people, making out of raw and untrained youth eminent surgeons, lawyers, ministers, teachers and successful business men. What a record! You have achieved much, very much.

"Fifty years in school service is a long period. You lived through many educational changes. You have influenced those changes and have helped to blaze new trails into the great uncharted educational world. Fifty years ago your school work was influenced by nine fundamental principles of education as enunciated by Pestalozzi and interpreted to the American schools by Sheldon (1869). During your 20 years as principal you have maintained the high ideals set up by the founder.

"Your contribution to this school is manifold. Aside from keeping the work of the school up-to-date in the matter of efficient teacher training, you have added to the school Clarke Field and a magnificent new industrial arts building with modern equipment. Your greatest contribution to this school, however, has been your wise counsel and inspiration to both faculty and students. Spiritual leadership can not be measured, yet it is the thing that is most abiding. We shall miss you as our leader. It is gratifying, though, to know that you are going to have an extended rest period for travel and other work. It is gratifying, too, that we shall be able to see you and Mrs. Riggs often and enjoy your companionship."

Israel Hardy was a soldier in the War of 1812, serving as a member of the First Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteers, in command of Davis.

Times were very hard following the War of 1812, and this young couple, with three small children, decided to join the migration west that took place between 1813 and 1820. With ox cart and limited possessions they made their way through the wilderness and spent many nights out in the open. They followed the course of the Susquehanna River after reaching New York State until they arrived at Barton, N. Y., near Spencer, N. Y., in Tioga County. There they started to clear the land and make a new home for themselves.

From various official records and documents, the following facts concerning Israel Hardy have been discovered:

He kept a tavern at Tipton, Mich., Lenawee County, probably before homesteading a farm. He was given a grant of land:

E. part of S. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ N. E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of Sec. 24.

29 Oct. 1835. After homesteading this land for four years, it was taken from the Government in 1839, 40 Acres. Martin Van Buren was then President. The old deeds and other papers are held by the widow of Chas. Harrison Hardy, who, with her daughter, Nora Blanche Hardy Morningstar, still lives on the original 40 acres. At one time after the death of Israel Hardy, this land was divided into five shares. Ira O. Hardy bought 3 shares of the original 40 acres, and later acquired the other two, which were held out of the family for a short time. On Oct. 29, 1935, it will be 100 years since this land was entered for homesteading.

After his return with his bride he settled in the town of Rutland, Jefferson County, N. Y., and in company with his brother Phineas, purchased the land which was developed into the homestead afterward owned by his son, Charles Carrol Hardy. 535. PHINEAS⁶ HARDY (Thomas⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born in Dublin, Cheshire County, N. H., 23 Jan. 1795; died at Black River, 8 Oct. 1878; married, 24 Mar. 1822, SARAH HOWLAND of Rutland. She was born 1 Apr. 1797 in Providence, Saratoga County, N. Y. Her parents came from Rhode Island. Her grandfather, WILLIAM HOWLAND, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, later moved to Rutland, Jefferson County, N. Y., and applied for a pension (age 86). He was born in Scituate, Providence, R. I., in 1747; married in Gloucester, R. I., 1769, MARY RICHMOND.

In 1814, when he was nineteen years old, he joined his brother Robert in Jefferson County, N. Y., where he spent the remainder of his life. The next year, with his brother, he walked back to his former home in Dublin. On this trip Robert was married to Abigail Stone, and soon after they returned they purchased a farm of 112 acres in the town of Rutland, which he cleared and improved while Robert worked at a trade as a carpenter and builder.

After his marriage, Phineas engaged for a year in the milling business on Black River about a mile below the village of the same name. After disposing of the mill, he purchased a farm in the town of Rutland about three miles from the village of Black River, where he lived for nine years. He then bought a tract of 200 acres in the town of Lorraine, where he lived for a year. He next bought from the County the Poor House Farm at Sanfords Corners (now Calcium) in the town of LeRoy, where he lived with his family 32 years. At the end of this time he retired and moved to the village of Black River, where he died.

Phineas Hardy was much interested in politics, and in early life was a Whig, but left that party and was active in the organization of the Republican Party in Jefferson County, and was a devoted member of that party as long as he lived. At one time when he was presiding at a county convention of his party a portion of the members bolted and left the room. His sympathy was with those who went out, but he felt that his responsibility was with the regular organization, which had elected him, and he refused to leave the platform. His friends gave him much credit for his stand. The records show that he was honored by the election and appointment to many offices in his town and county.

He sold his farm in Lorraine to a Mr. Robinson, who came from Herkimer County, and commenced to make cheese. In 1835 Mr. and Mrs. Hardy visited Mr. Robinson and spent two days learning to manufacture cheese. On their return to their farm at Sanfords Corners they began making the milk from their cows into cheese. This continued for many years, and thus they were among the very first to manufacture cheese in Northern New York, which developed into the greatest cheese making section of the country. For many years Watertown was the largest inland cheese market in the United States.

He was progressive in his ideas and was deeply interested in the development of the county. He was active in the management of the Jefferson County Agricultural Society, and won many prizes at the annual fairs. He was a stockholder in the Rome and Watertown R. R., which was the first railroad to come into the county, and also a stockholder and director in a Watertown bank.

He was a Presbyterian, and for many years a member of the Stone Street Church in Watertown, N. Y. He helped to build the Jefferson County Institute in Watertown, which for many years was one of the principal educational institutions in Northern New York, and was eventually merged into the Watertown High School. All his children attended this school. Several of his grand and great-grandchildren graduated from the Watertown High School.

540. NOAH⁶ HARDY, JR. (*Deacon Noah*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born 16 Sept. 1789, at Packersfield (now Nelson), N. H. He married, first, 9 June 1812, JERUSHA KIMBALL. Her father, DAVID KIMBALL, was in the Revolutionary War with DEACON NOAH HARDY at West Point at the time of the capture, and witnessed the execution of Major John André. Her grandfather, SIMMONS, was killed at the Battle of Bunker Hill. She died 11 Jan. 1854, at the age of 64. He married, second, 28 Oct. 1856, DORATHA HUBBARD of Peterboro, N. H. She died 22 Aug. 1881. CAPTAIN HARDY died 28 Nov. 1862 at the age of 73. All of his children were of the first marriage and all but two lived to old age.

Captain Hardy spent his whole life in his native town, taking up his residence after marriage on the old Hardy homestead, and engaged in farming until Aug. 1824, when he suffered the loss of one limb below the knee by a falling tree which crushed his foot and leg. When his leg was amputated, anaesthetics were unknown, and it was the custom to strap the patient to a table or bench. Hardy refused to have this done, declaring he could stand the pain. Reluctantly the surgeon yielded, and the operation was successfully performed without a groan save when the bone was sawed. With like courage and without complaint, he learned the shoe and harness making trade, at which he became expert. He made shoes and boots, from the fancy dancing pump to the farmer's cowhide boots. It was his custom to promise the delivery of an order about a day later than he expected to finish the work, "that he might always keep his word." A lover of the fields, he continued to do some farming, and was exceedingly proud of his garden, which was always one of the earliest and best in town. He was a man of exceptional executive ability, was the Captain, whence came his title, of the local Militia, and for many years was the moderator of the town meeting.

He was large of stature and of great physical power and endurance. He was very fond of children, a great reader, very humorous, fine debater, generous, hospitable and in all his dealing strictly honest and upright.

preparatory department of Bethel College, Russellville, Ky. He d. 3 Oct. 1857. He was a poet of distinction, a volume of his poems being published after his death. The depth and fervor of their affection was noteworthy. Some of the best of his poems were addressed to her, and she was worthy of his love. They planned to be married during the summer vacation of 1857, but on Feb. 22 of that year Dolly Bowen died at the age of twenty-seven. He was almost broken hearted. During the summer at the time they had planned to be married he erected a chaste and beautiful monument of Italian marble. Apr. 1869, "age 73 years"; married at Hollis, 30 Oct. 1823, ELIZA JOHNSON, daughter of EDWARD JOHNSON of Pine Hill, Hollis, N. H. She was born at Hollis, N. H., 19 Apr. 1804, and died 12 Apr. 1880.

Joel Hardy was twelve years of age when his mother died, and he started out to earn his own living. From that time on he was dependent upon his own exertions. At sixteen, and afterward for a time he lived at his Uncle Phineas' and worked at coopering. His means of acquiring an education was limited. He only got about six weeks in the winter at the district school. He was twenty-six years old when he married Elizabeth Johnson, and she was about eighteen. Soon after, he purchased the farm which was owned by Colburn Daniel, where three children were born. About the year 1828, he purchased the old homestead, a very pleasant place, shaded by ancient elms, near the center of the town, where he lived until his death, except in 1837, when he rented it for a time, taking the large farm of Daniel Lawrence at the south part of the town, going "halves." He returned again in 1839 and commenced dealing in cattle in addition to carrying on the farm. This place was sold soon after his widow's death, 1880. His principal occupations were farming, buying and selling sheep and cattle which he purchased from the farmers in Southern New Hampshire and drove over the road to the market at Brighton, near Boston, Mass. Every three weeks between the years of 1842 and 1855, he drove as many as one hundred and thirty cattle, as well as sheep. The following anecdote is told of him driving his cattle: Grandfather Joel used to get very tired, and in stopping along the roadside in this condition was often heard (by one of his sons who generally accompanied him) to sing the tune of "Old Hundred" in his sleep. Once he sold a pair of oxen to a Hollis farmer, and after waiting several months for his pay he strode into the man's barn, yoked up the oxen, and drove them home again.

He was a great reader and a well-posted man, particularly in politics. He was known as an upright man and honorable dealer. He was too much engaged in his business, however, to accept any office until late in life, when he held positions of trust and emolument in the town. He was for many years Justice of the Peace and held court, and was frequently called "Squire Hardy", though more often "Captain Joel", as he was Captain of the Hollis Artillery Company. In returning from the Amherst muster about 1840, among the Hollis people was Capt. Wm. Hale, who tried to beat the rest in getting home. Capt. Joel's "dander was up", and he told his driver to run the old mare like "dashnation". He got there first.

Both he and his wife (an exemplary woman) were members of the Hollis Congregational Church. He was a tall, strong man (best wrestler in the state), with a fine physique. On one occasion he started on foot from his tavern in North Cambridge at six A. M. and walked to Hollis, 40 miles, and arrived at his home as the clock struck nine in the evening.

He was first a Whig, and afterwards head of the "Know Nothing Movement", of which he was leader in Hollis, as the first meeting was held at his home. He was made president of the society then formed.

During the Civil War he was a strong supporter of Abraham Lincoln, and rejoiced to see slavery abolished. After the war he objected to the course of the Republican Party and left it, as he felt it had become extremely corrupt, and a change of administration was necessary for the interests of both the North and the South. He took an active part in the affairs of the church and town.

Few men met and overcame as many and great obstacles as he, and with little or no outside help. He lived to see his family established in life, and died leaving a few thousand dollars and an untarnished name—"an upright man in the sight of God and his fellows."

Moses Hardy was born on the old Wheat homestead in Hollis, and married Rebecca Farley, from one of the old colonial families. After marriage they lived at his home for a while, then on the Capt. Blood place, and later purchased what is now known as the "Maple Hill Farm", where they made their permanent residence. For three years the family shared the house with Samuel Smith, who carried on the farm "at halves" while Moses Hardy engaged in coopering. He was sufficiently successful in this business so that he paid off a $1,500 mortgage on the place, and the Smiths moved to the next house beyond. Thereby hangs a tale, for the section beyond was known as "Gomorrhah" and the people were accustomed to say that "the Sabbath went no farther than to Capt. Smith's house", and when he moved "that the Sabbath had moved one house further on." As Moses prospered he bought much adjoining real estate, built new buildings and greatly improved the old, and was recognized as a very progressive and prosperous farmer. He was a very vigorous and often vociferous champion of the Democratic Party. He was one of the first in that section to buy a four-wheeled covered carriage. He was an honest, industrious, God-fearing man, prominent in town affairs and highly respected.

Children :

- 1102 i. REBECCA FARLEY⁷, b. 12 Aug. 1826 at Hollis, N. H.; d. 3 Sept. 1914; m. 14 May 1860, CHARLES RICHARDSON of Marlborough, N. H. He was a farmer, b. 4 Dec. 1822; d. 29 Nov. 1902. REBECCA was a very capable manager, and a devoted member of the church. After their marriage they lived for a number of years on his home farm in Marlborough. Later they purchased the "Shedd Farm" in Hollis, N. H. There they prospered and were recognized as substantial, worthy and respected citizens of the town. Having no children of their own they brought up two children, ALBERT and CARRIE HARDY of the THOMAS and ANNIE (WILLARD) HARDY family. Both of the children, well educated and respected, married and each had a son. These sons were very dear to REBECCA in her old age. After the death of her husband, in 1902, she remained on the farm under the care of her farm manager and a young cousin who had lived with her from childhood.

H., until the death of MOSES HARDY in 1869, when they moved to Hollis to care for the widowed mother of his wife on the "Hardy Farm." He proved to be an excellent farmer, making many improvements in the property, setting out maples on the roadway, and renaming the place Maple Hill Farm. He was one of the pioneers in setting out peach orchards, and in raising strawberries for the market. He read every morning from the Bible and asked God's blessing before every meal but never at such length as to become tiresome to his children.

MARY ANN HARDY was educated in the schools of Hollis and engaged in teaching for some time before her marriage. She was very fond of nature and stimulated and fostered her children's interests in flowers, birds and animals. It was a family custom for parents and children to roam the fields of the farm on Sunday afternoons in quest of the interesting and unusual, as an oven bird's nest, a rare orchid or a nest of baby rabbits covered with the mother's fur. She taught them to watch for the flowers as they appeared, and to find the botanical name. Her vigorous mentality was softened and sweetened by unusual devotion to her home and family and to the various church and community activities for the highest welfare of the people. Children:

207. There is some doubt about this record.

208. According to Poor, in his record of the Merrimack Valley, Lucy Hardy, daughter of Sewall Hardy, died in 1852, "age 18 years." Also, according to Poor, a Caroline E. Hardy daughter of Sewall Hardy, married Calvin Webber.

Leonard W. Hardy, who was for many years Bishop of the 12th Ward, Salt Lake City and counsel to presiding Bishop Edward Hunter and also his successor Bishop Preston, was one of the most active figures in the Church; during the first fifty years of its history. He was Captain of fifty crossing the plains from Massachusetts to Utah in 1850 and took an active part in building the City. He served also as Captain of police for some time. Few men had a wider reputation for benevolence of character. He raised a large family and provided a home for several orphan children besides, and was a kind and loving husband and father.

230. It is said there were three daughters, who married Major Nathan Low, Joshua Haskell and Henry Harris, respectively. See History of Deer Isle, Maine, by George Hosmer.

231. The record on his tombstone at Gainesville, N. Y., states incorrectly that Samuel Hardy was born at Hardwick, Mass.

232. According to the census of 1790, Stephen Parker had in his family, besides himself and wife, four sons and two daughters. The vital records of Western (now Warren, Mass.), however, show only one daughter, Pheny, born 14 Feb. 1774. It is possible that Polly was daughter by a second wife, Anna Button, a belief held by Mrs. Cora Belle (Hardy) Calvert of Lincoln, Neb., granddaughter of Samuel Hardy.

Revolutionary War. She died 14 Dec. 1863 at Gainesville, N. Y.

Samuel Hardy was a soldier in the War of 1812. He took part in the battles of Lundys Lane, Chippewa and Black Rock. When he was young his parents moved to Hardwick, Mass., which was only a short distance from his future wife's home. It is said that soon after his marriage he went first to Vermont, but apparently he did not stay there long, for the next year he had removed to Wyoming County, N. Y., near Gainesville, where he engaged in farming and became one of the leading citizens of the community.

769. JOHN WORCESTER⁶ HARDY (Samuel⁵, Francis⁴, Jacob³, Jacob², Thomas¹), born at Sutton, Mass., about 1782; died at Springfield, Mass., about 1852; buried by members of the Masonic Lodge, of which he was a member; married at Tewksbury, Mass., 25 Dec. 1811, MARY CLARK. They appear to have lived a large part of their married lives at Tewksbury, Mass., and it is generally believed that they moved first to Wilbraham, Mass., and later to Springfield, Mass., where he was Chaplain of the House of Correction. His wife died first.

John Worcester Hardy was a soldier in the War of 1812. Illness and financial losses made his last few years anything but pleasant. It is said that he lost a valuable piece of property on account of having to make good on the endorsement of a neighbor's promissory note. His friends and neighbors referred to him as "Uncle Hardy." An incurable affliction of the body caused him continual pain and suffering until death relieved him.

234. According to a letter written to Harvey Wesley 1431 Hardy, son of Samuel 768 Hardy, under date of 10 Dec. 1852, from Springfield, Mass., by Mr. J. B. Bridge, John Worcester Hardy, had only two children, both daughters. Evidently Mr. Bridge, who admitted in the letter that he knew very little about John Worcester Hardy, was in error. John Worcester 1434 Hardy, son of John Worcester 769 Hardy, married and settled at Harbor Creek, Erie County, Pa. The fact that the son was far away at the Seth Hardy was born in the old farm house, just off King Street, or King's Road, Bradford, now Groveland, Mass. This old farm house, facing away from the high road and toward the Merrimac River, was built by his direct ancestor in the Thomas Hardy line, in 1676, a portion of the land granted to Thomas Hardy and his brother about 1630; and is still in good condition and now occupied by the family of Mr. Lawrence Hardy, a nephew of Seth.

When Seth was old enough to decide what he wished to do, he wished above all things to become, first, a teacher, and later a fully trained minister of the Gospel, but practical things must first be taken in hand and, asked which trade he would prefer, he chose cabinet-making. His father needed in his all 'round plan a boot and shoemaker to make and keep in repair all the footwear for the large family, so he decided Seth must learn both trades, but first that of shoemaking. Seth was immediately apprenticed to a local cobbler. Just to show how much his mind preferred working with wood, even while learning to cobble, Seth made at times during that first apprenticeship, a fair sized clock complete, with wooden wheels, which came to Michigan many years later and was still a reliable timekeeper when he died in 1884.

The time required to learn the two distinct trades while getting what education he could at the nearby small academy during winter months, accounts for his late start in getting to what he had determined upon as his life work. Also he must lay by sufficient funds by work at his two trades, and by teaching school during winter terms to pay for his college education.

Therefore, Seth was nearly 28 years of age when, on 22 Aug. 1832, he completed the full course at Amherst College and obtained his diploma, with an excellent record as a well-grounded and thorough student. It is of interest that Henry Ward Beecher, O. S. Fowler and other men later prominent were in Amherst College at the same time.

As soon after Amherst as he could, he again accumulated the needed small funds and entered Andover Theological Seminary, and graduated on 2 Sept. 1835, again with honor and a record of deep piety and learning. Only then, nearing his 31st birthday, could he at last begin the work to which he had consecrated his life.

The Yankee congregations must then have been much more cautious than ours of today, for he must first serve as Home Missionary for Kennebeck County, Me., from Sept., 1835, until he was "ordained an orthodox Congregational Minister" at Vassalboro, Me., 12 Jan. 1837. He naturally remained as the regular Congregational pastor at Vassalboro until June, 1839. He had heard often of the great need of the West for religious teachers, so in June of 1839 he made his decision. He visited his people at home, and his friends and professors at Amherst, and especially at Andover, where he worked out his plans. Fortunately for his descendants, small portions of his diary covering his trip out to Michigan and the first months of his work there have been preserved, so that something of his journey and his experiences are known.

Up to the time of his journey "out-west", he had probably never been as far west as Central Massachusetts, and only up into the southern parts of Maine and New Hampshire to teach and later to preach.

The brief notes of his diary tell of his leaving Andover on 3 July 1839 "for Boston and on my way to the West." In Boston, 4 July, he "heard part of an oration by a Mr. Austin—not very interesting. At 4 p. m., the 4th, I took the boat for N. Y., via Stonington—a pleasant passage." Three days were spent in New York City, contacting with the Missionary Board, and on business matters, and the diary records on the second day: "Oh, the miseries of a countryman shut up in a city." The 7th being Sunday, he "attended service at the Mariners' Church, A. M., and preached to the sailors in the same church in the P. M." Next day the trip to Albany on the steamer Erie was a revelation to him, and he transferred that evening to sleep on the canal boat Batavia. With an early start next day he recorded it as "very tedious, locking up the canal to Schenectady." Having, of course, heard of the "great Saratoga Springs", he debarked at Schenectady and obtained a ride by carriage to Saratoga, "a great resort for the fashionable as well as for invalids", and after seeing the Springs, sampling the waters and observing the activities of the people, wrote in the diary, "From what I saw fully convinced me that resorting to the Springs tends more to the commission of sin than to the curing of disease—made a short stay." He must have been a strong walker, for he reported, "Walked all the way back to the canal at Schenectady." On his trip on the next canal boat, Tempest, he reported "a large number of Norwegian immigrants on their way west." On 12 July he wrote, "For some distance above the Little Falls, passed what is termed the German Flats, on the banks of the Mohawk, a most fertile tract of land I ever saw."

Of course, the cast of his mind was well set. He was of the same duty-controlled stock as were his parents, and had been trained in a Puritan type college, Amherst, and a still more Puritan type Theological Seminary, Andover. He had been tried out in New England, and was seriously and earnestly "on his Master's business", and the diary records how he "reproved a profane swearer, who manifested stubbornness, but was evidently troubled." Also—"Passed Rome, a muddy and swearing and drinking place—evening reached Syracuse and stopped for the Sabbath." Sunday, 4 July, "introduced to the Presbyterian clergyman, Mr. Adams, and attended church with him—afternoon preached for him—also preached for him in the evening. Spent the night with an elder and evidently a devotedly pious man." 15 July—"About to resume my journey—refused to go in the morning boat because the company was not agreeable—visited the salt works in Syracuse and Salina—almost astonished at their magnitude—was informed that about 3 million bushels of salt was inspected as the product of them during the past season." Next day he went forward on the canal boat Franklin, and recorded that "a drunken employee fell over-board, was hauled aboard, allowed to sleep it off and discharged the following morning for his misbehavior", but "an intelligent Irishman on the boat assured me that the drunken-ness was not $\frac{1}{15}$ th of what it had been a few years earlier—and from what I saw and from what I could learn from others, I concluded that his statement must have been essentially correct, as the sad case of yesterday is the only case of beastly intoxication I have witnessed on the Canal thus far.” At Rochester he “took an excursion to see the falls of the Genesee, famous for the leap of Sam Patch in 1829.” 19 July, “Interview with two residents of Ohio, one the keeper of a rum tavern, the other a merchant, both evidently enemies of religion—they spoke severely against Ministers and Christians, and I replied to their remarks—found them exceedingly ignorant and deficient in moral principle—they were soon quieted by my remarks.” By the evening of 19 July, he “reached Lockport—a large and interesting place—the canal an expensive and magnificent work—at present in process of widening and a large number of men employed—before its completion a vast amount of labor must necessarily be expended. While at Lockport saw the Hon. Henry Clay, who happened to be passing through the region. He looks like an intemperate man.”

On 20 July Seth “reached Buffalo, a large business city. After writing home, I went on foot to Niagra—some 22 miles—reached and surveyed the waterfall—a sublime and magnificent spectacle. Was introduced to Rev. N. Halsey, the Presbyterian clergyman—spent the night with him at the house of Mr. A. N. Porter. On July 21st preached morning and afternoon at the Presbyterian Church—at Niagra the Sabbath very much desecrated—spent the night, and next day after surveying the curiosities about the falls from the American side and from the island, passed over to get a view of things from the Canadian shore—that on the whole the best—spent the night at a small inn a little below Black Rock.” 23 July, “Crossed the ferry at Black Rock, carriage to Buffalo, and embarked on board the steamer Robert Fulton for Detroit. In the course of the day touched at Dunkirk, Portland, Erie and Ashtabula, day fair and the country passed by fertile. Reached Cleveland morning of the 24th, spent 2 hours in viewing the place—the town large, pleasantly located and destined to become a place of considerable importance. At present the stagnation of business greatly hinders its growth. Two churches suspended while in progress of building in consequence of the want of funds. During the afternoon heavy rain. Made a short stop Huron—a place of some note, but its location unhealthy—the adjoining country fertile. Reached Sandusky in the evening, a place of considerable note and business and destined to become still more so.”

25 July, A. M., “Arrived in Detroit and by request stopped with Mr. D. French, a very worthy Christian man, with whom I became acquainted on the boat—took a walk about the city—weather excessively warm—the thermometer in the shade rose to betwixt 80 and 90.” The weather continued excessively warm, and on the early morning of 27th, “Had an uncomfortable night—rose early—walked to the river and bathed—somewhat refreshed by bathing, but still rather feeble—vomited and found myself benefited thereby.” 28th Sabbath, “Preached A. M. in the Methodist Church, in the evening in the Presbyterian Church—afternoon heard a sermon from Rev. Mr. Duffield. At the close of the afternoon service went direct from church to attend the funeral of an aged pious female.”

On 31 July, “Greeted with repeated expressions of kindness, I took leave of Mr. French and family and started by carriage for Ypsilanti—proceeded to Jackson. Aug. 1st, 4 A. M., resumed my journey to Marshall.” There he stayed for a few days with the Rev. J. P. Cleveland, who maintained a school, and for the months to 19 Sept. he worked with such Presbyterian and Congregational pastors as were located in the two southern tiers of counties, as far west in Michigan as Kalamazoo, also conducting services where there were no resident preachers. By 19 Sept. he was located in Romeo, a village entirely settled by New England people, as the regular Congregational pastor, serving until July, 1840. His pastorates and Home Missionary work took him to “Pinckney and vicinity”, 1840-1843; Presbyterian Church, Owosso, 1843-1847; Presbyterian, Byron and Congregational, Shiawassee, 1847-1850; Presbyterian Church, Comstock, 1850-1851; Congregational Church, Vermontville, 1851-1854; Presbyterian Church, Springport, 1854-1856; and settled down in 1856 in Ypsilanti, where he could educate his children, but for many years was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Stony Creek near by; from 1856 till the time of his death in 1884, he was continuously working for the American Bible Society, in addition to his constant missionary and church work. Being of New England, he was a strong Abolitionist, and the old barn back of his home in Ypsilanti sheltered many a negro who was on his way, via Detroit, to Canada, by the so-called "underground railway." Quite naturally the colored people, on returning out of Canada, after the Civil War, settled in considerable numbers in the cities and villages where they had been befriended on their way north. Thus Ypsilanti, like some other Michigan cities, received many of these colored people, and by 1866 there arose the problem of their guidance and their need for church and school. Ypsilanti, to meet this problem, called a general meeting of the churches. From probably four or possibly more of the Protestant churches men volunteered, and there were at least four from four denominations by 1867. The colored people had settled on the less valuable land at the south end of the town, and there with the help obtained a church; later, of course, that New England settled village built a school near the church. These volunteers had undertaken to teach and advise with their colored population, which meant giving up each Sunday afternoon to that work. A Mr. Thompson, known as "Happy Thompson" from his joyous "Amens" when his own Methodist Minister made any specially telling point in his sermon, still continued with Seth Hardy, who had volunteered in 1867, to represent the Presbyterian Church, but later Mr. Thompson, like those of the other denominations, gave up that work, and "Father Hardy", as they affectionately called him, alone stood firm. From early 1867 till within a week of his death in April, 1884, in winter or summer, storm or shine, he had never failed these colored people, every Sunday afternoon making the long walk of a mile and a half, "because they need me and they expect me and must have someone to count upon and to continue to teach and advise with them." This, of course, in addition to his own regular work all the time.

Old residents of Ypsilanti still remember that these same colored people, to the number of over 100, old and young, marched on foot after carriages in his funeral procession, all the long way out to the cemetery to pay their last tribute to their friend, "who had been faithful in all things to the end."

Quoting from his obituary, written and printed by the owners of the Ypsilanti Commercial, in its issue just after his death, 24 Apr. 1884:

Father Hardy was in no department of life an idler. He did not deem it disgraceful to do any honest work, though he preferred to toil in the vineyard of Christ. He faithfully distributed Bibles in this city for the American Bible Society, for a number of years, and this was his employment the last day's work he did. For seventeen years, he was continuously a teacher in A. M. E. Sunday School. On the occasion of the memorial service for President Garfield, the gem of the exercises was the prayer of Father Hardy, characterized by such beautiful simplicity of language and thought, by heart pathos and brevity. Judge Joslin said he had seldom in his life been more impressed. We add, Father Hardy was possessed of common sense in a remarkable degree, gospel common sense; he always served faithfully, and to the limit of his strength, to the end.

ALEXANDER BROWNELL CULLEN HARDY attended the Ypsilanti Public Schools until his father d. in April 1884, when he left school to work in the Ypsilanti Post Office. In September, 1887, his mother induced him to return to high school, from which he graduated, 22 June 1888. His mother d. 15 June 1888, and he had no heart for the graduation, but at the insistence of teachers, backed by Board members, he delivered his oration on the subject "Get Work", and got very busy the next morning to secure a job.

Early in the lad's life his father had expressed his hope that his son would become a minister of the gospel, and began to teach him Greek and Latin. The boy's dream was, to some day become a lawyer, and his mother's dearest wish was to help him obtain a college course at any cost.

Next morning after graduation, in seeking "work", one of the best merchants of the city induced him to see that he simply must go to college, working his way as far as possible, and borrowing from that merchant each month just what more might be needed; so after a full summer of work, late September found him at the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, only ten miles away. He entered in the class of 1892 for the literary course, seeking the degree of A.B. He soon discovered that the particularly nice home in which he was able to locate and secure work had more lawn to mow and rake, more walks to sweep each morning, and more wood to cut and bring in, and more coal to carry up, and more errands to run than almost any other in the college town.

In the college year 1888-1889, he gained much above a year's credits, and good marks, but there was a younger sister to think of and the total of the small monthly notes loomed up like a mountain, so in June, 1889, he went to President James B. Angel, and told him the story, and asked the latter to obtain a school teaching job for him.

From 10 Sept. 1889 to 1 Jan. 1892 he was teaching principal of the Groose Ile, Mich., Schools.

By January, 1892, an uncle had filled him up with a tale of the fortunes being made at Flint in the "Buggy Business" or cart and carriage making, and the assurance that the little factory in Davison, Mich., only eleven miles east of Flint, could profit and grow likewise. So the college notes and interest having been paid, next came Davison Road Cart Company, of which he was accountant and office man, but in reality he had to do whatever anyone else forgot or neglected or did not care to do. This company was re-organized into the Wolverine Carriage Co., and a small line of vehicles were made. Four years in Davison, the last three as secretary and manager of the company, covering from 2 Jan. 1892 to 6 Jan. 1896, gave him training in every department of that business, until on New Years Day, 1896, Mr. W. C. Durant called the young man to Flint, and hired him to organize and manage what later became the Diamond Buggy Co. of Flint, Mich. He continued in this position, until the end of 1900, but in early 1898 he was also made Vice-President of Durant-Dort Carriage Co. and directed its purchases and cost accounting, and had to make all general purchases for Webster Vehicle Co., which was also controlled by the Durant-Dort interests. During 1899 and 1900, he was President of the Durant-Dort Carriage Co., and filled the same offices for Diamond Buggy Co., and in addition was Vice-President of the Imperial Wheel Co., a Durant-Dort subsidiary at Jackson, Mich. In addition he had to spend one day each week in Jackson, Mich., where the same interests had invested large funds to back an independent maker of springs and axles, to offset the small, so-called Spring and Axle Trusts of 1889 and 1890. What he remembers as the most worrying occurrences of those two years were the different groupings and combinations of steel and iron making concerns, which eventually led into the U. S. Steel Corp.

By early 1900, his nerves were tired, and a vacation was necessary, but four months in Europe did not prove to fully rebuild energy for the pressing business.

He then resigned all his Flint positions, and with his wife returned to Europe, entering via Spain, and next North Africa, then Italy. Together, they put in eleven months of leisurely moving back and forth northward, to return via England in November, 1901. Upon his return he had informed his associates that the automobile had surely come to stay, and would of necessity cut heavily into the horse-drawn vehicle trade, but the vehicle factories were still being enlarged and their output readily sold.

In the winter of 1901-1902, Flint Automobile Co. was organized by MR. HARDY and a very few associates, he putting in most of the small capital. During the life of that company he was its President and General Manager, 1902 and 1903. So he built and marketed the first automobiles ever made in Flint. By the time fifty-two cars had been sold, the company, like so many others, was attacked in the United States courts by the Selden Patents Association, under the so-called Selden patent, which was later determined not to be a real patent. However, his capital would be exhausted by extended litigation, so Flint Automobile Co. was disbanded, and MR. HARDY, believing that the horse-drawn vehicle might have ten years further business in the West, became Secretary and General Manager of Waterloo Carriage Co., Waterloo, Iowa, from early 1904 until June, 1909. But the horse-drawn vehicle business was being pushed out everywhere by the automobile, and he was called back from Iowa by Mr. W. C. Durant in July, 1909, to become Secretary and General Manager of the Welch Co. of Detroit, a General Motors Division, where he remained during the balance of 1909 and most of 1910.

When the Banker management took charge of General Motors Corp. in the fall of 1910, he was asked to make a confidential report on the corporation's big Ranier Motor Co., with its large plant at Saginaw, Mich. This frank and critical report stirred up Mr. Strauss of J. and W. Seligman, Vice-Chairman of the Board, to state when the writer was made to attend a meeting of the full board, that whoever so strongly condemned management and conditions of one of its fine plants should take over that plant and put it in order. So the order was that HARDY must take Welch Company of Detroit, and the main Welch Co. of Pontiac, and move them both, bag and baggage, two factories full of expensive machinery, tools, and very large inventories, to Saginaw and combine the three outfits into one line to be known as the Marquette Cars, and to reorganize the three companies into the Marquette Motor Co., of Saginaw, Mich., which was a big undertaking!

MR. HARDY was willing to undertake this heavy task upon the promise given him by the banker Board of General Motors Corp. that with the difficult operation completed, he should be allowed to have designed and brought out at the Marquette plant a new line of low priced and popular cars. That large and well located plant with deep water harbor frontage, excellent railroad facilities, and plenty of land for expansion lent itself to quantity production, and it should be remembered that Chevrolet, at that time, was simply an independent and high priced experiment at Detroit, and had no plans or even thoughts of a popular small car in large quantity. Ford had not yet gone into his enormous production. It was that promising bait which made the terrible reorganization job worth while. But when, by December, 1911, the Banker management drew back its promise for the future of Marquette Motor Co., HARDY immediately accepted the position of Vice-President and General Manager of the Little Motor Car Company at Flint, and took charge there on 2 Jan. 1912. By the time that company was put on a profitable basis, in the middle of 1913, Chevrolet Motor Co. was brought from Detroit and combined with Little under the name Chevrolet Motor Co., and he became its Vice-President and General Manager. When Chevrolet operations were to be extended, and Chevrolet Motor Co. of Delaware was chartered to direct all Chevrolet operations, he moved to New York in the winter of 1915-1916, and became Vice-President of the big Chevrolet Co., but still continued to direct the operations of the Flint plant. For nearly three years his time in New York was given to helping develop and direct operations of the Chevrolet plants, in Flint, St. Louis, Mo., Fort Worth, Texas, Oakland, Calif., Oshawa, Canada, Tarrytown and New York City.

When in 1918 Chevrolet Motor Co. had been accepted as one of the important divisions of General Motors Corp., MR. HARDY became the first assistant to the President of General Motors Corp., giving special attention to the problems of Chevrolet.

When in the fall of 1920 the DuPont interests took over the control of General Motors, MR. HARDY was transferred to Detroit, to organize and establish in co-operation with the management of the plants and establish a general purchasing department, to gain for the corporation the benefits of standardization and the real benefits which could be obtained from quantity purchases.

However, on 11 May 1921 he was requested to take immediate charge of the Olds Motor Works, one of the oldest and best divisions of the General Motors Corp. at Lansing, Mich., and he became its President and General Manager, and at the same time a Vice-President of General Motors

Corp. and a member of its Board of Directors. These positions he held until July 1925, when continued ill health from his long and arduous career in manufacturing, made it imperative that he retire and rest. So on 1 Jul. 1925, he resigned all corporation connections, and gave his time to travel, and to following up his banking and other outside connections.

His family moved from Lansing, Mich., 1 Sept. 1932, to make their permanent residence in MRS. HARDY'S old home in Flint, Mich. By the time he and his family were well settled into MRS. HARDY'S old home in Flint, he was drafted often to help in civic and public and semi-public work.

From Sept. 1933 to 7 May 1934, he, as Permanent Chairman of the Flint N. R. A. Compliance Board, carried most of the work of the board in such a manner as to gain desired results and adjust inequalities without upsetting the complicated life of that industrial city.

As a new member of the Vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, he was, in February, drafted into the presidency of a large Foundation which maintains under a trust, a Memorial Home for orphaned and neglected children of Flint and Genesee County.

When a new National bank had to be set up at Flint, Mich., in January, to be the mechanism to give depositors in two large closed banks access to a portion of their impounded funds, he was made vice-president.

In 1933 and 1934 he was drafted to serve as General Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Drive, to first solicit sufficient funds, and to then go ahead with the program of reinvigoration Flint's Chamber of Commerce to equip it to provide service to all citizens, as well as more and better service to Flint's industries, and to its business and Professional people.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, which was helped in its original building by Major Horatio and Mrs. Belcher, and by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Bates, grandparents and parents of MRS. HARDY, elected MR. HARDY to its Vestry for a three-year term, in January, 1934, and it was in St. Paul's Church that he was married, 14 Sept. 1899, to EUSEBIA FLORENCE BATES.

Though, like so many others, he resigned from most of his clubs during the depression, MR. HARDY is a life member of the Congressional Country Club, Washington, D. C. He is a member of Flint's Masonic Bodies, including Genesee Valley Commandery, Knights Templar; of the Elks; and was on May 23rd, 1934, elected to membership in the Rotary Club in Flint, with classification, Honorary Past Services, though his active earlier membership had been elsewhere.

It is with a great deal of pride that the Hardy Family of America can point to Mr. A. B. C. HARDY as one of its most outstanding representatives.

238. See History of Sutton, by Mrs. Augusta H. Worthen, 1890.

N. H.: died in February, 1887, at Bangor, Me.; married CATHERINE SEARS WHEELER of Hampden, Me.

Jeremiah Pearson Hardy was one of the foremost artists and portrait painters of America of his day. He was a contemporary and personal friend of the distinguished Gilbert Charles Stuart, famous for his paintings of such national leaders as George Washington, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. Jeremiah Pearson Hardy painted a portrait of his own father, Solomon Hardy, and this is the proud possession of his descendants.

The Bangor Daily News, in its issue of Friday, 20 Jul. 1934, printed an article entitled "Bangor Has Contributed Much to World of Art", and had the following to say concerning Jeremiah Pearson Hardy:

Probably no one can estimate the number of Bangor people who have painted and sketched. The scenic panorama of Maine's wooded hills, its shining lakes and rock-bound coast lent itself readily to the artistic eye and the painter's brush, and it is safe to say that Bangor has enjoyed more than its share of artists who have won recognition throughout the country.

Dean of all these painters who lived in the city, was Jeremiah Pearson Hardy, whose paintings today are found throughout the length and breadth of the nation, 134 years after the birth of this illustrious man in Pelham, N. H. Shortly after his birth, Jeremiah Hardy's parents removed to Hampden on the banks of the Penobscot and nearly all his boyhood was spent there. Possessing an active mind, energetic and industrious, at an early age he showed marked ability as a mechanic of skill. At the age of 14 years he discovered a set of engraver's tools at the house of a friend and mastered them in short time. He was accepted at a Boston publishing house as an engraver and in spite of the fact that he had not served the customary seven years apprenticeship he was hired and given a weekly stipend.

The love for colors drew him away from the engraving business and before he was 16 years old he was sketching in water-colors and with paints which he manufactured himself. A born artist, he soon recognized his own natural bent and commenced studying with Brown and later with S. F. B. Morse in New York. The latter will be recognized as the inventor of the famous Morse telegraph code, but he was also an artist of repute.

After he was pronounced by Mr. Morse as ready for painting without the instruction of a teacher, Mr. Hardy returned to Bangor where old familiar haunts drew him with an irresistible longing.

Portraiture was his specialty and he painted many examples which are excellent in both texture and coloring. Bangor's first families of today possess many of his rare paintings of their ancestors which have been handed down through the generations.

He painted landscapes and his painting of Hamlet which he did from a steel engraving is most lovely, the colorings in the picture have been the delight of all art critics. He made many copies of Rubens under the instruction of Mr. Morse.

The picture of "Lady Peeling an Apple" is a study by candlelight, soft and glowing in color. It was accepted by the Boston Art Museum as a memorial gift to Mr. Hardy but later was exchanged by them for one of Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, President of Robert College, which was also from the brush of Mr. Hardy.

A man devoted to his family—loving the simple homelike atmosphere of family life, one sees frequently pictures of his family in the intimate studies of his home life. His conscience ruled his easel and he never did a hasty or shabby piece of execution. Although there is no record of the number of pictures he painted he did a great many and must have been a prolific painter.

He possessed artistic sense, a quick eye for proportion and his use of colors was exceedingly clever. In addition to painting he gave lessons and many of the artists that followed were those who gleaned their knowledge and inspiration from him.

A life of painting from 16 to 87 was one which left an impression that will last for generations to come. Mr. Hardy died in February, 1887, at his home in Bangor.²³⁹

Miss Mary C. Robinson, educator and writer of repute, who knew personally Jeremiah Pearson Hardy and his nephew, Manly Hardy, has contributed the following concerning the subject of this sketch, the notes being prepared under date of 20 Aug. 1934:

Jeremiah P. Hardy (1800-1888). Mr. Hardy was tall and thin, a man of the highest character, for many years Deacon in the First Congregational Church of Bangor. In his earlier life he had a studio in Boston, winning success there, but he returned to Maine somewhere about 1830, and became a portrait painter, widely known, skillful both in his coloring and in catching the personality of his sitters.

Katherine Wheeler, wife of J. P. Hardy, was a woman of beauty and charm. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hardy had a keen sense of humor, which together with their cultivated taste, wide reading and distinction of manner, won them a circle of delightful and admiring friends. Their home life was idyllic, though for several years before her death Mrs. Hardy's health was delicate.

She exhibited in Boston and New York, and studied in Paris with Heannin and was also a pupil of Abbot Thayer."²⁴⁰

Miss Mary C. Robinson, a personal friend, under date of 20 Aug. 1934, wrote of her:

"Of deep religious faith, dainty, graceful, fiery as becomes a person with crisp, curling, red gold hair, Miss Annie E. Hardy was and is a person of rare talent and charm. Eagerly interested in the doings of the world, only last winter this fragile lady wished she could be Senator from Massachusetts for a while! Her deafness has been no handicap to her art, and, like every other member of her family she is unselfish to a fault. She painted a lifelike portrait of her father after his death, and did at least one other portrait, that of Professor John S. Sewall, which now hangs in the Bangor Theological Seminary.

"How cold is what I have written; she is vivid like a humming bird."

Perhaps other children.²⁴¹

Children, all born at Wilton, Me.:

 1496* ii. JOHN DRURY⁸ (By first wife), b. 24 Mar. 1836; m. 1863, LUCY C. FLETCHER.
 1497 iii. VITELLUS MERRILL, REV., D.D.⁸ (By second wife), b. 13 Oct. 1840; m. 10 June 1873, SARAH A. NOYES of Morrisville, Vt.; d. 20 Mar. 1925. An account of his death, as published in the local paper at Morrisville, Vt. (The Morrisville Messenger) is reproduced in part as follows:

"Dr. Hardy was born in Wilton, Me., Oct. 13, 1840, the son of Levi and Catherine Mosher Hardy. His early life was spent on the farm. He was educated in the rural schools taught by transient teachers, and by himself in his mother's kitchen. Thus he prepared himself for college. As he could not enter college because of financial reasons he continued his college course by himself, with almost no aid from schools or teachers.

"In February, 1863, he applied for admission to Union College, taking the examinations which covered four years of the preparatory work for college and nearly two years of college work, and was admitted to the sophomore class.

"Here he met Dr. N. G. Clark, later secretary of the American Board, and accepted his advice to go to Amherst College. So after one term in Union College, in September, 1863, he entered the junior class of Amherst College, from which he was graduated in 1865.

"In the fall of 1865 he entered the Chicago Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1869, in the meantime having spent one year as a home missionary in Minnesota. During the next year he took a post-graduate course in the Theological Seminary at Bangor, Me.

"He became pastor of the Congregational Church in Morrisville (Vt.) in 1870, where he remained seven years. He then accepted a call to the Congregational Church in Randolph, where he had a long and eminently successful pastorate of 22 years.

"He resigned to accept the pastorate of the church at Foxcroft, Me., where he remained five years (1900-1905), when he retired and came to Morrisville where he had since lived and, as long as his health would permit had been a 'minister at large.'

"The University of Vermont conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon him in 1895. . . .

"Dr. Hardy's ministerial service of more than 40 years was faithful and intelligent. He was not only a minister, but also one of the foremost and most influential citizens in the communities in which he had lived.

"It is difficult to estimate the benefit which his devoted life and high character has had on the life of the people and places which have known him. Modest and unassuming, he was true to the best traditions of his Christian faith. Always earnest in the cause of social reform and righteousness; always progressive, enlightened and eager in the search of truth, he was a notable example of the true Christian minister and gentleman.

"During the past few years he had been dean of the ministers of every denomination in this vicinity, who often came to him for counsel and service. He often wrote poems and hymns for special and anniversary occasions which were always appropriate and gave much pleasure and received much favorable comment.²⁴³

at Laclede, Mo., 7 Dec. 1881; married, first, 8 Nov. 1840, HANNAH WESTCOTT, who was born at Hirambsburg, Ohio, 12 Feb. 1817, and died at Hoskinsville, Ohio, 29 May 1857; married, second, 3 Jul. 1858, EMILY ANGELINE ATHEY, who was born at Bonn, Ohio, 15 Nov. 1835 and died at Laclede, Mo., 30 Dec. 1866; married, third, at Millersburg, Ill., 25 May 1868, MRS. TABITHA M. (BRANNON) BAY, who was born at Barnesville, Ohio, 5 May 1827 and died 31 Dec. 1888.

Hon. Moses D. Hardy, when a lad of about seven years, moved with his parents to Wayne County, N. Y., and then, in 1829, went with them to Ohio, where he grew up, attended the local schools, and taught school for seventeen years. He was a leader in his community and in politics a Republican. During the years 1856 and 1857 he represented his district, which then included Marietta, Ohio, in the Ohio State Senate. He owned a farm at Horse Run, about one mile from Hoskinsville, and erected thereon a substantial homestead, which is still standing in good condition.

When the Civil War broke out he sided with the Union cause. His son, Lucius C., joined an Ohio regiment of volunteers and was taken prisoner, later dying in Andersonville Prison. It should be pointed out that many people in Ohio were against the war. The entire Hoskinsville community was divided in sentiment. Federal troops came, or were brought in, looking for alleged deserters, this move being a part of the so-called "Hoskinsville Rebellion", chronicled in Noble County, Ohio, history. Mr. Hardy incurred the ill will of the men who were called "Copperheads." With passions inflamed, the latter burned his barn with contents, including horses, and stole his wool. Hysteria of war always influences partisans to think, say and do things that in normal times they would avoid. This situation and the loss of his son led him to sell the farm, which he loved greatly and which he made beautiful. He moved to Athens, Ohio, and after a few months, the war being over, he moved with his family to Laclede, Linn County, Mo., where he again found peace and a fair measure of prosperity.

Mr. Hardy was a man of peace, as may be sensed from the fact that in later years he refused to take legal steps against those who had caused him such great financial loss during the war days. He was a thoroughly human and likable man, and enjoyed going with others on coon hunts, a popular pastime of his day. He was fond of good horses and took great pride in caring for his farm. He was a strongly religious man, being first a Baptist and later, at Laclede, Mo., a Methodist. He was a member of the official board and represented his church at annual conferences of the M. E. Church. One of his granddaughters, writing of his wisdom and of his companionable traits, once compared him to the "Old Squire" in the stories written for the Youth's Companion by C. A. Stephens.

His first wife, Hannah Westcott, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Westcott, who emigrated from Warwick, R. I., to Noble County, Ohio, going there by wagon in the summer of 1816. The Westcotts were of Welsh descent.

The second wife of Moses Dennis Hardy, Emily Athey, was an early disciple of simplicity in women's dress and is remembered especially by her relatives as an advocate of "bloomers." Her health was poor when she and her husband moved to Missouri and the illness that led up to her death was said to have begun with over-exertion while trying to help her husband save wool stored in a nearby building when bad feeling led to the firing of the Hardy barn.²⁴⁷

David Hardy was literally born in the woods, and he spent practically all his life in the lumber business. He began early in life to cut lumber from his farm. He managed a large number of sawmills in Central New Hampshire. He learned the carpenter trade and became a contractor and builder. Many buildings in Groton, Bridgewater, Waterville and Campton, built by his hands or under his supervision, are still standing. He had several chests of the best carpenter tools made in this country and in England, and some of these are still in splendid preservation and in the possession of his grandson, Freeman George Hardy of Hill, N. H. He made many trips to Boston, Mass., where he obtained contracts for buildings of all sorts. After obtaining the contracts, he would return to his sawmills in New Hampshire and prepare the lumber according to specifications. He also made many funeral caskets.²⁶⁹

982. LAURIN M.⁷ HARDY (*Israel*⁶, *Moody*⁵, *Reuben*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Goffstown, N. H., 28 Jul. 1811; died at Glenwood, Pa., 22 Jul. 1888; married, first, SARAH J. TAYLOR of Spencer, N. Y., about 1832. She was a cousin of ZACHARY TAYLOR, twelfth President of the United States, and was the mother of all the children. She died in 1861 at Glenwood, Pa., and was buried in the West Lenox, Pa., Cemetery, referred to locally as the "Tower Cemetery." He married, second, about 1880, MRS. ANNA CHANDLER, widow, of Glenwood, Pa. Her first husband was ADELBERT ("Ad") CHANDLER.

Laurin M. Hardy was a pioneer in every sense of the word. When a boy about seven years old he made the long and hazardous journey with his parents and two brothers into the wilderness of New York State under very trying circumstances. While endeavoring to find a suitable place to locate and to begin life anew, this small family of brave adventurers bivouacked many nights out in the open spaces where roamed the more or less hostile Indians. They followed the Susquehanna River most of the way to Barton, near Spencer, Tioga County, N. Y., and there began to clear the land. In the meantime, young Laurin obtained what education he could, aided largely by his parents, who had behind them a good, common school training received in New Hampshire. He learned to cut logs into lumber and to make shoes.

In the late forties a number of New York State families began to go south into Pennsylvania, where lumbering was being carried on extensively and where the tanbark industry was fast developing. Laurin and his family joined the migration. He went first to Orwell, Pa., and had charge of a mill. Soon after, however, he removed to "Hell's Half Acre", West Lenox, Pa. There, largely through the influence of a friend, he obtained a position as operator of another mill. The employment this time did not prove to be profitable and he moved again to Glenwood, Pa., three or four miles directly south. At that time the town of Glenwood was a thriving business center. The firm of Grow Brothers was probably the leading firm of its kind in Susquehanna County. In addition to running a large farm, they conducted a general store, a lumber mill, a grist mill, and the post office station. Laurin Hardy had general charge of the sawmill and the grist mill owned by the distinguished Grow family, which entered Pennsylvania from Connecticut.

Laurin Hardy possessed unusual traits of courtesy, amiability and leadership. He had a fine physique, was tall and dignified in appearance. He was highly respected wherever he lived, and as evidence of that fact, among his friends and neighbors at Glenwood, Pa., he was always referred to as "Mr. Hardy." It was his strict code of life to deal honorably, honestly and courteously with all people with whom he came in contact. He was an active churchman, a Christian gentleman, and a valued neighbor, for he was on good terms with all. In politics he was a staunch Republican. The entire community mourned his passing at the ripe age of 78 years.

In 1848 Gustavus Hardy came to Watertown from the town of Rutland, where he was born. His parents were among the earliest settlers of the section. His father was a carpenter and builder, and was the first man of that section of the country to use the square in erecting buildings. When Mr. Hardy came to the city he learned the carpenter's and joiner's trade. He was apprenticed to Mr. Benjamin Gibbs, an old-time contractor and father of his wife. After mastering the trade, he was associated with Mr. Gibbs for several years. Construction was altogether different from the present day method. Buildings were entirely frame, put up with huge beams held together by wooden pins.

In 1864 he enlisted in Company A, Tenth New York Heavy Artillery. He served the greater part of his enlistment at Petersburg, Va. He was honorably discharged in 1865. He then returned to Watertown and resumed his trade. He retired when he was 71 years old, working at only small jobs for a few years later. He was the oldest member of the Joe Spratt Post, G. A. R. At the time of his death he was one of the three oldest Odd Fellows of Jefferson County. He was also the oldest member of the Exempt Volunteer Firemen's Association, enlisting 20 May 1861. He was for many years a consistent member of the church. In 1914 on Thanksgiving Day, Gustavus, then 90 years of age, his father, Robert C. Hardy, 93, and his brother, John C. Hardy, 81, gathered at the residence of Edward and Lucy (Hardy) Mitchell for turkey dinner. Few men of the city have been so thoroughly identified with the forward movements of the city as Mr. Hardy, and his influence was always for the best and the highest. He was 94 years old at the time of his death.

1014. ADDISON WILLIAM⁷ HARDY (Robert⁶, Thomas⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Rutland, N. Y., 29 Dec. 1827; died at Rockford, Ill., 20 Mar. 1895; married, 11 Feb. 1855, SARAH JANE WARNER.

Addison William Hardy was a thorough scholar, having a clear insight into what seemed to others extremely difficult. After obtaining what he could at the district schools, he entered the Black River Institute. From there he pursued his studies at the State Teachers College at Albany, graduating in 1848. That year his roommate was stricken with cholera, which was prevalent in New York and other cities at the time. He did not desert his friend, but stayed by him and nursed him until he was well. This spirit characterized his whole life. After leaving school he taught at Burrs Mills, and then bought a farm and settled down. In 1885 he was Captain of the State Militia.

He was well known throughout the county, had decided opinions, the courage of his convictions and could sustain them with the soundest arguments. He was a great reader, a ready talker and held a facile pen. He ably represented his town on the Board of Supervisors. More than all else, he had a great, kind heart. His children were brought up to respect the Christian faith, and to live in accordance with it. He had strong sympathies and no one in distress ever applied to him for relief in vain if it was in his power to bestow help. Although he did not amass a fortune in a miser's sense, he had the assurance, on nearing life's close, that he had been useful. He was honored and respected by a host of friends who deeply mourned his departure.

Charles Carroll Hardy was named after Charles Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was an architect, carpenter and builder by occupation.

In 1853 he decided to take a trip to Oregon, and perhaps settle there, as the great northwest was just coming into its own as an alluring country to which countless numbers of eastern farmers and others were then going. Reports of successful ventures by friends and relatives made a strong appeal to such young men as Charles Carroll Hardy, who had a natural inclination toward adventure. He planned to go to Oregon by way of the Isthmus of Panama and to stop off at California to try his luck at mining gold, for it must be remembered that the gold rush of '49 was not yet over.

He left home Monday, 17 Jan. 1853, and took passage on the sailing vessel Northern Light, paying $210 for his ticket. Fortunately, he wrote a diary of his trip and of his experiences in Cali-

foria, where he spent about two and one-half months digging gold, and in Oregon, where he found employment in cutting down big trees for lumber. The diary is now in the possession of his son, David R. Hardy, of Watertown, N. Y. In view of the fact that Charles Carroll Hardy encountered a shipwreck and nearly lost his life in the Pacific, the diary has special significance. Incidentally, he did not reach San Francisco until March 31. There are many very interesting descriptions of experiences and incidents connected with the journey to California, such as sailing out of course, due to unfavorable winds, getting becalmed at sea, crossing the Isthmus on the back of a bronco, sea sickness, etc., but his reference to the shipwreck at the head of Margaretta Island in the Pacific Ocean at five o'clock in the morning is especially interesting. He was able to escape drowning by clinging to a step-ladder. That part of his diary devoted to the shipwreck, which occurred 16 Feb. 1853, is reproduced as follows:

Wednesday, 16:

Struck a rock at the head of Margaretta Island at 5 o'clock A. M. Took on fire in about $\frac{1}{2}$ of an hour, ran ashore. I jumped overboard & was picked up about $\frac{1}{2}$ a mile to seaward. About 150 lives lost, in good health. Lost all of my baggage. No water found yet, fair prospect of starvation.

Thursday, 17:

Did not sleep much last night. Went across the Island. Saw 4 ships, found a little water dripping from a rock about 60 rods from camp. About 25 bodies washed ashore this morning. Condensing apparatus constructed, made about one gallon per hour. Child born this morning, doing well. Water found about 7 miles from camp.

Friday, 18:

Started for water before daylight, arrived about 10 A. M., had to be dipped with a spoon. First mate of our vessel & mate of a whale ship arrived in a short time with information that boats had come to take us from the Island. Started for the landing, arrived & was taken on board about dark. Had for supper tea, water, hard bread & molasses, good fare.

Saturday, 19:

Woke up and found myself on board of a whale ship. 3 others were anchored within $\frac{1}{4}$ of a mile. Have plenty to eat & drink. Am in prospect good. Paid 10 cts. for a palm leaf hat, have now a whole suit except stockings. Whole number of passengers on board before the wreck 358, the crew comprised 60, total 418, found to be alive this morning 238, missing 180.

Sunday, 20:

Went back to the Island a distance of 9 miles to bring provisions across from the wreck, distance across the island 4 miles. A schooner arrived to take us away last night, do not know what is to become of us yet. Ate raw beef, hard bread & drank water for supper, never had a better supper in my life.²⁷⁸

Charles Carroll Hardy returned to the community where he was born, purchased a farm at Rutland, near Watertown, N. Y., and took an active interest in all civic and religious affairs. He was one of the leading citizens of his day.

When about twenty years of age, Augustus Frederick Hardy went to Boston, and for a time was a sailor engaged in the fishing industry. Disliking a seafaring life, he became a truckman, and it was his proud distinction to drive an eight-horse truck conveying the first steam locomotive from the machine shops to the railroad where it was to be used. Later and for many years he was a member of the Boston police force. He was a man of extraordinary physical strength and courage, and under the name of "Jack" Hardy became a terror to evildoers. He had the reputation of being the strongest and most fearless man on the force and was assigned to posts of greatest danger and difficulty, and rendered noteworthy service in "The Riot of 1862." He lost an arm in a railroad accident, and thereafter for some years was a night watchman for the city of Boston. After the death of his wife in 1898 he made his home with his brother, EZRA PRESCOTT HARDY, in Keene, N. H.

Sylvander William Hardy was a mechanical engineer and inventor employed at the U. S. Navy Yard at Charlestown, Mass. He made early research work in photography in connection with the daguerreotype, and was also associated with the Colts in the development of the revolver. He was in every way a skilled mechanic, able to turn his hand to the making or repair of the most complicated machinery. Although dying in early manhood, when only thirty-six years of age, he had already established his position as one of the most skillful mechanics at the Navy Yard. On his gravestone in Munsonville is the following significant inscription:

A husband kind, a father dear
In quiet rest reposes here,
No sorrows cloud his thoughtful brow
Or break his peaceful slumbers now.
Genius and worth in him combined
To form a great, a noble mind.

1032. GEORGE GRANVILLE⁷ HARDY (Noah⁶, Noah⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Nelson, N. H., 25 Sept. 1816; died at New Orleans, 21 June 1863; married, 27 Mar. 1844, MARY STEVENS of Stoddard, N. H. She was born 14 Nov. 1816 and died 23 Apr. 1870.

George Granville Hardy and his wife settled on the "Hubbard" farm, beautifully located on a hilltop. While he always engaged in farming and lumbering, he was by trade a carpenter and mason. By nature a mechanic, he soon became the master builder of the region. He was industrious, energetic, an excellent executive, popular, mentally alert and quick witted. He was prominent in town affairs. The town of Nelson was settled under the name of Packersfield, and in 1814 the name was changed to Nelson. In 1841 the village center, located on a hilltop, was removed some eighty rods to the north to a more convenient situation, and a beautiful church edifice dedicated. In 1844 the town voted to remove the old meeting house to a location near the new edifice and to rebuild it into a town house. The contract was let to George Hardy, who not only removed the old meeting house but from its porches, with some additions, built a dwelling house. When the town house was built there was need of a school house. This was built by George Hardy, a very commodious two-storied brick building. Hardy also built the parsonage, and in fact directed or built nearly every building of the village of Nelson. A casual examination of these buildings will be convincing proof of the fine quality of Hardy's work. He enlisted in Co. G, Sixteenth Regiment, New Hampshire Infantry. He was mustered in 24 Oct. 1862, and died in service of a disease at New Orleans 21 June 1863. When the war broke out in 1861 he immediately felt it his duty to enlist, but there were sufficient volunteers to fill the various quotas for the town. Eighteen months passed. The call for three hundred thousand came nine months later. Men came at the darkest hour of the war. Nelson was already mourning the loss of many of her finest young men; the wounded and sick were in many a hospital, and a few physical wrecks had returned to tell their tales of suffering. Men no more enlisted from youthful enthusiasm or for the love of adventure. The only appeals that met with response were those made to pure patriotism and a sober sense of duty. Nine men were needed to fill the town's quota and save a draft. Ten volunteered from highly respected families, the best of Nelson's citizens; among them were Franklin B. and George G. Hardy. George Hardy was over forty-five years of age. He was a skilled carpenter in the midst of a construction job. He had an invalid wife and six children, the youngest in the cradle. A draft meant nothing to him personally. The bounty was no inducement. He clearly saw that a man of his age could hardly expect to survive the hardships of military service, and yet he decided that it was his duty to go, and forthwith went. Influenced largely by his example, eight others enlisted in the same company, and there was no draft. He was in service in the army of Gen. N. G. Banks, and his regiment for many months was either marching through or quartered in the almost interminable swamps of Louisiana. It was extremely hot by day and damp by night. The water supply was impure and there was no adequate protection from the flies and other insects of the swamps, and for much of the time the regiment had neither a surgeon nor a medical advisor. There were days when practically the whole regiment was on the sick list. Hardy's strong constitution at last yielded to the ravages of disease, and he was sent to a hospital in New Orleans, where he died.

Sept. 1910. MR. PARKER SNOW was a native of the town of Nelson, and much interested in the town, in 1910 erecting and giving to the town a fine cement bridge near his old home. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College, "working his way" with a resolute purpose, determined to make the most of his abilities. He became at length an expert civil engineer and for a considerable period was the chief engineer of the Boston and Main R. R., specializing in bridge-making. He was a resident of Somerville, Mass., and d. there 5 Sept. 1933. An interesting romance is associated with his marriage. DELIA HARDY and PARKER SNOW were schoolmate sweethearts, both married, as the course of true love for them was a bit turbulent. After a separation of more than sixty years they were wedded, the groom over eighty and bride seventy-five years of age. This union proved most harmonious and happy. DELIA HARDY SNOW was for many years one of the most respected, best known and most influential women of the town. An exceptionally fine scholar, she became a most efficient and successful school teacher, beginning her teaching at the age of sixteen. She was an excellent housekeeper, unusually hospitable, and her latch-string was always out to a host of friends. She was a great and discriminating reader, and for years the town librarian. For nearly a quarter of a century she was the Sunday School superintendent, and for many years the church treasurer. She was deeply interested in foreign missions, her brother-in-law being a medical missionary in China. Tolerant of the opinions of others, she was the recognized leader in every worth-while forward movement of the church or the town. Children, all born at Nelson, N. H.:

FLORENCE MAY⁹, b. 24 May 1876; d. 27 Sept. 1918 at Hillsboro, N. H.; m. 25 June 1901, GEORGE SAMUEL BAILEY, M.D., son of MARCUS M. and HELEN (THOMPSON) BAILEY of Nelson, N. H. He was a specialist and prize-winner in chemistry. He practiced medicine five years in Falmouth, Mass., and then removed to Hillsboro, N. H., where he has established a large and remunerative practice.

FLORENCE OSGOOD BAILEY was gifted with strong mentality and natural leadership. An excellent scholar, she became an efficient teacher. She was an active promoter of the Christian Endeavor movement, and for several years was the treasurer of the County Union. She was also an ardent advocate of temperance and Sabbath observance. She was a fine Bible student and a ready speaker, a devoted Christian, an active church worker, a faithful wife and mother, one who in her daily life embodied the faith she so loyally and consistently upheld. Although suffering for many years from impaired health, she was actively identified with many organizations and agencies of the church and community. Her sudden death was a shock to a host of friends.

GEORGE HUBBARD OSGOOD was well educated in the public schools. Being a natural mechanic, he became a master carpenter and builder, and eventually the secretary and partner of the well known Ascutney Realty Co. of Brooklyn, N. Y. He is one of the most influential members of the large Flatbush Congregational Church, serving as the chairman of the Board of Trustees, superintendent of the Sunday School, and holding other important positions. A man of correct habits, of strong convictions, of strict integrity, he exerts a wide influence for the highest and best in the life of the community.

He is a farmer by occupation and the owner of considerable real estate; is a devout and active Christian; strenuously upholds the fundamental principles of the Christian faith; is a staunch advocate of temperance and Sabbath observance. He is a great reader and finds great satisfaction in the association of his books and periodicals, and is exceptionally well informed on current events. EDITH HELEN⁹, b. 30 May 1888; m. 25 Dec. 1917, GEORGE BYRANT GALE. The marriage ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, REV. M. F. HARDY, at Nelson, N. Holyoke College, 1910, receiving the "Mary Lyon Scholarship." Prior to her marriage she won distinction as a teacher. Her excellent scholarship and other admirable qualities, and MR. GALE's prominence as a progressive farmer and the breeder of pedigreed stock have given the family a wide and uplifting influence in the town and county. Children:

- 1756 iv. HELEN⁸, b. 11 Oct. 1855; d. 6 Jul. 1881 at Marlboro, N. H. She was a quiet, retiring, affectionate Christian woman, deeply loved and highly respected by all who knew her.
- 1757 v. CHARLES FREMONT⁸, b. 20 Sept. 1857; d. 17 Apr. 1878, age 21 years. For several years prior to his death he made his home with his uncle, NOAH W. HARDY, at Nelson. He was an exceptionally fine scholar, a great and discriminating reader and gifted speaker, with studious habits and a retentive memory. He early so outdistanced his student companions that he was called to teach the village school which he had attended as a student. With his natural aptitude for teaching, this venture was very successful. Soon after this teaching experience his health became seriously impaired and for many months he was confined to his room, and for most of the time to his bed. He joined the church at the age of fifteen and took great delight in the various activities of the church. Had his life been spared he would undoubtedly have entered the ministry, a vocation for which he was exceptionally qualified. To his many friends his untimely death ended the earthly career of a life which gave promise of great usefulness and distinction.
- 1758* vi. WILLIAM PRESCOTT⁸, b. 10 Jan. 1862; m. 1st, 17 Jul. 1888, LILL J. ADAMS of Marlboro, N. H.; m. 2nd, 20 Jan. 1928, MRS. AMY ELECTRA SEXAUER of Los Angeles, Calif.

1034. NOAH WEBSTER⁷ HARDY (Noah⁶, Noah⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Nelson, N. H., 9 Nov. 1820; died at Nelson 29 May 1898; married, first, 7 Apr. 1846, MARIA ROLLINS, daughter of OLIVER and CHARLOTTE (KITTRIDGE) STONE, born at Nelson 9 Nov. 1821, died there 11 Nov. 1880; married, second, 29 Mar. 1882, MRS. SARAH E. WILSON of Swansea, N. H. She died 27 Aug. 1900. MARIA STONE HARDY represented two well-known colonial families, the STONES and the KITTRIDGES. She was a devoted wife and mother, an earnest, active Christian, whose life was the embodiment of her vigorous faith. Her likeness is well portrayed in the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs, "Her children rise up and call her blessed, her husband also and he praiseth her." She rejoiced in every opportunity to help the sick and needy, and found her greatest satisfaction in sharing her blessings with others. An exceptionally fine nurse, living in a community without a physician, she often ministered in emergency cases, especially among those unable to pay for medical care and advice. She was very hospitable, and many were the guests she entertained. She was a great homemaker, an excellent housekeeper, and yet always ready with efficiency to aid any community enterprise. Affectionate, efficient, self-effacing, domestic and social, "None knew her but to love her."

Noah Webster Hardy was one of ten children in a family in straightened circumstances. In his boyhood he was "bound out" to neighbors and was thus early initiated into a life of hard work. Fortunately, he was endowed with unusual physical strength, and throughout life was practically exempt from sickness. For him labor was never irksome. The meager educational advantages of his early life were overcome by extensive reading and by association with the cultured and educated. For many years he contributed articles for farm periodicals and did much speaking on agricultural, horticultural and kindred themes.

His life activities were diversified. Primarily he was a farmer, although interested in various avocations. During his early married life he engaged in butchering and was one of the first of the vicinity to use ice. Extensive lumbering interests occupied the long winter months. For years he marketed several hundred thousands of feet of sawed lumber, besides hundreds of cords of wood and bark. Deeply interested in fruit and flower culture, he was for many years the local agent for nursery stock, and one season shipped and sold over ten thousand maple saplings, besides several hundred larger maples. He furnished and set out the maple trees which adorn the village churchyard. He was the first in town to raise peaches, asparagus and tomatoes; and among the first to cultivate the plum and the various varieties of berries.

He was proud of his grafted fruit, especially Russian varieties experimentally cultivated under the direction of the U. S. Government.

The main work of his life was in farming. He was recognized as a prosperous and successful farmer. He specialized in potato culture, and for many years secured from state and county fairs first premiums on his exhibits. He was one of the first of the locality to hand pick his apples. He held many important town, county and state offices. He was state representative, 1871 and 1876; census enumerator of seven towns, 1870; a member of the State Republican Committee and director of the State Agricultural Society for many years; and for a time superintendent and president of the Cheshire County Fair.

In 1871 Mr. and Mrs. Hardy celebrated their silver wedding, which was largely attended. He traveled rather extensively for a farmer of his day. With wife and daughter Carrie, he took a trip to Illinois in 1867, attended the celebration of Concord and Lexington in 1875, and the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876.

Mr. Hardy suffered the loss of his right arm 10 Dec. 1875 in a sawmill accident. Although his hand and arm were terribly mangled, he wrapped them up and walked unaided a quarter of a mile to the nearest house. Nine days after his arm had been amputated he was in the field directing his workmen. Without a complaint because of his misfortune and with rare fortitude, he adapted himself to the new conditions.

For many years he was a State Justice of Peace and was chosen to settle many estates. In a community without an undertaker, he often served as "Conductor" at local funerals. He was intensely interested in the "summer resident" movement, and built several cottages at Echo Lake for summer use. He was one of the founders and promoters of the Nelson Picnic Association, organized in 1879, which it is claimed was the progenitor of the New Hampshire Old Home Week Movement. The first Town Picnics were held on Hardy Hill. Mr. Hardy was a staunch Republican, a Mason, and enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the State. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy joined the local Congregational Church the year they were married, and were its liberal and loyal supporters. They were public spirited, and gave generously of time, means and influence to every worthwhile cause; were characteristically optimistic and met hardship and misfortune with rare fortitude. Mr. Hardy had a keen sense of humor, was honest, industrious and independent, never drank intoxicants, never smoked, and was wont to say, "My word is as good as my bond", and it was.

Children, all born at Nelson, N. H.:

- 1759* i. WEBSTER OLIVER⁸, b. 7 Jan. 1848; m. 29 Nov. 1876, MARY E. PUTNAM of Boston.
- 1760 ii. SARAH MELVILLE⁸, b. 11 Nov. 1851; d. 3 Apr. 1872. She was a fine scholar and early became a successful public school teacher, an occupation which she greatly enjoyed. She united with the Congregational Church when eleven years of age and soon became an active and efficient Christian worker. The last social gathering which she attended was a prayer meeting where her voice mingled with others in prayer and song. Although passing hence at the age of twenty-one, she exerted a rather exceptional influence for good in a large circle of friends. A clergyman, well known and respected, who knew her intimately in the home, writes, "I consider her life and death as the strongest influence which won me to the Christian life", and another, who was well acquainted with her, said, "She was the most perfect girl I ever met." She was very attractive in appearance, graceful, artistic, winsome. Her hair was extraordinarily beautiful, fine, golden-brown, reaching below her waist and sufficiently thick to cover her back and shoulders like a mantle. Genial, genuine, self-effacing, helpful and always cheerful, she unconsciously won and held the friendship of all who knew her. Her worth was best appreciated in the home circle where she was a considerate, obedient and affectionate daughter, a helpful, happy and loving sister.
- 1761 iii. ROSETTE MARIA⁸, b. 20 Sept. 1856; m. 5 Mar. 1879, THADDEUS W. BARKER of Harrisville, N. H., son of CHAUNCEY and LUCY (BRYANT) BARKER of Harrisville, N. H. The BARKERS represent an old Colonial family. A great-grandfather was a soldier in the French and Indian War, and was at the battle of Concord as a soldier of the Revolutionary War. MR. BARKER was one of the most prominent and respected citizens of the town and county. In 1880 he purchased the "Lyman Stone Place", one of the best farms in Nelson. He successfully specialized in stock raising, having an excellent grass farm with exceptionally fine pasturage. He never permitted his extensive farming and other interests with their exacting demands to interfere with a service for the welfare of the people. Few citizens gave so freely of time and strength in public service as MR. BARKER. He served nine years as Selectman and seven years as the Chairman of the Board, twenty-five years as Overseer of the Poor, eighteen years as Town Treasurer, and was Census Enumerator in 1900. He was sent to the State Legislature, 1891-2, and in 1895 represented the Thirteenth District as State Senator. For more than fourteen years he was a member of the State Agricultural Board. No reference will be made here to the many local, county and state committees and commissions upon which he served. His position and prominence were the more notable because he was a self-made man. He d. 8 Jan. 1918.

ROSETTE HARDY PARKER is an excellent scholar. After completing her studies in the local schools and at the Marlow Academy, she engaged in teaching where her scholarship, mentality and natural leadership won her immediate success. Always a great reader and with a retentive memory, she has become a veritable storehouse of local history. Having spent practically her whole life in her native town of Nelson, she and her husband have been prominently identified with every recent forward movement of the church and community. However, their interests and influence have not been confined to the vicinity, but have been county and state wide. A gifted writer with poetic instincts and a keen sense of humor, ROSETTE BARKER has made frequent contributions to various organizations and public observances. She was the president of the semi-centennial celebration of the Nelson Town Picnic in 1929, the first woman to hold the office. She is a Notary Public, was Census Enumerator for Nelson and Stoddard, 1910, a member of the School Board and Trustee of the Library. A woman of diversified interests and versatility, she has found life crowded with rich and enjoyable experiences which have contributed much to the happiness of others. In her home no sacrifice has been too great, if it ministered to the joy and well-being of her husband and children. She is greatly interested in and well acquainted with the Hardy Family history. Children:

BESSIE LURA⁹, b. at Dublin, N. H., 3 Feb. 1880; m. 14 Oct. 1911, IRA ALLEN PUTNEY of Hopkinton, N. H., a progressive and prosperous farmer specializing in fruit culture and the production of milk. Her children have enjoyed unusual educational advantages, their musical talents have been stimulated and developed, their connection with Christian activities fostered, and respect for the dignity of labor deeply implanted. While at Amherst he successfully conducted a large boarding club with his classmate, now his brother-in-law, EDWIN N. HARDY. When in the seminary, under the auspices of the Connecticut Bible Society, he superintended the taking of a religious census of the city of Hartford. A valuable tabulation of this census appeared in pamphlet form. MR. STRUTHERS has held tenaciously to the high ideal that he was to minister to the people of all classes and conditions of his parish. His ministry has, therefore, been practical, constructive, conservative and inspirational. He has given special attention to the social aspects of the Gospel. He has held many positions of trust and responsibility in the communities which he has served. He has devoted much time and attention to biological studies. Of him it may be truthfully said, "A workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." CARRIE HARDY STRUTHERS was educated in the public schools of her native town and at Northfield Seminary; was a popular, efficient and successful teacher; united with the church at an early age and has always been active in Christian work. KINGSLEY, daughter of ALONZO and SOPHIA M. KINGSLEY of Winchester, N. H. She was born at Winchester, June, 1837, and died at Keene, 19 June 1871, age 34 years, 8 days. She was a graduate of Mount Holyoke Seminary, class of 1857, a woman of marked ability, unusual culture and rare refinement.

Silas Hardy was the eighth child in a family of ten children. The family was large, the income limited, and he was obliged to go out to work at the age of eleven. His schooling privileges were confined to ten or twelve weeks each winter. The rest of the time was spent in hard labor, yet at twenty he taught his first school. During his minority, by strict economy, he had saved $700. The next four years he taught school and prepared for college at the Marlow, N. H., Academy. In 1852, at the age of 25, he entered the Sophomore class at Dartmouth College, and graduated with high honors in 1855, being one of the Commencement speakers. The following year he became principal of Fox-croft Academy, Me. The next year he went to Keene, N. H., and entered the law office of Hon. Levi Chamberlain as a student. He was admitted to the bar at Newport in 1858 and immediately located at Keene. In March, 1859, he was appointed by Gov. William Haile Register of Probate for Cheshire County, and filled the office five years, when he was appointed Judge of Probate. He held this office ten years. He was engrossing clerk of the New Hampshire Legislature, 1861-2, a member of the Constitutional Convention, 1876. He was one of the most prominent lawyers of Keene. Mr. Hardy was prominently connected with the Cheshire County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, organized in 1834, which did a successful business for sixty years. He succeeded John Henry Elliott as president. He was a large real estate owner, and at times one of the largest taxpayers in Keene. He was trustee of the Cheshire Provident Institution and for nearly thirty years a director and president of the Winchester National Bank. He was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution; of the Lodge of the Temple, A. F. and A. M.; and for many years a trustee of the Elliott City Hospital. He conducted an extensive legal practice in connection with pension claims, took an active interest in educational affairs, and served on the school board. Until old age prevented, he attended every term of court in Cheshire County. Judge Hardy was one of the most prominent and distinguished members of the Hardy Clan in New England, and was always exceedingly proud of the Hardy name.

Child:

- 1766 i. ASHLEY KINGSLEY⁸, b. at Keene, N. H., 6 Apr. 1871; m. June 1902, ADELAIDE B. SANFORD, daughter of REV. ELIAS B. SANFORD, D.D., a Congregational minister who successfully served several large churches in Connecticut. At the age of 52, when many ministers approach "The Dead Line" he began the greatest work of his life. He, more than anyone else, is entitled to the honor of the inception and early development of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. MRS. HARDY has a fine education, has traveled extensively, and is a woman of high idealism and fine culture.

MR. HARDY was educated in the public schools of Keene; graduated from Dartmouth College, 1894; University of Berlin, 1894-5; received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1894 from Leipzig; was Instructor of German at Dartmouth, 1897-1902; Assistant Professor and Instructor of Old English, 1902-1915, Associate Professor, 1915-1917, and Professor since that time. He has also been associate editor of the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine for four years; a member of the Advisory Council of Simplified Spelling Board; member of the Modern Language Association; American member of the N. H. Society, S. A. R., and president for five years; member of the Dialect Society and identified with many other organizations. He was editor of Wildenbruch's Das edle Blut, 1906, compiler (German portion), a biography of useful Books for the Library of Teachers in Secondary Schools. He is also a writer and lecturer upon subjects associated with his department. The position which he holds, and that which he has accomplished, place him high in the ranks of American Scholarship.

1038. FRANKLIN BULLARD⁷ HARDY (*Noah*⁶, *Noah*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born 28 Apr. 1829, at Nelson, N. H.; died at Keene, N. H., 11 Feb. 1912; married, 30 Sept. 1852, EMILY CHRISTIANA JENKINS (born at Stoddard, 13 Apr. 1833; died at Keene, N. H., 23 Mar. 1908; daughter of ABIJAH and MARY (WATSON) JENKINS). She was the sister of MRS. CHARLES HARDY (1035).

Franklin Bullard Hardy, always known as "Frank", was a mechanic and farmer. About 1870, he was interested in chair-making in Munsonville, but was always interested in or engaged in farming. He was one of the most prominent citizens of the town of Nelson, holding many positions of trust: Town Constable, eighteen years; Selectman, twelve years; and represented the town in the State Legislature, 1872 and 1873. He was an ardent member of the G. A. R. and always attended the State Reunion as long as his health permitted. He enlisted as a volunteer in Company G, Sixteenth Regiment, New Hampshire Infantry, 9 Oct. 1862, mustered in as Corporal 24 Oct. 1862, mustered out 20

Aug. 1863. Also, on 16 Dec. 1864, he paid $300 to secure the enlistment, in Nelson's quota, of John McCarty, from Ireland. The regiment in which Franklin and his brother George enlisted became a part of the army of Gen. N. P. Banks for service along the Mississippi River in Louisiana. On 20 Dec. they reached New Orleans. 15 Mar. there occurred what is known in military annals as "The Great Mud March" of twenty hours without a break. For more than six months the regiment was variously quartered in one of the most pestilential districts in the Southland, particularly dangerous for the unacclimated men from the northern hills. The death rate from disease was greater than in any other N. H. regiment, and one of the greatest of any regiment in the Civil War. The men endured almost intolerable suffering. Hardy, although for a while broken in health, regained his strength and lived to an old age.

Children, born at Nelson, N. H.:

- 1767 i. EMMA CAROLINE⁸, b. 6 Feb. 1858; d. at Keene, N. H., 15 Jan. 1862.
- 1768 ii. FANNIE MADRE⁸, b. 18 Jul. 1870; d. 12 Jul. 1918; m. 22 June 1892, HARRY WILLARD JEWETT, son of FRANKLIN KITTRIDGE and MARY LOUISE (STAG) JEWETT (b. at Nelson, N. H., 28 Jul. 1869; d. 28 June 1918, two weeks before his wife's death). He was a salesman for the Abbott Grocery Company, Keene, N. H.; a fine musician and for a time organist in one of the large churches, also bass soloist. FANNIE MADRE was m. by her cousin, REV. M. F. HARDY. She was well educated in the public schools; home loving, social with a strong and winsome personality. Child:

1039. EZRA PRESCOTT⁷ HARDY (*Noah*⁶, *Noah*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Munsonville, N. H., 3 Sept. 1831; died at Keene, N. H., 8 June 1907; married MARY WHITNEY of Gardner, Mass. She and their infant child died within a year.

Ezra Prescott Hardy worked on the farm until 18 years of age, when he went to Marlboro to work in the pail shops. Then for fifteen years he was engaged in chairmaking in Winchendon, Gardner, Mass., and Keene, N. H. Some beautiful samples of his chairmaking are now preserved. He was an excellent musician, and played in a circus band for a short time, but soon took up the minstrel show business as manager and part owner of the Whitmore and Clarke Minstrels, favorably known throughout New England, New York and Canada. In the troupe were two famous comedians, Hank White and George M. Clarke. To the credit of the management, profanity and vulgarity were not allowed in any of the performances, and the show, while keeping the audience in almost constant laughter, rarely offended people of good taste. These minstrel shows and other entertainments by traveling showmen, so very popular two generations ago, have been driven from the field by the advent of the movie, the radio and automobile. Prescott, as he was always known, was a man of extraordinary physical strength, weighing over 250 pounds, over six feet tall, and well proportioned. He was not only a very strong man but also a skilled boxer and absolutely fearless. When, as occasionally it happened, a rowdy element attempted to break up the entertainment, suffice to note that order was very soon established. He was a close observer with a very retentive memory, an adept imitator and impersonator with a vast store of humor. He had a host of friends and represented the city of Keene in the State Legislature.

Eight years later he entered mercantile business; was twice elected a member of the New York State Assembly; for three years was School Commissioner of Cayuga County, N. Y., and was town Supervisor and Postmaster at the time of his death. The following resolutions were adopted by the Board of Supervisors at the time of his death:

Charles William Hardy was a man of many achievements. Although his chief occupation was that of a farmer, he was a lumberman of note, carrying on an extensive business. In politics he was a staunch Republican. He rendered conspicuous public service, not only in his home community but throughout the state. He was Selectman for the town of Hollis for three consecutive terms, 1876, 1877 and 1878. For several years he held the office of Overseer of the Poor. He was Tax Collector for the town of Hollis, and at one time Chief of the Fire Department. He was Justice of the Peace for more than twenty-five years. He also served as member of the Hollis Board of Education for five years. In 1889 he served as a member of the Constitutional Convention of New Hampshire, and in 1911 was elected a member of the House of Representatives of the State. He belonged to the Golden Cross, a fraternal organization, and attended the Hollis Congregational Church.

Mr. Hardy was a loyal booster for his home town and for eight consecutive years was chairman of the Old Home Week Association.

Children, born at Hollis, N. H.:

- 1773 i. GEORGE WILLIS⁸, b. 16 Aug. 1872; m. 29 June 1909, FLORA EVERETT CUTTER, daughter of JAMES M. and MARY (LAWRENCE) CUTTER. She was b. at Milford, N. H., 22 Feb. 1881, and received her general education in the public schools of Brookline, N. H., Fitchburg, Mass., and Lunenburg, Mass. She also attended a business college in Boston, Mass.

GEORGE WILLIS HARDY is one of New Hampshire's best known men. It has been his lot to participate in many civic and partisan affairs throughout his native state. He began early to prepare himself for public service by getting all the education he could in the local public schools. He is a graduate of the Hollis High School. Until 1889, he worked with his father on the old farm and then moved into town, where he purchased a fine residence which his wife has converted partly into a gift shop and tea room. For forty years he operated a livery and had charge of the mail route. Like his father before him, MR. HARDY is a thorough-going Republican, and frequently he is called into the councils of the party organization for advice and help. His community has honored him by electing him to public office several times. He was Selectman for three years. For more than ten years he served as Police Officer for the town of Hollis. In 1929, he was elected by a large majority in a spirited election a member of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire. He is a member of the Hollis Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, and served one year as Master. For more than twenty-five years he has also held the office of Justice of Peace.

Both MR. HARDY and his wife take an active interest in civic and religious affairs. MRS. HARDY is a prominent club woman. She is a Past Department Treasurer of the New Hampshire Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R. She belongs to the D. A. R. Chapter and is a former Regent. Both are members of the Hollis Congregational Church.

Incidentally, both are so popular that one or the other is being proposed for public office most of the time. In the fall of 1934, both of them ran for important public offices on the Republican ticket, he for County Commissioner and she for the State Legislature.

H., 6 Feb. 1828; died at Bristol, Conn., 20 Jan. 1904; married at Hollis, 14 Mar. 1854; SARAH ELIZABETH TENNY, daughter of the HON. RALPH E. TENNY of Hollis. She was born 13 Oct. 1826 at Hollis, and died at Arlington, Mass., 31 Jan. 1897. She was a woman of exceptional intelligence and refinement. One who knew her well writes: "A remarkably fine woman, rich in all good works." Reared in a home of unusual culture, she made her own home the embodiment of those principles and influences which have given the New England home a distinction in the development of our whole nation.

Rodney Joel Hardy spent the early years of his life on the farm. He was educated in the common schools of the town, and graduated from the Francestown Academy, located in a nearby village. For three years he taught school in Hollis, Francestown and Northborough, Mass.

He began his business career in Boston in 1850, entering the wholesale dry goods business of Tenney, Ballister & Co. Afterwards he became head of the firm, Hardy, Goss & Co., where he made what was then considered a fortune. Nearly all of this was lost in the great Boston fire of 1872. With characteristic pluck, he began again under the firm name of Rodney T. Hardy & Son, Grain Merchants. Eventually his two sons, Rodney T. and William E., were partners with him. They built up a large, lucrative and growing business, in which he continued until his death.

He lived in Boston from 1850-1856 and in Cambridge from 1856-1869, when he purchased a large and attractive estate on Lake St., Arlington, Mass., where he lived for the remainder of his life. He was known in business circles throughout New England for his integrity, progressiveness and efficiency. He was actively interested in community affairs and was one of the Democratic leaders of the city; served on the Arlington School Board; was a Justice of Peace; a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and was honored in many other ways in town and state. He and his wife were staunch and consistent members of the Arlington Congregational Church.

Though apparently enjoying his usual good health, he was stricken almost instantly with heart disease at the railroad station at Bristol, Conn., while on a business trip.

C. for the sum of $51,050, and about 1873 introduced his own brand, Hardy Whisky, selling the same to W. A. Hardy in 1881. He then went into Wall Street as a member of the firm, Voorhees & Hardy. The following clipping appeared in a New York paper in 1881 from an article entitled, "Business Changes in Wall Street." It makes special mention of a new firm, Voorhees & Hardy.

The members of this firm are W. D. Voorhees and Milton J. Hardy. Mr. Hardy has for a long period been interested in mercantile and financial affairs. Mr. Voorhees has been for upwards of thirty years an active member of the Stock Exchange. They transact a general stock commission business dealing in all the listed securities, which they purchase and sell on orders. H.

Isaac Hardy was a tanner and a highly respected citizen. He was an earnest worker for temperance. He used to employ as many as one hundred people at his tannery. Frequently he would refuse to give wages to his drinking employes, giving them to their wives instead. The latter came to regard him as their "best friend." It is said that while his body lay in state in an upper chamber, a woman from an adjoining town came with a child in her arms so that the child might gaze upon "the kind face of her best friend."

Child:

- 1800 i. HARRIET ANN⁸, b. at Danvers, Mass., 26 Nov. 1842; d. at Melrose, Mass., 14 Aug. 1928, nearly 86 years old. She was a woman of great culture, social activity.

1085. THOMAS⁷ HARDY (Isaac⁶, Isaac⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Peabody (South Danvers), Mass., 10 Sept. 1816; died at Angels Camp, Calaveras County, Calif.; married by Starr King, 1866, in San Francisco, MARTHA EMILY NEAL. She was born at Boston 17 Dec. 1840, and died at New York City, 7 Oct. 1924 at the age of 84. She was a descendant of JOHN and PRISCILLA ALDEN and of MILES STANDISH. This line, although traced through the women, had been reinforced by several distant cousin marriages. She was an extremely pretty woman, and in those early days an acknowledged belle. She attracted the attention of Mr. Hardy, and in spite of the great difference in their ages, his youthful bearing and wealth caused her to marry him.

Thomas Hardy lived in Alexandria, Louisiana, for four years, where he established a tannery, saying it was more practical to go where the hides and bark used in the process were, thus eliminating the long railroad hauls. He did not realize the difficulty of such an undertaking.

In 1849 he went to California, and when the leading men of the county heard he was planning to go, they rode over together to try to persuade him to stay. "Mr. Hardy", they said, "you have come among us and started a business that is good for the county. You have proved yourself a fine and honorable gentleman, and we ask you to stay with us." He freed his slaves, having bought them in order to give them kind treatment, organized a company of young negro men, and equipped them to march with Fremont into Mexico.

Thomas reached the gold fields before the days of "49", and was a vice-president for many years of the Society of Pioneers of California. He was in the Upper House at the time the state was called upon to ratify the Thirteenth Amendment, abolishing slavery, and his name was among the Ayes. He was a member of the Vigilance Committee, and was elected to the State Senate with cost only of a postage stamp on his letter of acceptance, 1863.

He won and lost three great fortunes. His luck at gold he tried to use in the constructive development of his adopted state (he saw her wonderful fruitfulness, her tremendous possibilities) by building a dry dock for San Francisco, and paying for the blowing up of huge rock which menaced shipping in the harbor. He paid Von Schmidt, a German engineer, $100,000. It was the first time undersea borings, done by divers, were made to receive the dynamite charges. He once owned the site of the whole city of Berkeley, and gave to the California University the land on which it stands for what he paid for it, which was a tiny fraction of its worth even then.

With practically no schooling, he wrote a fine hand. By observation he became an expert geologist, often consulted by that department of the University. He stood for law and order in a mining camp, and was appointed a Committee of One to enforce it. (This was probably at Mohelumne Hill, Calaveras County, Calif.) He notified a cheating gambler to leave the camp before sunset, and then went out to the river where the method then was "panning." A new log cabin had been fitted with a padlock to serve as a jail. Upon his return he was met near this cabin by the gambler, who sneeringly remarked that it was very near sunset and he was still in camp. He was armed. All through his youth Thomas had practiced leaping, running and wrestling. (At 70 he thought a twenty-mile walk only a stroll.) He leaped the great distance between them, and unarmed, jailed the astonished and disconcerted gambler, who was kicked out of camp the next morning. His fearless opposition to certain measures in the California Legislature won leadership. His intrepid courage, strength and superb health gave him power. His adventures with wild animals all showed the truth of his belief that man is naturally obeyed and feared by all beasts.

He won the confidence of the King doing yeoman service, and became a Judge in Lihue Kauai Island, where he served for over 50 years. At the celebration of his long term of office, those who honored him spoke of his spirit of equable justice and sound judgment.

He had just completed a six months' trip to get there, stopping at only two ports in South America on his way. He reached California in the midst of the gold rush, and had considerable to say about it. Rufus Hardy went to California during the gold rush, and is referred to as a "forty-niner." By courtesy of Miss Eva Adelaide Hardy, 17 Du Merle St., Lowell, Mass., there is reproduced here-with copy of excerpts taken from a letter written by him from San Francisco, 5 May 1851, addressed to members of his family, and also excerpts from another letter written by him under date of 6 June 1862, Nevada City, Calif.

Excerpts from letter of 5 May 1851:

We arrived here today at ten o'clock, making our journey forty days, expecting to see a fine city but sad to relate about one half of the city has burned up—all the principal part of it.

From N. Y. on I was somewhat sea sick and made me think of home some. We crossed the Isthmus very well and haven't been sea sick on this side.

Excerpts from letter of 6 June 1862, from Nevada City, Calif.:

The weather is very warm here now and will be for some months but we have cool nights—good nights to sleep. There is snow about seventy miles from us all summer. . . . I haven't lost hardly a day's work since I came into the country. We live within a few rods of the meeting house. We can go to meeting every Sunday. We have a very good minister. He says we must not write letters Sundays but I can't get any other time. After we work all day we have to cook and we have no time to write. We are tired enough to go to bed. We call it going to bed. I suppose you would not call lying on the floor going to bed. We live very well. We can get fresh meat and plenty of potatoes, beans, butter, cheese, milk and everything except coarse bread. I should like a chunk of coarse bread to eat with my milk tonight. We eat milk for supper every night. We think it is cheaper than anything else and handy to get for supper. It costs us $1.00 per day to live. Some days I make five dollars, some ten, twenty, and have made seventy.

A daughter of Rufus Hardy, Mrs. Charles Jaquith of Peterboro, N. H., has written the following about her father and his experiences in California.

My father went to San Francisco in the spring of 1851 which was before I was two years old. He went by boat but had to cross the Isthmus of Panama.

They mined by the placer system and could only work during the wet season, so in the dry season he worked on a milk farm. Most of his mining was done in the vicinity of Nevada City, California. Several men would buy a claim which they would work together. They lived in a rough shack.

He sent money home by draft and was able to pay for his farm in Greenfield (N. H.) and make improvements on it.

I remember his coming home when I was four. He came in the night because he walked from Wilton, a distance of about twelve miles as there was no means of transportation. The next morning my older sisters told me to go down stairs because there was a lady there who had a handsome shawl. That was my mother. My father had brought her a beautiful embroidered white crepe shawl which we still have.

I would not own him because I said my father was a handsome man and he was, of course, tired and worn from his long journey. I did not remember how he looked as I was so young but the neighbors had told me about him. It didn't take long to get acquainted and I found him a kind and thoughtful father.

He dropped dead with heart trouble when he was fifty years old.

1812; died 5 Feb. 1889; married ELLEN MARIA BEAL of Salisbury, N. H. (formerly called Lempster). A newspaper account of his death is given below, in part, as follows:

Deacon Truman Hardy, whose illness we noticed last week, died about ten minutes before 7 o'clock on Tuesday evening, the 5th inst (Feb.) (1889) aged nearly 76 years and 10 months. He was born in New Hampshire, 12
Apr. 1812. He was united in marriage with Miss Ellen M. Beal. . . .
Soon after they moved to Nashua, where they resided for about six years.
They then removed to Salisbury, where they remained some two years, thence removing to Hollis, N. H., where they remained some ten years; thence to Manchester, Mass., where they remained until 1863, when they removed to Ohio, taking up their residence at South Newbury, thence removing to Thompson, and thence, over six years ago, to this place (Chardon, Ohio). . . .

Both Deacon Hardy and his wife united with the church, and always exemplified their Christian profession by consistent and devoted lives.

296. This information furnished by Miss Mary Arvilla Hardy of Hollis, N. H.

He was one of the deacons of the Congregational Church of this place (Chardon, Ohio) and has held the same office in several other churches with which they have been connected.

Sept. 27, 1886, they celebrated their golden wedding, a large number of relatives and friends being present and the occasion being one of unusual interest and enjoyment.

The life of Deacon Hardy, so quiet, pure and regular in its course, so full of years and rich in fruitage, and so calm and peaceful at its close, is his best eulogy. An humble, devoted, Christian man has gone to his reward.

2045 v. ELIZABETH WILLIAMS⁸, b. at Groveland, Mass., 29 Aug. 1839;
m. at Salt Lake City, 3 Sept. 1855, EDWIN RUTHVEN LAMB, son of ABEL and ALMIRA (MERRILL) LAMB (b. in Avon, Livingston Co., N. Y., 23 Dec. 1831; d. in Toquerville, Utah, 18 Mar. 1924, age 92 years). He came to Salt Lake City in 1850. He was a cooper by trade; moved to Southern Utah in 1860, and settled in Virgin City. He enlisted 7 Jan. 1866 in Sargent A. J. Stratton's Company, as a Home of Picket-guards, an organization to co-operate with the Infantry and Cavalry for the protection of their homes against the Pintos and Navajo Indians. He also served as cavalryman, sent by Sergeant Stratton early in 1866 as relief guard to fill the ranks of some on furlough at Maxwell's Ranch, Utah, near the Arizona border. He was released from said services Mar. 4th at said ranch, subject to any official call. He guarded at Gool's Ranch, 8 miles south of Virgin City.

Both EDWIN and ELIZABETH LAMB came to Utah in 1850.
She was 11 years old at that time. They spent their lives as young people in Salt Lake City for five years, helping to make the city worth while. They endured the famine, the grasshopper war; witnessed the arrival of the sea gulls, and stood all the hardships of pioneer life. In Nov. 1861, President Brigham Young called for volunteers to go south to pioneer the settlements of what is now known as Utah's Dixie.

"My parents,³⁰¹ with many others, took their oxen and wagons, and went south. Father was a cooper by trade, and a cooper could work all kinds of timber. When grain was raised, barrels were necessary. So with little Caddie they landed in 'Pocket' or 'Nock' on the Virgin River in Dec. 1861. Elizabeth was a fine singer, and is today, although she is 92. She still sings in Salt Lake with the Daughters of the Pioneers. She has kept records of her family, her father's family in so much, that it has been of greatest help in accomplishing a genealogical record. She is still living, at the age of 91½ years, and is the mother of 10 children, 48 grandchildren, 78 great-grandchildren, and 12 great-great-grandchildren. At the age of 91½ years, she came in an auto from Toquerville, Utah, 315 miles, to Salt Lake City. She sang over the KSL Radio Station at this advanced age, and also entertained the Daughters of the Pioneers by singing the song entitled, 'Oh, would I were a girl again', in the Hotel New House, one of Utah's most prominent hotels."

LORINE ISABELL⁹, b. at Virgin City, Utah, 8 Jan. 1862; m. at Toquerville, 1881, RICHARD TATE HIGBEE, son of JOHN S. and ANNA (GRANGER) HIGBEE.

LORINE ISABELL was born in a wagon box in one of the great raging rain storms of that country. Her childhood memories are of a fort where all over houses constructed of logs, hewn from trees, all stood in a square facing into the center. There was a public corral on the sand hill where every family put their stock to be guarded from the Indians. The family would go to the mountains summers to work. There CADDIE, her sister, and LORINE learned the art of shingle making, together with sawmill work and dairy work. Since there were no boys in the family, as they had died, the two girls had to be the pioneers. The two girls with their father, made the shingles to cover the first cotton factory in Dixie. It was erected in about '73. The building still stands. In '75 the family moved to Toquerville, which at that time was the county seat of Kane County. Here she started school. She had been to a beginner's class previously, but there was only one book for a class. The teacher held a blue backed speller in her hand with a pencil in the other. She would say or point to A, B, C, and the children would say the alphabet from A to Z and then back to A. Her father taught the school in Toquerville. When the girls would get discouraged with the work their mother would say, "Girls, you have the Hardy blood, 'don't quit." She was commissioned as postmistress under President McKinley, served ten years, and then resigned on account of ill health; she was in the County Registration Office for three terms, registered the boys for the World War; she was Chairman of one branch of the Red Cross; she has been President for the last ten years of the Relief Society which is a branch of the National Relief Society of Women; she worked as a secretary for 15 years in different societies; and she has been a merchant owning her own grocery store. She was proud of her name, HARDY LAMB. She once stated, "Long live the name, in this land of our Republic."

Her husband, EDWIN RICHARD HIGBEE, is a constructor of roads. When he was at work exploring in order to find a roadway to Cedar Breaks, gateway to the National Parks, he discovered a natural bridge over a gorge which his teams could cross. The bridge is in the capital of Utah, and is known as the Edwin Bridge. He was Mayor of the Town of Toquerville for four years; he worked for the state and handled many thousands of dollars constructing roads. He has twenty mules at the Boulder or Hoover Dam Site and in that vicinity. Children:

LORINE OSGOOD came to Utah with her father in 1850. They crossed the Allegheny Mountains in a boat. She danced on the boat while her sister ELIZA, aged 11, played the tambourine. She crossed the plains with ox teams and their milch cows. They witnessed a stampede of the whole train of emigrants. In the fall she reached the valley, and helped in all the adversities of the building the city of Salt Lake. In 1861, still a young girl, she went south with her father to build up the waste land of Utah's Dixie. While at a little village known at that time as Pocket Ville, later Virgin City, she met PHILETUS GOULD DAVIS. Children:

H., 18 Feb. 1895; twin brother of ANDREW JACKSON HARDY; married, 31 May 1859, FIDELIA GOODNOW of West Deering, N. H. She was a daughter of ASA and ORRIL (BURNAP) GOODNOW, and was born 4 Jan. 1833 and died at West Deering 28 Nov. 1872.

The twin boys were only four years old when their father died. It happened that a very well-to-do farmer of Henniker, N. H., Oliver Colby, had no children of his own, and so he took the two small Hardy children into his home to bring up. The New Hampshire law of adoption had not been passed at that time, and hence, while they became members of the Colby family, and had their names changed accordingly, they were not officially adopted. Both boys grew to manhood and clung to their foster parents with genuine filial affection and loyalty. In spite of this, great disappointment came to them when Oliver Colby and his wife passed away, for they were not permitted to share in the estate of either.³¹⁴ 1431. HARVEY WESLEY⁷ HARDY (Samuel⁶, Samuel⁵, Francis⁴, Jacob³, Jacob², Thomas¹), born at Gainesville, N. Y., 29 Oct. 1825; died 11 Jan. 1912; married, 6 June 1855, CHARLOTTE CLEMENT ABBOTT of Churchville, N. Y., a descendant of the CLEMENT family of Vermont, that has given us two well-known names: FRANCIS WILLARD and PHILLIPS BROOKS.

In 1805, when the land of the Holland Purchase in Western New York was opened for settlement, his father, Samuel (768) Hardy, left his home in Rutland, Vt., and with his wife and two children and a few household goods in an ox cart, made the six weeks' trip to the New West, to what is now Wyoming County, N. Y.

Harvey Wesley Hardy was born here on the old farm, where he spent his boyhood. His early education was obtained at the country school of that district. Afterward he attended Wesleyan Seminary at Lima, N. Y., and later Genesee College. After leaving college he taught school for eight years, and was then elected to the newly created office of Superintendent of Schools of Wyoming County.

He was always a great lover of the out-of-doors, being an ardent hunter, fisherman, and trapper. In his early manhood he made two rather extensive winter trips into the Indian country, buying furs; one into Canada along the Ottawa River, and the other around the northern part of Michigan from Detroit to Mackinac and back by way of Grand Rapids. On both of these trips he brought the furs out on dog sleds. At no time did he have serious trouble with the Indians. The two trips were successful from a financial standpoint.

While at Grand Rapids he met the girl who was to become his wife. He brought his bride to the Hardy Farm near Gainesville, where they lived until 1868, when they decided to take Horace Greeley's advice, "Go west, young man, go west!"

In moving west from New York, the traditional Hardy traits of adventure came to life. The father and oldest son drove a flock of sheep out to Illinois and sold them. The mother and two younger children made the trip on Jay Gould's Erie Railroad—a hazardous journey in those days.

After three years in business at Aurora, Ill., where another son, Emory Chase, was born, the family decided to go farther west to the newly started capital of Nebraska—Lincoln. In this embryo city on the fringe of the New West, our New York farm boy found the conditions that brought him to his fullest development. Reared in the rather strict precepts of the Free Methodist Church, he soon found the lawless life in his new home grating on his high sense of morality. A town that was largely controlled by the saloon keepers and the gamblers and their hangers-on was against his idea of good government. So he early entered into the fight to rid the town of what we now call "the gangster rule."

In 1878 he was elected Mayor of the city on a high license platform. This was the first step forward of the temperance people for the control of the liquor business. It was the period of the "Crusades" and of the organization of Francis Willard's W. C. T. U. In both of these movements, Mrs. Hardy was very active.

For forty years the name of Harvey Wesley Hardy was a power for good government and morality in both Lincoln and Nebraska. He ran for governor on the Prohibition ticket when that party was organized, and in his later years his intimate friends called him "Governor Hardy."

He had a genial, cheerful nature, and through his long life made a host of friends. In his new home he allied himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was an earnest worker in that church. He was a clever story teller, and in the summer evenings it was not unusual to see a dozen children grouped around him on the lawn, listening with fascination to his stories of adventure.

As the years passed he mellowed, both as to his strict orthodox religious views and as to his judgment of the foibles of his fellow men. He had an eager mind, was an extensive reader, and went through life accumulating knowledge. From his retail furniture business he supported his family and gave his children a good education.

On the whole, Harvey Wesley Hardy lived the highest type of an American life. He cared more for knowledge than wealth. He was always on the side of morality, right living, and good government. He was indeed a friend of man, always ready to help those in distress with wise counsel and substantial gifts when possible.

Children:

- 2171 i. CLEMENT ABBOTT⁸, b. at Gainesville, N. Y., 24 Nov. 1856; d. at Chicago, Ill., 15 Apr. 1934; m. 6 Mar. 1884, at Red Oak, Iowa, LAUREL HUISIZER. He was born on a farm at Gainesville, N. Y., in the same house in which his father was born. His boyhood, however, was spent in Lincoln, Neb., where he received his education in high school and university. He had great inventive ability and it has been said of him that the invention of the disc plow, which has been called one of the ten most useful inventions in the development of the West agriculturally, was the direct result of his mechanical engineering.³¹⁷

In an article published several years ago by the National Geographic Magazine, MR. HARDY won prominence in a review of the most important inventions in the history of America.

Guns were also a hobby that brought him much pleasure and prominence. At one time he had 350 pistols in his collection. This was considered one of the most valuable private collections in the country. The guns were later given to museums. Long before the methods of ballistic tests, as they are known today by microscopic examination of bullets and barrels of guns and pistols, were evolved, MR. HARDY was widely known as a gun expert. During a series of shootings that took place in Chicago many years ago, he was called in to make a study of the weapons used after every murder.

When a young man, he left Lincoln and went to Chicago, where he spent the major portion of his life, except for a few years when he was in Texas in the employ of a leading farm machinery house. He was a foundry engineer, inventor and ballistics expert.

Y., 29 Jul. 1861; m. 1 Nov. 1911, THOMAS ELWOOD CALVERT who was born at Newton Square, Pa., and prepared for college at Norristown Academy, Norristown, Pa. He attended Yale University and graduated from the Sheffield Scientific College in 1870. He was chief engineer of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R. and one of the leading railroad superintendents of his time. An editorial appeared in the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star, 16 Sept. 1934, and it is reproduced here in full:

“Work that men do lives after them. Great men leave monuments behind that may not be obscured, no matter what happens. Lincoln people remember the late T. E. Calvert well. He was a railroad superintendent for a long time, not from choice. Before his death (1916) he was chief engineer of the Burlington Railroad. A. W. Newton, now the chief engineer of the railroad, is grateful to Mr. Calvert, as indeed are all Burlington officials, for the character of his railroad building. To Mrs. Calvert, resident of Lincoln, he recently wrote:

³¹⁷. This information taken from an account of the death of Clement Abbott Hardy as it appeared in the Lincoln State Journal issue of 19 Apr. 1934.

"It is a long time since Mr. Calvert left us, but the influence of his superior ability in connection with the building and improving of the Burlington continues to be felt, and realization of his efforts continues. You know of the recent outstanding performance of the Zephyr from Denver to Chicago—the possibility of which was entirely due to his keen foresight and desire to build to a high standard. Light curvature and low grades made possible the high speeds attained with perfect safety. More recently—July 30 and 31, we made a test run with the Zephyr between Chicago and Minneapolis, which was an even greater event, because it was made under normal operating conditions—subject to delays such as occur in all train movements, and here again were we to realize on his planning—particularly between Savanna and St. Paul. I well remember his development of plans for realignment, curve reduction, and double tracking of that line—how he argued for and finally secured the approval of the officials of the road to his ambitious plans for a line that could be operated at high speeds with safety and comfort. In those days sixty miles per hour was considered high speed. It probably never occurred to him that 100 miles per hour would be reached—yet in a few short years this speed has been made—and a regular service with speeds of eighty and ninety miles per hour contemplated in the schedule. It is wonderful, and to him must much credit be given. I am writing this to you because I know you will be glad to know that his services to the company are still bearing fruit."

"Mr. Calvert died in 1916."

CORA BELLE graduated from the Lincoln High School in 1877. She then attended the University of Nebraska for three years. She studied music in Rochester, N. Y., for one year. She then took up teaching, securing a position in the Lincoln public schools. Later she became principal of the Bryant and McKinley schools of that city.

She was the first president of the Young Women's Christian Association when it was organized in Lincoln. She represented Nebraska on the Y. W. C. A. Council of One Hundred at the close of the World War. She is one of Lincoln's most prominent citizens and is identified with many civic and social organizations of that city. She is a member of the First Congregational Church. She is a member of the Nebraska Chapter of Colonial Dames, Daughters of Patriots and Founders, Fortnightly Club, Lotus Club, Patriarchs, Lincoln Country Club, University Club, L. A. Kensington, Nebraska Art Association. She is the Third Vice-President of the Hardy Family Association of America.

- 2174 iv. WILLIAM EDWIN⁸, b. at Gainesville, 5 Aug. 1863; d. 24 Sept. 1934; m. at Lincoln, 9 Jan. 1895, GERTRUDE LAWRENCE LAWS, daughter of a prominent Lincoln attorney and former

United States Congressman from the "big fifth" district. She was born in 1871. WILLIAM EDWIN was b. on his father's Gainesville farm, but went West with the family, and grew up at Lincoln, Neb., where he graduated from the Lincoln High School in 1880. Then he went to Rochester, N. Y., where he attended the Rochester Business Institute, and graduated in 1883. He was a student at the University of Nebraska from 1883 to 1885. In 1924 he was given an honorary M.A. degree by the University. Chancellor Samuel Avery conferred it upon him for his distinguished services to his city, state, and the nation.

MR. HARDY was President of the Hardy Furniture Company, a firm founded in 1871 by his father, HARVEY WESLEY HARDY. It was one of the pioneer establishments of the city. He was a member of the original Nebraska State Capitol Commission appointed in 1919 by Governor McKelvie and considered it his greatest work, for out of his untiring, unselfish, and devoted services came into being probably the finest capitol building in America, especially from an architectural point of view. He was one of Lincoln's greatest citizens and when he d. suddenly, in 1934, the entire community was shocked, and the press was full of praise of and tribute to his splendid career. Governor Bryan voiced the sentiments of the people of Nebraska in a special statement as follows:

"Mr. Hardy's death is a great loss to the state of Nebraska and was a great personal shock to me. He was one of the state's outstanding substantial men and had devoted much of his time to the interests of the public in promoting its welfare. The most notable service of this kind was given as a member of the capitol commission during the past 15 years.

"His particular training and experience, together with his wide travel, made his contributions invaluable in the conception, designing and construction of the new capitol. It was no doubt a great satisfaction to himself that he lived to see the fine monument to his efforts finished and in use before his own life work ended."

The Lincoln Star, in announcing MR. HARDY's death on the day he died gave the following account of his life:

"Mr. Hardy, who was known to thousands of Lincoln people as 'Will' and who was one of the vitalizing forces in building the city of Lincoln, was born 5 Aug. 1863, at Gainesville, Wyoming County, New York. His father was Harvey Wesley Hardy, and his mother Charlotte Clement Abbott, both of Colonial ancestry. He was therefore a direct descendant of Thomas Hardy who came to Massachusetts in 1630 from England and George Abbott who was one of the founders of Andover, Mass.

"In 1868 Mr. Hardy's father moved the family to Aurora, Ill., and three years later they came to Lincoln as one of the pioneer families. His father immediately founded the Hardy Furniture Co. In 1880, Mr. Hardy graduated from Lincoln High School and then attended Rochester Business Institute at Rochester, N. Y., until 1883, when he entered the University of Nebraska until 1885. In 1924 he was given an honorary M.A. degree from the university which was conferred by Chancellor Samuel Avery.

"On May 3, 1887, when the Lincoln Board of Trade, the parent organization of the succeeding commercial club, was organized, Mr. Hardy became a charter member. Later the Lincoln Commercial Club superseded the Board of Trade and Mr. Hardy was an active member. In 1903 he became a member of the board of directors and in 1907 and 1908 was president.

"'He always took a deep interest in getting quarters for the club', Walter Whitten, secretary of the chamber of commerce said. 'He took a leading part in getting the present building built. He was the father of the life membership idea which was started in 1914. Our building was built from 1911 to 1914 and a number of business men had taken blocks of stock for $250. Mr. Hardy induced 160 of them to surrender the stock for a life membership and reduced the indebtedness by $40,000 as well as starting the life subscriptions.'

"It also was Will Hardy, as a member of the 'City Fathers', or Board of Aldermen, from 1908 to 1910, who induced the Board to hold meetings on Monday afternoons, bringing the sessions out into the open, a custom which has since been followed.

"But Mr. Hardy's many governmental and organization activities were not his only ones. He found time to take a vital interest and a leading part in various civic activities and organizations. He was Chairman of the Liberty Loan Drive in 1917; Chairman of the Nebraska Prison Reform Association from 1891 to 1897; Chairman of the Lincoln District of the American Red Cross in 1917-22; member of the Nebraska State Historical Society, and President in 1926-27; Chairman of the Community Chest in 1924; President of the Crete Chautauqua Association, 1893-96; Treasurer of the Nebraska Art Association, 1905-15; Director of the Social Welfare Society.

"In the financial world Mr. Hardy was well known as a member of the board of directors of the Omaha branch of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank and the Lincoln Trust Co. He also was President of the M. H. Tilton Furniture Co. of Lincoln.

"At the University of Nebraska he was a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity and an active member of the University Alumni Association and the English Speaking Union. He also belonged to the University Club, the Lincoln Round Table, Candlelight, Hiram, Automobile and Country Clubs. He was a member of the Unitarian Church, the Native American Unitarian Society and the Unitarian Laymen's League. He was a Thirty-second Degree Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Sesostris Temple of the Shrine."

Tribute to MR. HARDY was paid in many ways, following his death, including special resolutions and editorial comments about his great career. One newspaper, in particular, perhaps summed up in a fitting manner the outstanding features of his life as follows:

"Mr. Hardy was extremely public-minded. No deserving undertaking lacked his encouragement and his financial support. He was a man of deep and strong conviction, of fine courage and he never hesitated to accept the challenge of an issue, when he thought public welfare and public good were at stake.

"He was widely-traveled and widely-read. He possessed a scholarly mind. He was a man of unusual cultural tastes.

"Perhaps more than any other member serving on the Capitol Commission, Mr. Hardy deserves much of the credit for the beautiful building. He lived it during the last twelve years. He spared himself neither expense nor strength in devoting his talents to a job for which he did not receive a single cent of compensation. He watched it through all the stages of construction and as it neared completion his pride in it grew. One of the very tragic circumstances of his very active, his rich and his full life is the fact that he did not live to see the building dedicated formally, as it will be within a few weeks or a few months. It was so much of him, and he was so much of it, that a dedication cannot be quite complete without his presence.

"Mr. Hardy had a wholesome outlook on life. He was a valued friend, a charming and inspiring companion, and a splendid citizen. His death is a heavy loss both to the city and the state."³¹⁸

He married, second, JENNIE N. HARRIS, 9 Dec. 1903, of Moscow, Idaho.

³¹⁸. This information taken from the Lincoln State Journal, Thursday, 19 Apr. 1934.

Louis Bernard Hardy was educated in the public schools of Ypsilanti, until at the mature age of 16 he concluded to go west—just a pilgrimage, not a crusade, and so he went alone—following the advice of Greeley, “Go west, young man, go west!” After nearly four years he returned to Michigan, and a few months later his mother died and the home was broken up. He entered the State Normal School at Ypsilanti. After about nine months he went west again to take a sister who was far from well. At that time he undertook the pastorate of a Baptist Church, and continued holding pastorates with this denomination in Minnesota, North Dakota, Idaho and Montana. While he was in Dakota he found a way to take work in the Colgate Theological Seminary as a special student for a year, returning to Dakota for further work. In 1889 he began pastoral work in Minnesota and three years later went back to Dakota. In 1901 he went into Idaho, and in 1904 back to Montana, where he served the Baptist Church in Livingston, Montana, until 1910, when his health failed. It became necessary for him to find a lower altitude and outdoor work; thus he went to a farm in a pioneer region in Western Dakota, where he organized several churches. At this time he became a Congregationalist.

While Mr. Hardy was in Dakota he held several town and county offices; was U. S. Commissioner for the District of North Dakota for about 7 years.

In 1921 he returned to Michigan, where he held two pastorates, one for two and a half years, and his present pastorate at Frankfort, Mich., at the First Congregational Church, where he is in his eleventh year.

His article entitled “The Tree Tells Its Own Story” was published in the Adult Magazine of the Congregational Publishing Society of Boston.

During the World War he served as President of the Red Cross for the county of Mercer, N. Dak.

He is a Mason, Woodman and an Odd Fellow.

1479. MANLY⁸ HARDY (*Jonathan Titcomb*⁷, *Solomon*⁶, *Eliphalet*⁵, *Eliphalet*⁴, *Daniel*³, *Thomas*², *Thomas*¹), born at Hampden, Me., 8 Nov. 1832; died 9 Dec. 1910; married EMELINE FREEMAN WHEELER in 1862.

Manly Hardy was one of America's greatest naturalists, and for this reason the article concerning him and his life as it appeared in Forest and Stream, 17 Dec. 1910, is reproduced here in full as follows:

Manly Hardy, the eminent field naturalist of Brewer, Me., died on Friday, Dec. 9 (1910) at his home. He was the only son of Jonathan T. Hardy and was born in Hampden, Me., 11 Nov. 1832, but lived most of his life in Brewer.

As a lad and young man he was small and rather frail, suffering much from illness and from injuries received in the woods. In a letter written not long ago to Charles Hallock he said:

"Between wounds and various sicknesses I have had a few days really free from pain, but have always kept in the open air when I could move, and enjoyed life better than many well people."

In early life, while studying for the ministry, intending to take up mission work in Africa, he injured his eyes so that for many years he could not read at all. He was thus obliged to give up his hoped-for work and at thirty years of age he definitely abandoned these plans, and soon after married. It was the loss of the use of his eyes that developed his extraordinary and unfailing memory, on which he depended as another might rely on his notebook.

In the early part of the Civil War, Colonel J. L. Chamberlin, "the hero of Little Round Top" who was promoted on the field of battle by General Grant himself and appointed to receive Lee's formal surrender at Appomattox, asked Mr. Hardy to take command of a company of sharpshooters. He was most anxious to accept, but he was an only child, his father was dying and he felt that he could not go. Later when drafted he was rejected for physical disability.

In the year 1861 he served for a time with the Maine State Scientific Survey, with which were connected men like Dr. Holmes, Goodale, Packard and Hitchcock.

For the greater part of his life, Mr. Hardy had been an earnest business man, attending with his whole mind to the practical affairs of life, and turning to hunting, trapping and ornithology for relaxation and pleasure. He was a hunter of deer, moose and bear, and was also fond of hunting seals and porpoises from a canoe, a sport which was often dangerous, and always full of excitement. He made a long study of the ruffed grouse, and was one of the first authorities of the country on that bird.

The son of a fur dealer, he was until the last twenty years a buyer of furs, and wonderfully skilled in this occupation. At times when his eyes were useless he seemed to judge furs by his sense of touch, and his estimate formed from this sense seemed quite equal to that of another man who possessed in addition the full use of his eyes. It was his practice to ship his furs direct to London, to C. M. Lampson & Co., for their great auctions, which, with those of the Hudson Bay Co. and the sales at Leipsic, control the fur prices of the world.

Many years ago Mr. Hardy made the acquaintance of Major Bendire, the eminent ornithologist and author of the two volumes of Life Histories of North American Birds. Major Bendire more than once visited Mr. Hardy, and they became close friends. The author consulted him on many points of ornithology, and when his volumes were published, it was found that he had written into them most of what his friend had told him. The friendship which existed between the two continued till Major Bendire's death in 1896.

Mr. Hardy's stern love of truth sometimes led him to correct sharply in print statements which he knew were incorrect, and it was in such critical writings that his name was most often seen. Yet it was not his nature to find fault. On the contrary he was a genial, humorous and wholly friendly man, who would much rather praise than blame, yet who possessed the simple feeling that no one was entitled to especial credit for telling the simple truth.

Mr. Hardy was long devoted to ornithology and gathered together a remarkable collection of 3300 United States birds, all mounted, and most of them by his own hands. So complete is his collection that it lacks less than twenty of those species which had a full number in the old A. O. U. Check List. Most of those lacking are gulls, cormorants and other sea birds. The collection includes every kind of hawk or owl ever taken north of the Mexican line, except the so-called dwarf screech owl—of which only one is known—every kind of duck and goose, eighty-five different kinds of sparrows and a long list of other most interesting birds.

Mr Hardy was a field naturalist of the highest type. His statements commanded the implicit faith of scientific men, who also had great respect for his opinions. He was a careful, thorough observer, with an immense practical experience in the woods of Maine. This experience was held in his extraordinary memory, which was confirmed by journals which he kept. He possessed an unequaled fund of woods lore for his own locality. A volume of his experiences and observations would constitute a very complete natural history of the birds and mammals of Maine, besides containing an enormous fund of woods experience extending over more than half a century.

No large group of men will regret Mr. Hardy's loss so much as the readers of Forest and Stream, some of whom have kept in touch with him by his writings and otherwise for nearly forty years. His last extended contribution was printed in the spring of 1910 and was entitled "A Fall Fur Hunt in Maine." Only a few days ago we received from him a letter with two pictures of odd deer heads, and at the time of his death he had just finished a long promised article on the otter.

His death came after an illness of only thirty hours. He fully expected the end, and had made all preparations for it, and at the last he passed away without suffering.

Mr. Hardy was of the old-time steadfast New England stock, and possessed ability and earnestness such as few men have. By nature he was shy and retiring and not at all disposed to appear in print, except where he felt that he must correct some error. It was only the knowledge that he was giving information to others that led him to contribute as freely as he did articles and letters to Forest and Stream. It is hard to think of an outdoor man who will be so missed and mourned."

Manly Hardy was a Congregationalist by religion.

Children, all born at Brewer, Me.:

- 2191 i. FANNIE PEARSON⁹, b. 18 June 1865; m. 1893, at Portland, Ore., REV. JACOB ANDERSON ECKSTORM, who d. in 1900.

MRS. FANNIE PEARSON HARDY ECKSTORM is one of America's most prominent writers. Her name is listed in Who's Who in America, and is very familiar among the guides in Maine's woods today. The Boston Sunday Post in its issue of 25 Jan. 1932 has the following to say concerning her:

"Fifty-five years ago a little girl of 11 sat on the Brewer banks of the Penobscot and thrilled her childish fancy, not only with the great spectacle on the river which, at that time, made Bangor, on the opposite shore, the greatest and most thriving lumber port in the world, for intermingled in that childish mind were stories of 300 years of unbroken relations between her family and the Indians. From that time on the girl made notes for future use in writing.

"Today the little girl, now Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm of Brewer, is the author of one of the few real American classics. She has perpetuated for history the logger and the river-drivers of the old west branch drive in the Penobscot Man. In the True American Type Series, we find her David Libbey, Penobscot Woodsmen and River-Driver. The name Fannie Hardy Eckstorm is familiar among the guides in Maine's woods today, and will live for generations, because her stories are of and from the men she knew.

"For more than half a century she has been collecting chanteys and ballads of the oldest woods songs. In fact, Mrs. Eckstorm has said every man was his own poet in her Maine. She has canoed across many Maine rivers and lakes, and along the coast has visited many islands in her quest for songs and ballads of the woods and the coast. In collaboration with Mary Winslow Smith, she has given these to her Minstrelsy in Maine, and she also collaborated with Miss Smyth and Phillips Barry in writing British Ballads from Maine. 'On Many of the islands that we visited', Mrs. Eckstorm said to her interviewer, 'these songs were still being sung. These folk songs of our pioneers were too precious to be lost', she added.

"Mrs. Eckstorm is truly a lover of Maine, but is undoubtedly more known for her classic works away from home. She was first praised editorially by Bliss Carman 27 years ago, then editor of the Literary World, who called The Penobscot Man a valuable 'human document', and one for preservation. When Professor Bliss Perry of Harvard came to Bangor in 1916 to lecture on Immortal Types in American Fiction, it was he who pointed with pride to the works of Mrs. Eckstorm and said that her characters lived.

"She is also a world-wide recognized authority on Indians, first maps and surveys of Maine, and birds. Dr. George Bird Grinnell, Indian expert, knows of her authority on Indians, and also of her learning the language. She has published two bird books which are standard authorities, and in Sprague's Journal of Maine History, we find years of faithful work in her History of the Chadwick Survey which is of unusual interest to readers, students and teachers in Maine and historians. Although she does not like to assume the responsibilities of authority, she has assumed that position because of her scientific desire for the truth, and yet very few are aware that she is consulted by the United States government for the correct Indian names on the latest topographical survey maps of Maine.

"In her home, on the subjects which she devotes years of work to write, Mrs. Eckstorm has photostat copies of original works. They come from the archives of London, and from the country's leading universities.

"Mrs. Eckstorm received her literary training at Smith College where she was graduated in three years. After leaving college, she wrote extensively for Forest and Stream, and received early world-wide recognition by her writing on the game laws. Later her articles appeared exclusively in the Atlantic Monthly. She is the daughter of the late Manly Hardy, the well-known naturalist, and the wife of the late Jacob A. Eckstorm, a minister of Norwegian blood. There were more Indians in Brewer than Whites when Manly Hardy's family came there from New Hampshire in 1815. Manly Hardy followed his father's footsteps and dealt in furs, skins, canoes, snowshoes, and the Hardys were friendly and hospitable to the Indians, some of whom called for dinner. The trappers, Indians, and such men as Deacon George Thatcher, Professor Samuel Harris of Yale, Professor John S. Sewall and Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, who visited her father, all contributed to her background."³¹⁹

The New York Times, in one of its book reviews, said the following concerning FANNIE HARDY ECKSTORM's book, The Penobscot Man (Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.):

"Novel, entertaining, significant, and generally worth while. Considered merely as a revelation of human nature, one of the stories is among the best ever written by anybody, and several of the others are not far behind."

Similarly the New York Evening Sun paid its compliments to the author of The Penobscot Man as follows:

"These stories are so virile and graphic, so tense and terse, so powerfully unsentimental and yet so compelling that one turns to the title page again to make sure that the author is a woman."³²⁰

319. The information concerning Manly 1479 Hardy and his children furnished by his daughter, Miss Charlotte Wheeler Hardy, of 159 Wilson St., Brewer, Me.

320. See leaflet, The Penobscot Man, published in 1904 by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston and New York.

Other leading newspapers, as well as known magazines, such as the New York Mail, the Brooklyn Eagle, the Philadelphia Ledger, the Milwaukee Free Press, Chicago Tribune, Public Opinion, Chicago Inter-Ocean, and Bangor Commercial, praised Mrs. Eckstorm's book, The Penobscot Man, and recognized her production as outstanding.

FANNIE HARDY ECKSTORM graduated from Smith College in the class of 1888. She became Superintendent of the Brewer Public Schools in 1889 and continued in that office until 1892. As already stated, she married in 1893, the REV. JACOB ANDERSON ECKSTORM of Chicago, Ill. After his death in 1900, she returned to her birthplace, Brewer, Me., where she has written several books, including the following: The Bird Book, Woodpeckers, Penobscot Man, David Libbey, Minstrelsy of Maine, British Ballads, Handicrafts of the Modern Indians of Maine. Besides being an eminent authority on natural history, Indians and folk songs, she is in great demand as a lecturer. Children:

He was a naturalist like his father before him, and his sister FANNIE PEARSON HARDY, referred to above, an expert orchardist, a writer of verse, and, more especially, an eminent artist whose works of art are now appreciated even more than when he was living. The following account of his death appeared in a local newspaper:

"The death of Walter Manly Hardy, distinguished as an artist and widely known as one of the most successful orchardists in Maine, occurred at his home in Holden, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hardy had been ill but only a week and appeared to be making progress toward recovery so that the announcement of his passing came as a shock to his many friends. The time of the funeral service will be announced.

"Mr. Hardy leaves his wife, Blanche Edmunds Hardy, four sisters, Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm of Brewer, Mrs. John K. Bates of Portsmouth, N. H., Mrs. C. A. Eckstorm of Chicago, and Miss Charlotte Wheeler Hardy of Brewer; two nieces, Miss Frances Bates and Miss Karen E. Eckstorm, and a nephew, Paul F. Eckstorm.

"Walter Manly Hardy was the only son of the late Manly and Emma Wheeler Hardy, and was born in Brewer, 9 Feb. 1877. He was educated in the Brewer schools and Bangor High School from which he graduated in the class of 1896. He entered the University of Maine where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity, but upon deciding to study art he spent several years at the Students' Art League in New York where his work attracted immediate attention. While at the league, he was frequently selected by his associates for prominent positions in the league's government.

"From the Students' Art League, Mr. Hardy went to Paris where he was in the studio of the famous Lezarre. Following the completion of his work in Paris he spent some time in England and Italy. Upon his return his pictures were accorded hangings in numerous exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Mr. Hardy's versatility was emphasized by his literary work which appeared in various publications including the Atlantic Monthly.

"From his father, the late Manly Hardy, Mr. Hardy received the inspiration and training which made him a naturalist of uncommon ability. He knew nature in many phases and was particularly versed in matters pertaining to the fish and game of the Maine woods. He was an enthusiastic angler and was considered an authority on the fish and fishing waters in this section of the state.

"To many calls for information and advice on subjects on which he was recognized as an authority, Mr. Hardy was always willing to contribute from his fund of knowledge. He served on numerous committees which relied upon him for artistic judgment, notably in the case of the Hannibal Hamlin statue and the Pierce Memorial in Harlow Street. He was a charter member of the Bangor Art Society, and for a long time its president. He took an active interest in all its classes and other activities, and the organization's success is due in large measure to his fine direction.

"His love of scenery and the country prompted him to buy in 1911 his home in Holden with its picturesque setting and he took delight in the restoration of the property and the planting of an orchard which has become widely known because of the high quality of its apples. Mr. Hardy gave much time and study to modern orcharding methods and had won a high place among the orchardists of New England."³²¹

- 2196 vi. CHARLOTTE WHEELER (twin)⁹, b. 9 Feb. 1877; attended the Bangor High School; graduated from Abbott Academy at Andover, Mass., 1898. Although she has not had the brilliant record of achievement of her famous sister, FANNIE PEARSON, or of her twin brother, WALTER MANLY HARDY, she is one of Brewer's most esteemed residents. In 1868 he entered Chicago Theological Seminary to prepare for the ministry. After one year, he was transferred to the Bangor, Ohio, Seminary, where he graduated in 1871.

1496. JOHN DRURY⁸ HARDY (*Levi*⁷, *Daniel*⁶, *Moses*⁵, *Moses*⁴, *Jacob*³, *Thomas*², *Thomas*¹), born at Wilton, Me., 24 Mar. 1836; died 1 June 1910; married, in 1863, LUCY C. FLETCHER of East Wilton, Me.

The obituary notice as it appeared in the local paper (the Franklin Journal, Farmington, Me.) is reproduced, in part, as follows:

John Drury Hardy was the second son of the late Levi Hardy. He passed his early life on his father's farm near East Wilton, and on coming to mature years learned the scythemaker's trade at East Wilton, and with the exception of the time he passed in the army made that work his business for twenty-five years or more. Most of his time he passed at East Wilton, but at certain periods he was employed in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

In the fall of 1861, in response to a call for more troops, Mr. Hardy with many others from his native town enlisted in the 8th Maine Infantry. Mr. Hardy, who was a natural musician and a good performer on the cornet, was made the leader of the regimental band and served in that capacity till all the regimental bands were abolished by the act of Congress in 1863.

The same year he received his honorable discharge from the army, Mr. Hardy was married to Miss Lucy C. Fletcher of East Wilton, and they made that place their home till the early 80's, when they removed to Farmington and have ever since resided in this village. Mr. Hardy for a number of years kept a hardware store, but for some time past has been the town liquor agent, performing the difficult task of that office to the satisfaction of the town officers and the public also.

Mr. Hardy was a man of right purposes, of pure life and of uncommonly amiable disposition. He was also of a very modest, unostentatious nature, and none but those who lived with him from day to day were aware of his true worth. In a quiet way he was faithful to every trust and willing to give of time, strength or means to any one whom he could aid. He was especially fond of home and nearly all his time, outside of business hours, was passed at home enjoying the companionship of his family, the reading of good literature, in which he found much pleasure, or in the practice of music, which was always a source of great delight. In earlier years he was proficient on the cornet, but a throat trouble contracted in the army compelled him to relinquish that beloved instrument. He was remarkably correct in time and even in later years served as drum major for the G. A. R.

Mr. Hardy was from early manhood a member of the Masonic Order and was for one or more terms master of the Wilton Lodge. He was thoroughly read in the ritual. He could till his death recite verbatim the lectures, and took great interest in instructing young Masons in the work of the Blue Lodge. . . . There remains the remembrance of an affectionate and faithful husband, father, brother, friend.³²³

1499. AUDUBON LEVI⁸ HARDY (*Levi*⁷, *Daniel*⁶, *Moses*⁵, *Moses*⁴, *Jacob*³, *Thomas*², *Thomas*¹), born at Wilton, Me., 11 Dec. 1852; married, 15 Jan. 1885, GERTRUDE M. ALLIS of Brookfield, Vt.

The Hardy Family of America has produced many professional leaders, clergymen, lawyers and educators especially. Among the prominent educators of the nation is Audubon L. Hardy, the subject of this sketch. Even at his advanced age of eighty-three, he is referred to by his associates in the profession as the "Dean" of present day education. From a small, one-room district school in the State of Maine, he advanced in his chosen profession until he became one of the best-known school superintendents of the country. Theory and practice in public education have gone hand in hand with him. He has known all phases of education at its best and at its worst, for education has been his life. As a matter of fact, until his retirement from active duty in 1915 he was "at school" continuously for about sixty years.

Mr. Hardy attended, first, the district school near where he was born. Later he attended Wilton Academy and the Waterville, Me., Classical Institute, from which he graduated in 1875. He then taught several terms of school in rural areas, thus earning enough money to start college at Amherst, Mass. It was necessary for him to finance his own education, and even while in college, he did some teaching. He graduated from Amherst in 1879. Three years later, in recognition of his ability as a young educator, his Alma Mater conferred upon him the honorary degree of A.M.

From 1879 to 1883 he was Principal of the Randolph, Vt., High School. He Was Vice-Principal of the St. Johnsbury, Vt., Academy from 1883 to 1898, when he was called to Amherst, Mass., to become superintendent of the public schools. He held this position until his retirement in 1915. He resides at 15 Lincoln Ave., Amherst, Mass., and is today one of that city's best known and most loved and respected citizens.

One of Mr. Hardy's proudest recollections is the fact that he has had a part in the training of certain young men who later were to achieve distinction, among them the late Calvin Coolidge, who was a protege of his at St. Johnsbury Academy.

Mr. Hardy met and married his wife at Randolph, Vt., where he was Principal of the local high school. She was one of his teachers. On 15 Jan. 1935, Mr. and Mrs. Hardy observed their golden wedding anniversary, and their fellow townspeople honored them with a reception in the auditorium of the Amherst High School. Several hundred people came to do honor to this charming couple. The local newspaper, the Amherst Record, gave considerable space to the event, and certain excerpts taken from that publication are reproduced as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy came to Amherst in 1898, thirteen years after their marriage on 15 Jan. 1885. From the first they took an active part in church and civic affairs and their home has always been distinguished for its hospitality. During these thirty-seven years they have made a host of warm friends here and they have four sons, graduates of Amherst High School and Amherst College. . . .

Mr. Hardy is a member of the First Congregational Church, of which he was for some years a deacon, a member of the Amherst Club, and of Pacific Lodge of Masons. For a number of years he has served as chairman of the Inspectors of Election of Amherst College Trustees, and at one time was manager of the Union Lecture Course here. He has held the office of president of the Hampshire County Teachers' Association. He is president of the Board of Trustees of Amherst Academy, auditor of the Amherst Historical Society, and a director of the East Hampshire branch of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Mrs. Hardy was Miss Gertrude Allis of Brookfield, Vt., before her marriage. She has been active for many years in the social life of Amherst and in church and women's club work, serving from 1904 to 1906 as president of the Amherst Woman's Club, and holding a number of executive positions in the work of the First Congregational Church of which she is a member. . . .

Fine people, these Hardys, and still going strong. Good old New England stock, with fine, old-fashioned ideals and a wholesome outlook on life. We need such in our community. . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy have received about 300 letters and telegrams coming from Maine to California.

A beautiful poem, written for the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary and printed in the weekly calendar of the First Congregational Church of Amherst, is also reproduced here. It was written by a friend of many years, Judge Wendell Phillips Stafford of Washington, D. C., and is as follows:

"JANUARY 15, 1935"

"Dear Friends, your feet will pass today
The golden milestone on your way.
The road runs on—you cannot stay.
But let it climb or dip or bend,
A sun is shining that will lend
Its cheerful radiance to the end.
For in the vale or on the height,
At evening glow or morning light,
'Tis love that makes the roadway bright."

After his marriage he went to Evart, Mich., and homesteaded in the virgin timber lands. The hand labor broke his health, and he moved to Parsons, Kan., in 1880. In 1884, because of another breakdown in health, he moved to Colorado, where he lived most of the time until his death in Seattle, Wash., while living with his daughter Grace.

He was educated in the Michigan schools, took an active part in civic, religious and fraternal affairs. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church and taught a Sunday School class. His wife attended Adrian College, and was a school teacher prior to their marriage.

1673. DAVID NELSON⁸ HARDY (Laurin M.⁷, Israel⁶, Moody⁵, Reuben⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Barton (Spencer), N. Y., 3 Apr. 1845; died at New Milford, Pa., 14 Nov. 1922; married at Clifford, Pa., 13 Dec. 1865, ELIZABETH POTTER of Jackson, Pa., daughter of RALPH and SUSAN (SCHOONOVER) POTTER. She was born 19 Jan. 1846 at Jackson, and died 9 Feb. 1927.

David Nelson Hardy moved with his parents from New York State into Pennsylvania when a small boy, and grew up at Glenwood, Pa., where he improved every opportunity to secure a good education. He prepared under a special tutor to enter Amherst College, but was unable to attend college due to limited means. However, he made the most of his time, as will be seen later, and ranked among the leading citizens of Susquehanna County. He lived a rich, full and strenuous life, and received many honors during his lifetime. Below are given excerpts from the public press, which gave considerable space in tribute to Mr. Hardy at the time of his death. These excerpts will speak for themselves.

The following account of the death of David Nelson Hardy is taken from the Independent Republican, published at Montrose, Pa.:

EMINENT COUNTY MAN CALLED
D. N. Hardy Dies at New Milford Home

Was a Veteran of the Civil War, a Staunch Republican and Prominent Granger. Five Sons, Three Daughters, Twenty-three Grandchildren and Nine Great-grandchildren Survive.

The death of Comrade David N. Hardy, one of the best known and most highly respected men in Susquehanna County, occurred at his home on Main Street, New Milford, on Tuesday evening, 14 Nov. at 7:30 o'clock. Suffering from heart trouble, Mr. Hardy was confined to his bed for the past three weeks. About a week ago he was seized with an attack of pneumonia, from which he did not rally.

Mr. Hardy was 77 years of age. He was born at Barton, Tioga County, N. Y., 3 Apr. 1845. On 12 Feb. 1862, when only seventeen years old, he entered the nation's service, being discharged after one year on account of physical disability which arose from wounds received during the Battle of Antietam. He also saw service at Cedar or "Slaughter" Mountain, Fort Royal and the Second Battle of Bull Run. He was a member of Co. A, 107th P. V.

Deceased spent most of his life on a farm at Glenwood, moving to New Milford in 1907, where he has since resided. In politics he was a staunch Republican and identified with every important party movement in the county, serving one term as jury commissioner. He was also prominent in Grange affairs, having been a deputy of this order for over ten years and a Master of Pomona Grange. He was a member and Past Commander of Capt. Lyons Post, G. A. R., of Glenwood.

Mr. Hardy was a close friend of Hon. Galusha A. Grow, who was speaker of the House of Representatives when Mr. Hardy was wounded at Antietam. Mr. Grow knew that his friend was in this battle, and, becoming alarmed as to his safety, made a personal search and found him in an unconscious condition, in which state, though removed to a hospital, he remained for several days. Mr. Hardy always felt that he owed his life to Mr. Grow. Following his discharge from the service, he was closely associated with the Grow family for many years.

The following newspaper account of the funeral services of David Nelson Hardy appeared in the Montrose Democrat, published at Montrose, Pa.:

EULOGIES AT FUNERAL OF CIVIL WAR VETERAN

David N. Hardy, One of County's Widely Known Citizens, Passes Away at New Milford Home.

The funeral of David Nelson Hardy, at New Milford, 17 Nov. 1922, brought hundreds from far and near and is said to have been the largest ever held in that village. It is estimated that close to a thousand people joined in paying last respects to one of Susquehanna County's most highly respected citizens. Two services were held in his honor, one at twelve o'clock in the M. E. church at New Milford, of which the deceased was an active member and trustee, and the second in the Tower church at West Lenox, with Lenox Grange, No. 931, in charge, at three o'clock.

Mr. Hardy was as widely known, perhaps, throughout the county as any man since Hon. Galusha A. Grow, having lived practically all his life within the county. He was a familiar figure at all public gatherings and will be greatly missed, especially in New Milford, where he was known as everybody's friend. He had often been referred to affectionately as New Milford's "Grand Old Man."

Fitting tribute was paid to Mr. Hardy's memory at both services. Rev. I. L. Snyder, his pastor, was in charge of the obsequies at New Milford, assisted by Rev. L. E. Sanford of Endicott, N. Y., and Rev. H. W. Thomas of Susquehanna, former pastors and friends of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoppe of Glenwood directed the Grange service at West Lenox.

Survivors of the Civil War were present from Montrose, New Milford, Nicholson, Kingsley, Hop Bottom and Lenox. The G. A. R. exercises at New Milford were in charge of F. I. Lott, Esq., of Montrose. Scripture was read by Rev. L. E. Sanford and prayer was made by Rev. H. W. Thomas. Rev. I. L. Snyder gave a most appropriate eulogy explaining that it would be impossible to do justice to the memory of such a great and good man. Mr. Snyder spoke in part as follows:

"What Shakespeare said of the English Cardinal, the friends may now say of David Nelson Hardy: '. . . . An old man, broken with the storms of many years, has come to the end, having given his honors to the world again, his blessed part to heaven, and now he sleeps in peace.'

"His long life of 77 years and seven months covered the most spectacular and inspiring period of our enthusiastic, progressive American Republic. He was a true son of American eagerness. In his youth he was a lover of books and study. His desire to know (as he called it) was not abated by his harrowing experiences in the Civil War, for after his discharge because of injury, he prepared for college. Yet, though he was not privileged to go to college, his 'desire to know' made him a student of men and affairs in things that made for freedom and righteousness. He used to say: 'I'm interested in good government because that is essential to freedom, and I fought for freedom and the Union.'

"The frankness and enthusiasm in his advanced years were but reflections of the patriotic ardor of youth, when in 1862 he secretly in the cold, wintry blasts of February removed his clothing and swam across the Tunkhannock Creek which was high and turbulent from a winter freshet, to go to Benton, Pa., where he enlisted as a private in Co. A, 107th Pennsylvania Volunteers. He served from 12 Feb. 1862 to 12 Feb. 1863, when he was honorably discharged because of disability resulting from injuries received in battle. His first engagement was at Cedar Mountain, often referred to as 'Slaughter' Mountain. He was at Rapidann Ford, Bristol Station, and in various daily engagements which occurred while in retreat through Manassus. He also participated in a separate battle at Fort Royal. He was in the second battle of Bull Run, South Mountain and Antietam. He was wounded 17 Sept. 1862, and was in the hospital at Washington from 17 Sept. 1862 to 1 Mar. 1863. His intimate comrades in the service were Russell Phillips, A. A. Collins, Jerauld Conrad, Ira Hardy (his brother), E. W. Pierce and James Kennedy. Mr. Hardy was the last of this group to survive. He was Past Commander of Capt. Lyons Post, No. 85, G. A. R.

"He was identified with public life and in politics he was a Republican; not a bigot, but, as he was accustomed to say with generous good feelings natural to him, 'Because I fought that way.'

"He was a prominent Granger and active in the State Grange, having been elected as delegate to that body and was Deputy of the county for many years, and Master of Pomona. He was honored by his fellow citizens and served as Jury Commissioner for one term.

"Four things a man must learn to do
 If he would make his record true;
 To think without confusion clearly;
 To love his fellow men sincerely;
 To act from honest motives purely;
 To trust in God and Heaven securely.'

—The Thinker.

"In these lines of Henry Van Dyke we have an analysis of the character and faith of David Nelson Hardy. The ability to think is essential to independence of action. An outstanding characteristic of Mr. Hardy was his freedom from bigotry. He was always loyal to those to whom loyalty is due. This made his life an inspiration to those who knew him. He had a warm love and deep consideration for others; he never wanted to do or say that which would hurt others, though he might suffer deeply himself. A Latin poet declared long ago: 'I am a man and therefore nothing human is foreign to me.' An English poet said: 'The proper study of man is man.' The Apostle Peter declared, 'Of a truth, I perceive God is no respecter of persons.' Jesus said, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' All this is a truth that the average man learns slowly, but Mr. Hardy had his word of cheer or welcome or commendation for all alike.

"Mr. Van Dyke said, 'To act from honest motives purely.' We are all familiar with persons whose acts are technically right but whose motives are either mixed or sinister. I am certain that no one would ever think of attributing to him whose memory today we honor and praise anything other than the highest and best motives in all his private and public life. We cannot compute the value of the community life of the man who thus lives open, true, free and clean."

"Yes, Mr. Hardy was also a man of faith. His was a buoyant, hearty faith; he loved God and trusted Him. His implicit faith was invigorating; he often said: 'I love to be with God's people.' His life and joy in spiritual things made us believe him; he used to say: 'I enjoy the Christian religion.' He prayed as a friend would talk to God. His was not an effeminate profession of Christianity, but an active, robust exhibition and experience.

"As a father and husband, his loved ones will never cease to speak of him affectionately. As a citizen and neighbor, to know him was to esteem him highly. As a patriot and comrade, his love for the 'boys in blue' was like that of David for Jonathan. As a church man his church was the body of his Lord, and his Lord was his life. He was always a friend to his pastor and an advisor and helper of the officials. He was always a Methodist, an active official for years. The more one became acquainted with Mr. Hardy, the more clearly he would feel that the greatest possession of this world is Christian manhood. This is the greatest inheritance to bequeath to loved ones left lonesome. But with the hope of Israel's David, he cannot come back to us, but we may go to him.

"Mr. Hardy has entered upon two immortalities; the one, the undying one in the presence of his Saviour, triumphant over death and mortality; the other, to live on in the lives of those whom he leaves here to carry on what he would have them achieve.

"You have seen a great pine tree standing on some lofty eminence, silhouetted against the sky. Storms may break down the saplings and they are not missed in the distance, but when the great pine fell the whole landscape was altered. David Nelson Hardy was the great pine."

"Call him not dead when he, indeed, hath gone
Into the company of the everliving.
High and most glorious saints! Let thanksgiving
Rather be made. Say, 'He at last hath won
Rest and release, converse supreme and wise,
Music and song and light of immortal faces;
Today, perhaps, wandering in starry places,
And, listening still,
To enchanted hymns that sound from the heavenly hill."

“O, who can tell the rapture
Of those to whom 'tis given
Thus to renew the bonds of earth
Amid the bliss of Heaven.’ ”³⁵¹

Mr. Hardy's wife, who descended from an old New England family, was a great-granddaughter of Captain Joseph Potter of the Revolutionary War, who was born at Pittsfield, Mass., and later lived at Ballston Spa, N. Y. Below is given a portion of the press notice of her death as it appeared in the Independent Republican of Montrose, Pa., under date of 17 Feb. 1927:

Mrs. Hannah E. Hardy, widow of the late David N. Hardy, died at New Milford, Pa., on Wednesday, 9 Feb. 1927, in her eighty-second year, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Gardner. Mrs. Hardy had been in failing health since the death of her esteemed husband four years ago the 14th of last November, and the end came peacefully. The deceased was a native and life-long resident of Susquehanna County and was intensely loved and highly respected by all who knew her. It will be remembered that her husband, David Hardy, was one of the county's ablest and best known citizens, being known as "New Milford's Grand Old Man." Mrs. Hardy by virtue of her excellent qualities of womanhood and untiring efforts to minister to the comforts and joys of others, was a great and constant help to and a big factor in the success and popularity of her distinguished husband. She always accompanied Mr. Hardy whenever he was called to various parts of the county on speaking engagements or in the performance of his official duties as Grange inspector. She was an ideal helpmate and companion.

Mrs. Hardy's maiden name was Hannah Elizabeth Potter, being born at Jackson, 19 January 1846. She attended the Jackson district school and made great proficiency in her studies, being the champion district speller of her day. As a young woman in her teens she became identified with the Grow family in Glenwood, Pa., and while employed there met and married Mr. Hardy at the close of the Civil War. She possessed a rare, natural and sweet soprano voice which she used frequently to the delight and pleasure of all who heard her at singing school, in church choir and in other community activities. She was a woman of unimpeachable Christian character; no kinder, no more unselfish or self-sacrificing woman ever lived. There was never a moment in her active life when she was not thinking and doing for others. Because of her outstanding Christian character she naturally won and maintained the respect and love of all who came in contact with her. All who knew her were abiding friends and testify to the beauty and strength of her character. She was a perfect woman, nobly planned, to warm, to comfort and command. She was a member of Lenox Grange, No. 831.

Along with these characteristics, he had a wealth of sympathy, a big heart and genial disposition. He had a large and remunerative practice.

For months before his death Dr. Hardy was a great sufferer, but the Hardy sense of humor was irrepressible, and the Hardy courage and good cheer never deserted him. David Rogers Hardy, who resides on a farm at Burrs Mills, N. Y., just outside of the city of Watertown, N. Y., and who is an authority on the keeping of honey bees and on the making of honey, early showed a desire to get on in the world by going away from home to get an education. He went, first, to the famous Ives Seminary at Antwerp, N. Y., attending from 1877 to 1879, then to Watertown High School for further education.

His first venture for himself was farming. This did not appeal to him as a vocation and he became interested in photography. He went to the city of Watertown and served an apprenticeship for one year. Incidentally, he paid fifty dollars for the privilege of serving an apprenticeship, and worked for nothing. He then went into the photography business for himself, locating at Clayton, N. Y., where he resided for eight years. He returned to Watertown, N. Y., and carried on his own business there for three more years, when he was invited to go to Syracuse, N. Y., and to unite with a firm which produced the famous "Doust Pictures", features of the Syracuse Post-Standard, daily newspaper.

In 1900 he returned to farming, locating in the neighborhood of his birthplace. In 1905 he purchased a small farm at Burrs Mills, N. Y., and at the present time specializes in the production of high grade honey.

Mr. Hardy has always taken an active interest in the civic and religious affairs of his community. For fourteen years he held a clerkship in the New York State Legislature, from 1914 to 1928. He is a staunch Republican in politics, and is one of the best known farmers of Northern New York. He is a ready speaker, a great story teller, a wit and humorist. His repertoire of jokes and stories is famous throughout Jefferson County. He has written many articles for newspapers and other publications. He has also written some very interesting poems.

Y., taking special courses in dairying and the manufacture of cheese and butter. He engaged in the manufacturing of cheese and butter in three counties, Jefferson, Lewis and St. Lawrence, the latter being the leading dairy county in the United States. 1751. WILLIAM AUGUSTUS⁸ HARDY (*Sylvander*⁷, *Noah*⁶, *Noah*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Pepperell, Mass., 12 June 1837; died 4 Jul. 1912 at Fitchburg, Mass.; married, first, 28 June 1860, HARRIET M. ADAMS, who was drowned while bathing at Ipswich Beach, 14 Aug. 1877. She was a favorite in a large circle of friends. He married, second, 30 May 1878, EMMA AUGUSTA SARGENT, born at Boston, Mass., 26 June 1850; died at Fitchburg, Mass., 21 Apr. 1913. She was cultured and refined, a devoted wife and mother, and widely known for her gracious hospitality.

William Augustus Hardy was a self-made man. Fatherless at thirteen years of age, he was early initiated into a life of strenuous endeavor. By close application and alert mentality he made the most of his educational advantages in the local public schools and Meredith Academy, Meredith, N. H. Inheriting from his father unusual mechanical ability, he found congenial employment first in the Navy Yard, Charlestown, Mass., and later at the Stevens Brass Foundry at Fitchburg, of which he soon became a partner and eventually sole owner, now the widely and favorably known William A. Hardy & Sons Company. The business in its national and international character was established by Mr. Hardy about 1865. The foundry has made a specialty of bronze castings and the manufacture of screen plates extensively used in the making of paper. It has also secured a very large railroad patronage in bearing castings for cars and locomotives. Further reference will be made to this enterprise later in connection with the work of his sons who succeeded him in the business.

Mr. Hardy was a member of the last Board of Selectmen of the town of Fitchburg before its incorporation as a city. He was later a member of the Common Council and also of the School Board, and served the city in numerous other social and fraternal affiliations and in welfare work.

He was a veteran of the Civil War, enlisting in Co. D, 5th Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. He was a member of the G. A. R., of the I. O. O. F., I. O. R. M. and of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston.

Mr. Hardy possessed a remarkable sense of humor, and those who knew him intimately will never forget the magic of his story telling and his hearty and contagious laughter. As he accumulated wealth, he quietly and unostentatiously rendered aid to Hardy relatives in need, and also to many in the city meeting with reverses.

He was a great reader, and few in the business world were better informed than he on current events. He was an excellent and always a distinctly fair debater, and keenly enjoyed a discussion. He will be long remembered as a very successful business man, a prominent and popular citizen, a genial, big-hearted man, ever ready to reach out a helping hand to all with whom he was associated.

He was extremely proud of the Hardy name, always loyal to the Clan, and made a very distinct contribution to the honor and the reputation of the Hardy Family.

Charles Kingsley Hardy lost his father when three years of age. Circumstances made necessary many changes during his boyhood. He spent a year at the home of his uncle, Jerry Pratt, then living on the Thorn place in Nelson, N. H. He lived for a while at Temple, Peterboro, N. H., and Fitchburg, Mass., and elsewhere. In the meantime he managed to acquire a fair common school education. He learned his trade as ornamental painter in Keene, N. H., and ere long became widely known throughout New England for the high grade work which he produced. When he had learned his trade and for many years thereafter there was a great demand for artistic decorations on furniture, and especially upon sleighs. His services were in constant demand. With the change in fashion, the special form of ornamental painting in which he excelled became less in demand, and he turned his attention to sign painting and other forms of art decoration.

During the Civil War he enlisted, in his eighteenth year, in Company M, First N. H. Heavy Artillery, Feb., 1865, enlisting from Keene, N. H. Mr. Hardy is the embodiment of the sterling Hardy characteristics, honesty, industry, humor, loyalty to friends and love of home and family.

1754. REV. MILLARD FILMORE⁸ HARDY (*George Granville*⁷, *Noah*⁶, *Noah*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Nelson, N. H., 22 Jul. 1850; married, 13 Oct. 1880, IRENE LAWRENCE HARRINGTON, daughter of ALONZO B. and BETSEY (LAWRENCE) HARRINGTON of Marlboro, N. H. She is admirably fitted educationally, socially and spiritually to be a minister's helpmeet. Dignified, amiable, considerate and tactful, she has won and held the affection and esteem of the people whom they have served. She has been, throughout a long ministry, actively identified with the Sunday School and Young People's work, as well as with the various organizations of the women of the church, and properly shares with her husband the esteem and affection of the people.

Millard Filmore Hardy's father enlisted as a volunteer in the Civil War in 1862 and died a year later. Millard was the oldest son, and next to the oldest child in a family of six children and at the age of fourteen, with the aid and advice of friends, assumed the responsibility of carrying on a moderate sized, well stocked farm, with the planting and harvesting, haying and wood cutting, sugar-making and necessary repairing. This continued until the death of his mother in 1870. Soon thereafter the farm was sold and the home broken up. Meanwhile he had acquired an excellent common school education. Friends secured for him a scholarship, enabling him to pursue his studies at the New Hampshire State College, then located at Hanover, N. H., from which he graduated in 1874.

A member of the church and an active Christian worker, he early heard and heeded the call to the gospel ministry. In preparation for his life work, he entered Hartford Theological Seminary, graduated in 1879, and was ordained to the Congregational ministry at Whately, Mass., 21 Apr. 1880. Since then he has served the following Congregational churches: Whately, Mass., 1879-85; West Boylston, Mass., 1885-91; Nelson and Harrisville, N. H., 1891-93; Townsend and Newfane, Vt., 1893-95; West Townsend, 1897-1902, and Townsend from 1893-1904; East Jaffrey, N. H., 1904-11; Nelson, N. H., 1912-32. From the Nelson pastorate he resigned and was made pastor emeritus, with free use of the manse and an annual stipend.

He was a member of the School Committee at West Boylston, Mass.; has been for many years the secretary-treasurer of the Nelson Picnic Association; was Representative to the New Hampshire Legislature from Nelson, and has served the churches and communities to which he has ministered in many an official capacity.

His love for and familiarity with the Bible have decidedly influenced his preaching. He is a biblical preacher, tactfully applying the truth of the Scriptures to the practical affairs of everyday life. A staunch upholder of the evangelical doctrines, he has successfully avoided controversy, content in his endeavor to present and to interpret the truth as revealed. He has taken and maintained a sane and sound position respecting the great moral issues of the day.

He is passionately fond of country life. Born and trained in a village community, he has, from choice, devoted his ministry to the rural districts. He is a great lover of the hill country and of the people of his native town, Nelson, a sentiment and devotion which the people have heartily reciprocated by selecting him as pastor for more than twenty years. This record of long pastoral service in one's native town, and of more than half a century of active ministry with honorable retirement at four score years is difficult to duplicate.

In 1930 Rev. and Mrs. Hardy celebrated their golden wedding and the same year he also celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination.

Mr. Hardy is, as one has well said, "A replica of the old New England ministry at its best."

Mr. Hardy could have undoubtedly achieved success had he devoted more attention to the writing of poetry. A sample is herewith presented which will speak for itself as well as awaken memories and associations to a large group of Hardys.

NELSON

Within the bounds of Cheshire,
 New Hampshire's County pride,
 And where the hills range nobly,
 To form the great divide,
 She sits in quiet grandeur,
 A Queen with honor crowned,
 Whose every hill's a temple,
 And valley hallowed ground.

1758. REV. WILLIAM PRESCOTT⁸ HARDY (George Granville⁷, Noah⁶, Noah⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at

Nelson, N. H., 10 Jan. 1862; married, first, 18 Jul. 1888, LILL J. ADAMS, daughter of ALPHONSO and MARY (CUTTER) ADAMS of Marlboro, N. H. She died 21 Nov. 1925 at Eagle Rock, Calif. He married, second, 20 Jan. 1928, MRS. AMY ELECTRA SAXAUER of Los Angeles, Calif.

Although his first wife was an invalid for many years, her patience and cheerfulness and winsome personality won her a wide circle of friends whom she quietly influenced for the highest and best in life. She was a woman of remarkable attractiveness and charm, embodying those virtues of womanhood more highly prized because they are so rare.

His second wife is a trained and efficient church worker, admirably qualified by nature and culture to assist and to share in the manifold activities and responsibilities of a minister's life and work.

William Prescott Hardy was a babe in the cradle when his father enlisted as a volunteer in the Civil War, and less than a year and a half old when his father died in New Orleans, 21 June 1863. After his mother's death in 1870, and the subsequent breaking up of the old home, he lived for a number of years with his uncle, Noah W. Hardy, at Nelson. He prepared for college at the Deerfield and Cushing academies, spent two years at Amherst College, and completed his college work at Dartmouth, in 1887. He became a student of theology at the Hartford Theological Seminary, 1887-88. His marriage and the health of his wife necessitated moving to the Pacific Coast, where he continued his theological study at the Pacific Seminary, Berkeley, Calif., graduating in 1893. He was ordained a Congregational minister 4 May 1893, at San Rafael, Calif. He has served the following churches: Bethel Church, San Bernardino, 1889-90; Sausalito, 1891-92; San Rafael, 1893-97; Vernon Avenue, Los Angeles, 1897-1902; Eagle Rock and La Canida, 1902-03; Sherman, 1903-07; Redondo Beach, 1907-18; Berean Church, Los Angeles, since 1918. He was registrar of the Los Angeles Congregational Association, 1916-1924, and has held many other ecclesiastical positions of trust and responsibility.

Mr. Hardy is an excellent Bible student, a conservative in theology, and a staunch advocate of the fundamental principles of the Christian faith. Consequently he has been a strong expository preacher and an ardent promoter of personal Christian work, especially of soul-saving. He has been unswervingly loyal to the temperance cause, Sabbath observance and kindred reforms. His strong convictions, consistently and persistently maintained, have not led, as is often the case, to rancor and ill will. A vigorous patriotism, possibly inherited, in any case assiduously cultivated, has ever characterized his ministry. He has always emphasized the trinity of loyalty: love of home, love of country and love of God. He has devoted much attention to special work for children and young people, and has achieved marked success in these efforts.

Of him it was truly said, at the twelfth anniversary of his pastorate at Berean Church: "He is absolutely loyal to the New Testament outlines of the living Christ, to his intercessory work, to the vital leadership of the Holy Spirit, and of the sustained and fruitful prayer-life in 'The body of Christ', which is the Church local and general." His preaching and pastoral labors bear witness to a deep and loving devotion to the spiritual interests of his people, and they respond with a loyal confidence which knows he would never betray their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ or in himself as a vital preacher of the gospel.

1759. WEBSTER OLIVER⁸ HARDY (Noah Webster⁷, Noah⁶, Noah⁵, Phineas⁴, Thomas³, William², Thomas¹), born at Nelson, N. H., 7 Jan. 1848; married, 29 Nov. 1876, MARY E. PUTNAM of Boston, Mass., born at Lake Village, N. H., 17 Jul. 1848 and died 18 Nov. 1928 at Canton, Mass.

Webster Oliver Hardy enjoyed the advantages of an excellent common school education and graduated with credit from the Bryant, Stratton and Sharpe Commercial College, Concord, N. H. At the age of twenty-one, trained to hard work, ambitious and honest, he left home with a substantial gift from his parents for a business career in Boston. For four years he was engaged in the provision business with James R. Fillebrown, and three and a half years with Wadley, Spurr & Co., Boston wholesale grocers. In both positions he was trusted with large responsibilities and especially at the time of the great Boston fire in 1872. But the lure of books and the professional life at length caused him to give up a promising business career. In 1876 he entered Boston University School of Medicine and graduated in 1879. The same year he began the practice of medicine at Grafton, Mass. Later, availing himself of an attractive opportunity, he moved to Winchester, N. H., where he established a growing and remunerative practice. At length a serious impairment of his hearing compelled him to give up the profession of his choice. Since then he has engaged in gardening in Canton, Randolph and elsewhere.

He is an earnest Christian, strictly temperate, a lifelong Bible student and upholder of the best New England traditions. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy celebrated their golden wedding in 1926. She was a faithful wife and loving mother, genial, quiet, retiring, and her influence was ever for the best and highest in life.

ter of WILLARD W. and MARY (GREARSON) SEVERY. She comes from a family prominent in the early history of our country. The SEVERY and HARDY families were closely associated in Bradford and Groveland, Mass. The two families have intermarried and have many common traditions. She was born at Oxford, Mass., 27 Dec. 1867; graduated with honor from the Upton High School and continued her studies at Mount Holyoke College. She then engaged in teaching at the Fay School for Boys, Southboro, Mass. Later she taught in Wellesley, Mass., and was very happy and successful in her work. Since her marriage she has been closely identified with many social agencies and church organizations. She has become especially interested in the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Boards, particularly the Woman's Board of the Interior. As a pastor's wife, she has actively and efficiently co-operated in all phases of Christian service, and has received and merited the respect and affection of a large circle of friends.

Edwin Noah Hardy was educated at Cushing Academy, Ashburnham, Mass., graduating with honors, 1882; Amherst College, B.A., 1887; M.A., 1904; Hartford Theological Seminary, B.D., 1890, with class prize in Pastoral Theology; Boston University, Ph.D., 1906; ordained to the Congregational ministry, 6 Nov. 1890; Associate Pastor of Phillips Congregational Church, South Boston, Mass., 1890-93; pastor of the First Church, Holliston, Mass., 1893-95; Pastor of Bethany Church, Quincy, Mass., 1895-1911; Pastor of First Church, La Grange, Ill., 1911-16; officer of the Anti-Saloon League for securing the adoption of the Prohibition Amendment in Massachusetts, 1916-18; Field Secretary of the New England Branch of the American Tract Society, 1918. A few months later he was made Field Secretary of the national organization in New York City; since 1922 Executive Secretary of the American Tract Society. On the fifteenth anniversary of his connection with the society, a largely attended testimonial luncheon was given in his honor, and that of a colleague.

At Quincy the church served six hundred families, had the twelfth largest Sunday School and one of the largest men's organizations in Massachusetts, and the largest King's Daughters Circle in the country. The La Grange, Ill., church is one of the largest and most prominent churches of the Congregational Order in the Middle West.

In his ministry, Dr. Hardy specialized in church organization work for young people and men; was president of the Illinois Congregational Home Missionary Society for two years; president of the ministers' meetings in Boston, Chicago and New York City; was trustee for many years of Woodward Institute, Quincy, Mass., and of his Alma Mater, Cushing Academy; Chairman of the General Committee on Immigrant Aid at Ellis Island and the New York Port; one of the founders and president of the Hardy Family Association of America.

He is the author of The Churches and Educated Men, A Manual of American Citizenship, A Century of Temperance Effort, The Story of the English Bible, co-editor of Uncle John Vassar, co-author and compiler of Hardy and Hardie, Past and Present, and author of various monographs. He is also an editorial writer and contributor to several periodicals. He has lectured on church and literary subjects. He is a charter member of the Institute of American Genealogy. He has traveled somewhat extensively in this and foreign lands.³⁵⁷

Dr. Hardy is probably one of the best known clergymen in America, at least in Congregational circles. He counts among his intimate friends a large number of distinguished civic, religious and educational leaders of the nation. He is a scholar of the first magnitude, and possesses a vast fund of information along many lines. One cannot be in his presence long without being impressed with his erudition. Yet with all his learning he is extremely modest, almost "to a fault", courteous, kind, generous, tolerant, honest, honorable, sincere—a Christian gentleman. This and more might well be said of him. By precept and example he has honored the Hardy Family, and it should be stated, also, that he is exceedingly proud to be called a "Hardy."³⁵⁸

1777. RODNEY TENNEY⁸ HARDY (*Rodney*⁷, *Joel*⁶, *Jesse*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Cambridge, Mass., 24 June 1860; died 16 Dec. 1933 at Arlington; married, 14 Nov. 1894, ANNIE FRANCES WALKER of Searsport, Me., daughter of LYMAN W. WALKER. She was born 31 May 1861.

Rodney Tenney Hardy was educated in the schools of Arlington, graduating from the high school in 1879. He became associated with his father in the grain commission business under the name of Rodney Joel Hardy & Son. William E., a brother, joined the firm in 1897. After the death of their father in 1904 the two sons continued the business. In the conduct of the business, the two sons continued those estimable commercial virtues which have made the name of the firm honored and respected wherever known. Much of what characterized the father, Rodney Joel, was even more marked in the son, Rodney Tenney. He was esteemed, respected and honored by all who knew him.

In more recent years it was inevitable that with the increase in the use of the automobile for business as well as pleasure, the demand for grain should correspondingly diminish. Consequently, there arose conditions which no business acumen could overcome. For five years he was an invalid and unable to resume business.

Rodney T. Hardy and his family began going to Hollis in 1906, boarding at Mrs. Maria Shedd's until 1912, when he built his bungalow, "The Ridges", in Love Lane. Since then the family have spent their summers there. Mr. Hardy was taken ill in January, 1928. During his long convalescence he spent each summer, from May to the middle of October, in Hollis, enjoying the place in all of its beauties as perhaps few men would have done. "Rod", as he was familiarly known to most of the people of the town, had been given the rare gift of making and keeping friends, and there are very many in town who, when another summer comes, will sadly miss his cheery greetings and ready smile. The town of Arlington, out of respect and affection, ordered the flags at half mast for a full day after his death, and this for a citizen who was not a public official. Lifelong friends like the late Judge Roderick Hubbard of Greenwich, Conn., could never speak of "Rod" without a marked tenderness which was very impressive. His long and painful illness did not dim those genial qualities which gave such unusual value to his friendship. Both he and his wife were members of the Arlington Congregational Church.

The following account of his death appeared in the Boston Transcript of 17 Dec. 1933:

RODNEY T. HARDY DIES IN ARLINGTON

Rodney Tenney Hardy, husband of Annie F. Walker, of Searsport, Me., who died in Arlington yesterday, was born in Cambridge, 22 June 1860, and was the oldest son of the late Rodney J. Hardy and Sarah E. Tenney.

He carried on the grain and feed business of Rodney J. Hardy & Sons, established in 1873, which firm he joined in 1879. For more than fifty years he was an active member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and later the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange. He was well known in the grain trade throughout New England and the Middle West.

From early childhood he maintained close associations with Hollis, N. H., the birthplace of his parents. At Arlington he was active in church and civic affairs, and at one time was a member of the Board of Public Works.

Besides his widow he is survived by one son, Rodney Clinton Hardy of Cleveland, Ohio; an older son, Dana Walker Hardy, died in 1916. He is also survived by one brother, Charles A. Hardy, treasurer of the town of Arlington; and two sisters, Mrs. Samuel B. Dean and Miss Mary C. Hardy of Roxbury.

Funeral services will be held at the Orthodox Congregational Church, Arlington, on Sunday at 2:30 P. M. Burial will be at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington.

H., daughter of RALPH E. TENNEY, one of the sixth generation of that name resident in the old homestead. The marriage ceremony was performed in the same room in the Tenney homestead where his grandmother was married just half a century before.

William Edgar Hardy graduated from the Arlington High School and then entered the mercantile business, engaging in the boot and shoe business in Boston. In 1886 he accepted a fine opportunity and continued in the same business in Chicago, Ill. In 1897 he returned to Boston and became a partner in the grain business with his father, Rodney Joel Hardy, and his brother, Rodney Tenney Hardy, under the firm name of Rodney Hardy & Sons, and has continued in this business.

Mr. Hardy was one of the prominent members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and identified with many trade and fraternal organizations.

As treasurer of the town he has introduced the latest and best approved business methods. His sound and sane judgment in the conduct of the financial affairs of the city are not only heartily approved by the citizens of the town but also have attracted the attention of other cities. Mr. Hardy is much in demand to assist in many of the social and charitable movements of Arlington and the nearby towns. During the tercentenary celebration of the landing of Governor Winthrop, he rendered conspicuous service on prominent committees.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy graciously and generously entertained a branch of the Hardy Family Association at their home in Arlington in 1932, and rendered most satisfactory and efficient service in preparing the banquet at the second reunion of the Association held at Ipswich, Mass., in 1933. He is very proud of the Hardy name and all the Hardys who know him recognize in him a Hardy worthy of our best family traditions. Mr. Hardy is a charter member of the Hardy Family Association of America and is a member of the Board of Governors.

1782. MILTON CUTTER⁸ HARDY (*Milton Johnson*⁷, *Joel*⁶, *Jesse*⁵, *Phineas*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Cambridge, Mass., 1 Mar. 1860; baptized in May, 1865 by Rev. P. B. Day of Hollis, N. H.; married HELENA GRAHAM of Sawyerville, Quebec, Canada; died 3 Jul. 1927. His wife came from one of the leading families of Lower Canada. Her father was a well-known business man. About 1890 he was manager of the Pepperell Spring Water Co. Later he was associated with the Mellen's Food Co. of Boston, and soon became widely known throughout New England as the company's advertising distributor.

Milton Cutter Hardy was active for many years in Masonry. He was a member of the Washington Lodge, F. and A. M., of St. Paul's Royal Arch Chapter, Boston Council, Roxbury Masonic Brotherhood, and the Keystone Chapter, O. E. S. He was also a member of Warren Lodge, I. O. O. F.

He graduated from the common schools of New York, continued his education at Everson's Harvard Rooms, Columbia Grammar School and Charlier's Institute in New York City. He went in the brokerage business in Wall Street, and later entered mercantile life in New York City. In 1889 he enlisted in the 23rd Reg., N. G. S. 71, 4, New York. After serving some months he was obliged to resign, his health having been impaired from the effects of a sunstroke. At one time he was a member of the Society of Schoolboys of Old Harlem.

He was a member of the Newton contingent of the Massachusetts State Guard, and did duty in Boston during the noted police strike.

For nearly a quarter of a century Milton laboriously gathered material for a history of the Hardy Family. During the latter years of his life, impaired health and other conditions made it impossible for him to carry out his plans. Some months before his death he learned with great joy and satisfaction that the authors of this book were collecting material for publication. He therefore turned over to them the material he had gathered. This has been of special value in checking up data more recently acquired.

1973. HON. JOHN HENRY⁸ HARDY (*John*⁷, *Aaron*⁶, *Aaron*⁵, *James*⁴, *Joseph*³, *John*², *Thomas*¹), born at Hollis, N. H., 2 Feb. 1847; died 10 Oct. 1917 at Arlington, Mass.; married, first, 30 Aug. 1871, JENNIE A. CONANT, daughter of LEVI and ANNIE CONANT of Littleton, Mass., a lineal descendant of ROGER CONANT, one of the first prominent settlers of Salem, Mass. The marriage was colored with a bit of extra romance, as they were schoolmates at Ipswich Academy. She was a woman of rare culture and refinement; vivacious, yet serious. She was handicapped by recurrent periods of ill health. At times buoyant with energy to serve her home and the community, she would then be incapacitated for months. She died in April, 1912. He married, second, 8 June 1913, ADA McNAB of Dartmouth, N. H., a woman of strong and winsome personality and active in service for others, rendering substantial aid in the establishment of the (Simms) Memorial Hospital at Arlington, Mass.

Judge John Henry Hardy was educated in the public schools of Hollis, N. H., and prepared for college at Appleton and New Ipswich Academies. At fifteen years of age he enlisted in Co. E, 15th N. H. Volunteer Infantry, and was in active service in various engagements. After his discharge from the army he entered Dartmouth College and graduated in the class of 1870. He paid his way through college by teaching. He was born a few weeks after the death of his father, and his mother died when he was but two years old. He was cared for by his aunt, Lucretia Farley, and his boyhood was spent in the home of his uncle, James Hardy.

After college he went to Boston, secured a position as teacher in the Chauncy Hall School, and began the study of law with R. M. Morse, Jr. Later he attended Harvard Law School. In 1872 he was admitted to the Suffolk bar. Shortly thereafter he formed a partnership with George W. Morse under the name of Morse & Hardy and for two years did a thriving business. Then he entered into partnership with Samuel J. Elder and Thomas W. Proctor, which was continued until his elevation to the Associate Justiceship of the Municipal Court of Boston, 1883. As Judge, he was soon recognized as one of the most promising jurists of the younger lawyers of the state. He also served as Town Counsel of Arlington from 1873 to 1885, and also represented with rare fidelity the district in the State Legislature.

In September, 1896, Governor Wolcott placed the nomination of Judge Hardy for the Superior Court before the Executive Council of the state. A petition signed by more than fifty of the leading lawyers of Boston and vicinity and many other prominent citizens of the state urged his election. The Council confirmed the nomination. This position he held with honor and distinction until his death. His high standards of truth, honesty and justice, supported by an exceptionally keen discernment and judicial acumen, were always in evidence, and those tried in his court were wont to say they had to tell the truth, for when the judge fixed his eyes upon them they knew that he could see through every sham and pretense. While to many he seemed stern and serious, he possessed a delightful sense of humor which frequently relieved the tension of the court room. When out of court he was known as a famous story-teller.

The recreations and pastimes of a very busy and distinguished man are always interesting. Judge Hardy's recreational habits are delightfully pictured by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy M. Hardy:

After the Judge became confined by his courtroom duties he took daily rides on horseback which he greatly enjoyed and from which he received much benefit. This was his exercise for thirty years, and on many of the long afternoon rides I was his companion, privileged to hear his fascinating talks about history in which he was greatly interested and about the Hardy ancestry, which he wished to impress upon me, concerning which he was an authority. Riding was his only sport and he had few hobbies, and those were only such as were shared with his grandchildren.

Judge Hardy was brought up in the orthodox church, but was always liberally minded. With his first wife he attended the Unitarian Church at Arlington for a time, was Superintendent of the Sunday School, and served on important committees. He, as well as his son Horace, extended his circle of acquaintances by joining the First Corps of Cadets. He was a member of the Hiram Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Royal Arch Chapter, and the Knights Templar. He was an active member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and took a deep interest in the Hardy genealogy. He was one of the earliest and most diligent students of Hardy history. He was exceedingly proud of the Hardy name and we here pay tribute to his memory as one of the foremost of those who have bestowed honor, lustre and distinction upon the name of Hardy.

This man, who, by his tireless exertions and unflinching determination, arose from a humble position to become one of the most honored and distinguished jurists of the state and of New England, has left as an heritage to the younger generation of the Hardy Family an example worthy of careful emulation.

1998. HENRY P.⁸ HARDY (*Leonard P.*⁷, *Silas*⁶, *Jonathan*⁵, *Timothy*⁴, *Joseph*³, *John*², *Thomas*¹), born at Warner, N. H., in 1842; died in 1922; married, in 1866, MAHALA ANN MARTIN, daughter of NEWELL S. and ELVIRA A. MARTIN, who was born at Grafton, N. H., 4 May 1847 and died in Nov., 1915.

Henry P. Hardy was one of those natural mechanical geniuses. It was a very easy task for him to invent and manufacture labor-saving devices. After obtaining a good education in the common schools of his neighborhood, he left the farm to seek employment at Lowell, Mass., where he became identified with the Shaw Hosiery Co. — When Benjamin Shaw was trying to build a knitting machine that would make seamless stockings, he was about to give up in the attempt when Mr. Hardy came to his rescue. To Henry P. Hardy belongs the credit of having planned and built the first seamless knitting machine used in America.

He was a small man physically, not very strong, and when the Civil War broke out he tried to enlist but was rejected on account of size. He wrote an interesting diary which is now the proud possession of his daughter, Carrie (Hardy) Parsons, 173 W. 188th St., New York City.³⁷⁰

2042. AUGUSTUS POOR⁸ HARDY (*Samuel B.*⁷, *Benjamin*⁶, *Enoch*⁵, *Nathan*⁴, *Samuel*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Rowly or Georgetown, Mass., 2 Mar. 1831; died 23 Dec. 1912; married ELIZABETH ANN CAPENER, 18 Mar. 1854, at Salt Lake City.

Augustus Poor Hardy arrived in Utah 12 Oct. 1850, having crossed the plains by ox team in Wilford Woodruff's company. He was sent on a mission to Parowan in 1851, by President Brigham Young, to assist in building a fort. In 1852 he was sent to Fillmore to assist in building the State House. In 1853 he was scouting and guarding in the Walker-Indian War.

On 14 Apr. 1854 he was called by President Brigham Young to go on a mission among the Indians in Southern Utah. Arriving at Fort Harmony, he stayed there two or three weeks under John D. Lee, who was in command at that post. On 20 May 1854 he, together with Jacob Hamblin and Thales H. Hascal, left Fort Harmony and proceeded to the Santa Clara River, the home of the 'To-o-noquint Indians, among whom they were to labor. Three days after leaving Fort Harmony they were joined by Samuel Knight, and these four men were the first white settlers in Utah's "Dixie." The day after leaving Fort Harmony, Hamblin was chosen as leader, and he was afterward appointed president of the mission by President Brigham Young.

Arriving near where Washington, Utah, now stands, the small party of white men first met the 'To-o-noquint Indians under 'Tutsugubet, their chief. Hamblin's party had an Indian named Amos with them who understood the language of the 'To-o-noquints and acted as interpreter. He told 'Tutsugubet that the white men had come down to tell them about the Great Spirit, to show them how to do good things, and desired to live at peace with them. Hamblin's party had unsaddled and they laid their rifles alongside their saddles and walked away from them to show their peaceful intentions. 'Tutsugubet acted very coldly at first, but finally said if the white men talked straight it was all right and they could accompany them to their camp on the Santa Clara Creek.

Hamblin's party and the Indians quickly became friends. The gospel was preached to them and they were taught how to cultivate the ground and irrigate it. A dam was put in the river, the Indians doing all the work under the direction of the whites, and a canal was taken out on each side, the whites being given the ditch and land on the east side, the Indians taking the ditch and land on the west side of the river. The Indians rejoiced greatly when they grew their first crop of corn, melons, etc.

The first house in Dixie was of logs and was built in 1854 by Hamblin's party. Santa Clara also produced the first cotton grown in Dixie, by Hamblin's party in 1855. Mr. Hardy always spoke very highly of Jacob Hamblin, describing him as kind, just, fearless and earnest. He also spoke well of the Indians, describing them as trustworthy, hospitable, upright and honest, and Tutsugubet as very intelligent withal.

Mr. Hardy stayed on his mission until the winter of 1855-6, when he was released on account of sickness and returned to Salt Lake. He returned to Dixie in 1861, locating at Virgin City. He moved from that place to St. George in 1867, and was appointed Bishop of the Indians by President Erastus Snow. He was appointed Colonel on President Snow's staff.

Major Hardy took an active part in dealing with the Indian troubles in this southern county from 1866 to 1871, and was proud of the Indian War medal bestowed upon him in recognition of his services. He bore a commission as Major in the 3rd Regiment of Infantry. He also served as sheriff of Washington County for eight years, as assessor and collector for one term, and U. S. Deputy Marshal for one term.

He was a quiet, unassuming man of a kindly and hospitable disposition. He was averse to much publicity, and expressed a desire before his death that his funeral should be a quiet one from his residence.³⁷²

2044. SAMUEL PRESCOTT⁸ HARDY (*Samuel Brocklebank*⁷, *Benjamin*⁶, *David*⁵, *Stephen*⁴, *Joseph*³, *John*², *Thomas*¹), born at Groveland 21 Oct. 1836; died at Salt Lake City 9 Jul. 1921; married at Salt Lake City 4 Dec. 1856, ALMYRA LAMB, daughter of ABEL and ALMIRA (MERRILL) LAMB. She was born at Diahanyon, Davis County, Mo., 8 Nov. 1838 and died at Granger-nard, Salt Lake County, Utah, 4 Aug. 1919, and was buried at the Salt Lake City Cemetery, 7 Aug. 1919.

Almyra's father, Abel Lamb, was a cooper by trade. He got his timber for making barrels, tubs, etc., from a nearby canyon which is still called (Lamb's Canyon). He also had a candy store on the main street of Salt Lake City. Almyra was an expert needle woman. She was of a happy disposition. She was post-mistress in Earncliffe Cassia County, Idaho, for several years. She was the mother of seven children, all of whom are living at the present time (1931). She was visiting a daughter on 4 Jul. 1919, just one month before she died, and was happy and in fine spirit at that time. She danced to a tune played on the phonograph, while her younger relatives sat and talked and visited.

Samuel Prescott Hardy was an early settler in Utah, going there with his parents in 1850, crossing the plains with ox teams. He was in the Indian wars of early days of Utah, and was called a Minute Man. He also served on guard duty. He was in business for himself until machine-made shoes could be had at a lower price than he could make and sell them. Then he preempted homestead land in Idaho, where he raised cattle and did some farming. He went out to meet the handcart company and pulled the first handcart over Little Mountain that came into the valley. He found some of the company in great distress, one man suffering from lack of water. They did not dare to give him water, but undressed him and laid him in a mudhole for a while. Then they gave him water to drink.

When Samuel was fourteen years old his little sister died while en route to Utah. He laid on her grave and refused to leave her. His father had to carry him to the wagon in order to continue their journey. He never got over the sorrow of leaving his baby sister away out in the lonely place where nothing but wild animals and Indians roamed. While he was riding in the covered wagon the oxen stampeded and threw him under the wagon. He struck the wagon tongue as he fell, and had three ribs broken. The journey had to be continued. He was strapped in a quilt and lay dangling from the wagon bows.

He was interested in dramatics. He had a deep, clear voice and a fine figure. He was as tender hearted as a child and was always grieved when he saw anything suffer.

EDITORIAL IN LINCOLN Star, JUNE 17, 1935—"TWO GENERATIONS"

In the death of Emory C. Hardy, prominent Lincoln business man, in California late Saturday, where he had gone in the hope of benefiting his health, there is the reminder that Nebraska is growing old. Mr. Hardy was the last of the second generation of a family identified with the furniture business in this state since its earliest days. The Hardy Furniture Company was founded by W. H. Hardy more than a half century ago, and in turn its direction and management fell to the late W. E. Hardy, and then to his brother Emory.

378. As this book comes from the press we are informed that Emory Chase Hardy died unexpectedly at Loma Linda, Calif., 13 June. An editorial appearing 17 June in the Lincoln Star is printed herewith.

It established for itself a place among Nebraska's institutions. Its stocks were large and varied, combining the highest quality in furniture lines. Its business methods were marked with a high sense of integrity and fairness. Those actively connected with the business, beginning with the father and continuing with the two sons, took a public spirited attitude with respect to the city of Lincoln and the state at large. They and their company were generous contributors to undertakings which meant development and progress. There are very few concerns in Nebraska where the last of the second generation identified with them is dead.

Emory Hardy had been ailing for some time before the seriousness of his illness was realized. Nevertheless, his death comes as a shock to his wide circle of friends. He was quiet in manner and bearing, but a charming and gracious man of cultured tastes and kindly instincts.

M. C. A. at the University of Illinois, published in 1926, was one of the outstanding products of his prolific writings. He was a careful student of all questions of wide public interest. It is said that he made a special study of Einstein's theory of relativity and started in to learn to play the piano after the age of fifty. He attained a national reputation as an outstanding writer of editorials and his influence in moulding public opinion was far-reaching, so much so that he was honored by having his name included in Who's Who in America.

The news of his death, 20 Dec. 1933, was a great shock to the city of Decatur and vicinity. Newspapers and other publications, not only in his home community, but elsewhere, gave considerable space to his passing. Following his death, the many fine published tributes, including statements by people prominent in national life, among whom were Hon. Henry R. Rainey, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Mr. Enoch Martin, former officer of the United Mine Workers of America, Governor of the State of Illinois and others, were most impressive and indicative of his ability, of his forceful and inspiring personality and strong Christian character.

2203. EDGAR DRURY⁹ HARDY (Rev. Daniel Warren⁸, Levi⁷, Daniel⁶, Moses⁵, Moses⁴, Jacob³, Thomas², Thomas¹), born at Blue Hill, Me., 3 Apr. 1880; married, 1907, LAURA TAYLOR of Geneva, N. Y.

Edgar Drury Hardy graduated from the Lowell High School, Lowell, Mass., in 1899 and entered Amherst College the same year, graduating with degree of B.A. in 1903. He entered the employment of the Western Electric Co. of New York City. Later he joined the staff of the Lumber Insurers General Agency, specializing in insurance on lumber plants. In 1906 he was sent to Ottawa, Canada, to open a branch office. Subsequently he was appointed Canadian manager to look out for the interests of the parent organization. During this period the Canadian office established a valuable connection with the lumber industry in Canada, and gained specialists in insurance on lumber and woodworking plants. Soon a partnership was formed under the name of "Hardy & Reynolds" and the scope of their business was extended to include other lines of insurance. In a few years the new partnership purchased the interest of the New York office in the Canadian business. In 1929 Mr. Hardy took over the interests of his partner, Mr. Reynolds, and changed the name of the firm to "E. D. Hardy & Co.", which became incorporated and was engaged as agent and broker in developing insurance in all its branches. In March, 1935, the firm was again reorganized under the name of "E. D. Hardy & Co., Ltd.", with Mr. Hardy as President.

Mr. Hardy has taken an active part in community and church life in Ottawa. He has served as a director on the Y. M. C. A. Board of Governors. For a number of years he was Assistant Superintendent of the Sunday School and a member of the Board of Elders. At the present time he is on the Board of Ottawa and Montreal, the Rivermead Golf Club of Ottawa, and the Mountainview Golf Club of Greensboro, Vt., and of the Rideau Curling Club. He is Honorary Secretary-Treasurer of the Kiwanis Club of his city. He is one of Ottawa's leading citizens, and is a member of the Chalmers United Church. He is a Regional Representative of the Hardy Family Association of America.

Mrs. Hardy, like her husband, is active in civic, religious and social affairs of Ottawa. She graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1904; was President of the Monday Club, a literary organization, from 1910 to 1921; has been a member of the Board of Directors of the Y. W. C. A. and was President from 1921-1932. Since then she has been Honorary President. She is a charter member of the Chelsea Club, an incorporated resident women's club. She was President of the Women's Association of Chalmers Church from 1928 to 1932. She has been President of the Ottawa Local Council of Women since 1932. Since 1934 she has been Honorary Corresponding Secretary of the National Council of Women.

2370. SAMUEL JEROME⁹ HARDY (*David Nelson*⁸, *Laurin M.*⁷, *Israel*⁶, *Moody*⁵, *Reuben*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Glenwood, Pa., 16 Aug. 1870; died at Evanston, Ill., 23 Oct. 1929; married, 20 Sept. 1899, CLARA B. WELLS, daughter of JOHN and LUCINDA (McCLELLAN) WELLS of Norwood, N. Y., born 17 Feb. 1876, and died at Gloversville, N. Y., 22 Jul. 1932.

Samuel Jerome Hardy grew up on a farm and completed his formal education at Harford Academy at Harford, Pa. Although he was unable to go to college, he was a natural student and in later years acquired the equivalent of a college education by intensive study by himself and by taking correspondence courses with such institutions as the Alexander Hamilton Institute, the LaSalle Institute, etc. His desire to know and to improve himself remained with him all through his life and accounted for much of his success, which was unusual, as will be seen below.

When a young man Mr. Hardy had an unfortunate accident which nearly cost him his life. His youngest brother, John Sumner, was playing with his father's old army musket of Civil War days in the woodshed of the family homestead, and not knowing that it was loaded, pretended to act like a soldier, aimed at his older brother, pulled the trigger and the gun went off, wounding Mr. Hardy in his left shoulder blade. For days and weeks he hovered between life and death, but due largely to the devoted care and attention of his father he got well.

The story of Mr. Hardy's business career is a good example of success under difficulties in a thoroughly American way. He started as an employe of the Grand Union Tea Co., under the supervision of his brother-in-law, Mr. Frederick M. Quick of Cortland, N. Y. Crating and uncrating boxes in the basement of the store were his first assignments. Everything he attempted to do he always did well, however, and this fact soon attracted the attention of officials of the company and it was not long before he began receiving promotions, one after another, until he soon found himself one of the officers of the firm. He became manager of a store at Gloversville, N. Y., and later was advanced to take charge of a larger unit at Utica, N. Y. He was soon given general supervision of several stores. Then he moved to Scranton, Pa., where he took over the general control of a larger number of stores. Shortly he was made Secretary and later Treasurer of the company, with headquarters in New York City. A few years before his death he was made Vice-President and transferred to Chicago, where he had charge of that branch office. He retired from active work in the early part of 1929.

Mr. Hardy was very industrious and always interested in worthwhile affairs. He was a devoted church man, serving on several official boards. He participated in civic affairs and was a leader wherever he went. He had many fraternal affiliations. He was especially prominent in Masonic circles. At one time he was Master of the Utica Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. He was exceedingly proud of his family and set a worthy example of right living before his children and before the world at large.

Mrs. Hardy graduated from the Potsdam, N. Y., Normal School and taught school several years.

John Sumner Hardy grew up on a farm and received a good education by attending the nearest district school and by attending Nicholson, Pa., High School. Strangely enough, Mr. Hardy was accidentally shot in his hip by a fellow hunter on a hunting expedition. Like his brother Samuel Jerome, whom he himself accidentally shot as a small boy while playing with his father's Civil War army musket, he had a narrow escape from death, and it was several weeks before he was able to walk.

He followed the example of his brother Samuel Jerome by entering the employ of the Grand Union Tea Company. At one time he was manager of the firm's store at Rochester, N. Y. Later he went into business for himself. He is now a salesman for a hardware firm in Binghamton, N. Y., where he resides at 19 Highland Ave.

Harry Alonzo Hardy grew up on a farm and attended the district school of the neighborhood. In his school days he was a prominent athlete. After receiving a good common school education, he learned the carpentry trade, which he followed for a number of years. Later he entered the employ of the Grand Union Tea Co., under the supervision of his older brother, Samuel Jerome. Soon after his marriage he returned to his former trade in the service of the Endicott-Johnson Co., the famous shoe firm at Endicott, N. Y. Mr. Hardy is an expert builder and specializes in interior finishing. He resides at 1503 Miller St., Utica, N. Y.

2377. HARRISON CLAUDE⁹ HARDY (*David Nelson*⁸, *Laurin M.*⁷, *Israel*¹, *Moody*⁵, *Reuben*⁴, *Thomas*³, *William*², *Thomas*¹), born at Glenwood, Pa., 27 Sept. 1887; married, first, 26 June 1912, LULA MAY GREEN, daughter of JEFFERSON and LYDIA (CRISMAN) GREEN of Montrose, Pa., born in 1883 and died at Oneonta, N. Y., 25 Oct. 1918; married, second, at Oneonta, N. Y., 19 Nov. 1919, SHIRLEY FRANCES NEWTON, daughter of H. DANE and EFFIE (YOUNG) NEWTON, born at Sidney, N. Y., 15 Feb. 1897.

Dr. H. Claude Hardy is a twin brother of Morton Clyde Hardy of Binghamton, N. Y. When these two sons were born Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton were the Republican candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States. Their father, being an ardent Republican, named the two for the candidates. They grew up together on a farm and for a number of years they attended the same schools. Dr. Hardy as a child was very much interested in books and went ahead of his classmates early in his school career. At fourteen years of age he had mastered all the subjects taught in the district school, and at that time presented himself at Montrose, Pa., the county seat of Susquehanna County, to take the annual teachers' examinations. He passed with an average of 90 per cent, and although too young to teach, the County Superintendent of Schools offered to issue the young man a special certificate. Dr. Hardy was finally persuaded by his father not to undertake a teaching position at such a young age. Hence he decided to go on with his education. He entered Nicholson (Pa.) High School and graduated as valedictorian in 1904. He was then offered an opportunity to work his way through Wyoming Seminary at Kingston, Pa. While at that institution he won many honors and made an enviable record in track athletics. He began running the long distance races and during his last year at the seminary was captain of the school's track team. His specialty then was the quarter mile run. He won several track prizes and trophies. He graduated with honors in 1907.

In the fall of 1907, with the aid of a small scholarship and $75 in cash, he entered Wesleyan University, where he earned his way through college, singing in a church choir, engaging in a number of business ventures, such as buying and selling potatoes, butter, eggs, tea and coffee, etc. He sang first tenor on the college glee club for four years, and was manager of the Wesleyan Argus, the college newspaper. He was Secretary of his class one year, Secretary of the college Y. M. C. A., Historian of his senior class and graduated with B.A. degree in 1911. He was a member of the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity.

Dr. Hardy's rise in the educational world has been rapid. He received a Master's degree in Psychology and Education from the University of Rochester in 1921, and an M.A. degree in Education from Syracuse University in 1923. In 1931 he received a Ph.D. degree from New York University. In 1933 the latter institution conferred upon him a special honor in giving him the alumni award for meritorious service, an award that is given annually to a limited number of distinguished alumni. During the summer of 1914 he was a special student at the University of Grenoble, France.

Dr. Hardy has been honored frequently by fellow educators. For five years, 1920 to 1925, he was Secretary of the Associated Academic Principals' Association of the State of New York, an organization of high school principals. He has been President of two county teachers' associations—Monroe and Westchester. He is a member of the New York State Council of Superintendents and of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association. At the present time he is a member of the Board of Directors of the latter organization, representing New York State.

The following excerpt from Who's Who in American Education will give a brief outline of Dr. Hardy's career to date:

He was able to return, and completed the general agricultural course, graduating in 1910. In his senior year he specialized in courses in fruit culture.

Like his father before him, Mr. Hardy has many interests and activities. In politics he is a Democrat. He has served as Treasurer of the Hollis Board of Education, Supervisor of the voting check list of the town, Town Auditor, holding the latter position for the last fifteen years. He was Master of the Hollis Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, two years, 1914 and 1915. He has been a member of the Hillsborough County Farm Bureau for a number of years.

Mr. Hardy is the proud owner and proprietor of the well-known "Brookdale Fruit Farm", in the central part of the town of Hollis. Some of the finest fruit in New England, apples, pears, peaches, berries, etc., are grown on his estate, and in many respects it is considered a model fruit farm. Incidentally, less than 100 acres of his farm are given over to cultivation. There are two hundred acres of splendid woodland.

2557. JOHN HENRY⁹ HARDY, JR. (*Hon. John Henry*⁸, *John*⁷, *Aaron*⁶, *Aaron*⁵, *James*⁴, *Joseph*³, *John*², *Thomas*¹), born at Arlington, Mass., 10 June 1874; died 3 Jan. 1926; married, 15 Sept. 1898, DOROTHY MYRA KEELER of Hyde Park, Mass., a woman of unusual culture and accomplishments, and a great lover of nature.

John Henry Hardy was in many respects almost too direct an opposite of his brother Horace. He neither sought nor cared for public office. He was a great lover of the out-of-doors and nature. Undoubtedly he inherited this in part from his father, who was a horseback devotee and intensely fond of country life. His boyhood vacations were spent on his grandfather Conant's farm in Littleton. From a eugenic point of view it is most interesting to note two boys growing up together with tastes so different, although those who knew them well considered them about equally endowed mentally.

After graduating from the Arlington High School, he entered the poultry business at Faneuil Hall Market, Boston, when seventeen years of age. He was successful, and at length became a partner in the business. But his heart was elsewhere, and so in 1910 he purchased a farm in Littleton, Mass., specializing in fruit culture. In this field he soon became an expert, and filled many speaking engagements on fruit culture in his district. He also conducted field demonstrations on grafting and other phases of fruit culture under the direction of local farm bureaus. For many years he was a member of the Nuttall Ornithological Society of Cambridge, Mass.; the first President of the Nasoba Fruit Growers' Association of Littleton. He was a constant attendant of lectures of the Natural History Society of Boston. Ill health and an early death prevented the realization of plans and ideals which would have given him well deserved honor and distinction.

For the past few years she has had charge of the Wild Flower Garden of the Arkan Nursery, Putney, Vt. She is very happy and successful in her work, and with her mother has established her home at "Hardy Lot" in Putney, 1930.

2558. HORACE DEXTER⁹ HARDY (Hon. John Henry⁸, John⁷, Aaron⁶, Aaron⁵, James⁴, Joseph³, John², Thomas¹), born at Arlington, Mass., 28 Feb. 1877; died 18 Mar. 1910; married, in 1905, HARRIET LOUISE DECKER of Convent Stations, N. J. She is a graduate of Wellesley College. She was born and reared in a home of wealth and culture. Mentally richly endowed, she has met the varied experiences of life with remarkable strength and beauty of character.

Horace Dexter Hardy, educated in the public schools of his native town, entered Dartmouth College, where his father had been a student, graduating in the class of 1900. He graduated from Harvard Law School in 1902, and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar 4 Mar. 1902. In 1904 he was admitted to the U. S. Circuit Court. After spending two years with the law firm of Choate & Hall, he formed a partnership under the name of Sawyer & Hardy, with offices at 53 State St., Boston, and soon was enjoying a lucrative practice.

Early in life he became interested in political affairs, and was in close touch with the local Republican forces. In 1906 he secured, without opposition, the nomination as candidate to the State Legislature, representing the district of Arlington and Lexington, and was elected by a handsome majority. He was also re-elected for the second term, no candidate appearing against him. In the Legislature he was assigned to important committees, and was recognized as an able and conscientious representative. He held the office of Town Counsel of Arlington from 1905 until his death. He also served as Assistant District Attorney, and was Public Administrator of Middlesex County, showing marked skill in cross-examination of witnesses. His society affiliations were the Suffolk Bar Association, the Phi Upsilon Sphinx, Arlington Boat Club. He was also a member of the First Corps of Cadets.

At the time of his funeral the flags on the town hall and other public buildings were displayed at half mast. Most of the business houses of the city were closed, and the Middlesex Court adjourned. The attendance at the church filled the edifice to overflowing, and the floral tributes were many and beautiful. Dying at the early age of thirty-three years, he left a brilliant record not easily duplicated, and gave promise of an honorable and distinguished career like that of his father, Judge Hardy.

County (Mass.) Agricultural School, which has a staff of twenty-three men and nine women teachers. He is Head of the Department of Mechanics, and has been connected with this famous institution for fourteen years.

His early education was limited, as it was necessary for him to leave school at fourteen years of age to go to work on a farm. This deficiency in education was made up later, and today he is looked upon by his associates in the educational world as an outstanding authority in his field. For three years he served as a member of the Board of Education of Rowley, Mass., and after his removal to Groveland, Mass., he was elected a member of the Board of Education of that place, serving nine consecutive years. He is now serving a second term as Selectman of Groveland, his home town, which has been the birthplace of so many Hardys, as recorded in this book. Mr. Hardy is frequently called upon by his fellow citizens and neighbors to take a prominent part in the affairs of the town, and his advice is widely sought.

CHAPTER XVI

JOHN HARDY FAMILY OF SALEM, MASS.

1. JOHN¹ HARDY, born in England about 1600; died during the latter part of the year 1651 or very early in 1652; married in England to ELIZABETH, whose last name is unknown. She died in 1654.

When John Hardy was made a freeman, 3 Sept. 1634, it is recorded that "he was a middle-aged man."¹ Mention has already been made of the assumed fact that he was a brother of Thomas¹ of Salem, Boston, Ipswich, Rowley and Bradford, Mass.² In certain branches of the Hardy Family there is a tradition which has been passed from one generation to another that these brothers came over from England to this country at or about the same time. If this tradition is true, as has already been pointed out, then it is logical to assume that John¹ Hardy of Salem, Mass., Thomas¹ Hardy of Ipswich, Mass., and Richard¹ Hardy of Concord, Mass., and of Stamford, Conn., were brothers. That they were closely related there can be no doubt, and the records show that they were in close association during those early colonial years. That the above mentioned were brothers has been assumed by practically all historians and genealogists, such as David W. Hoyt, Charles Henry Pope, Joseph B. Felt, Savage and many others.³

It is evident that John¹ Hardy was married before he left England and that his children were born there. There is a somewhat doubtful reference⁴ that he returned to England about 1643 or 1644 for his son Joseph, and that on his return secured a grant of land for him.

It is possible that John¹ Hardy came to America ahead of his brothers, Thomas¹ and Richard¹. Banks, in his Planters of the Commonwealth,⁵ mentions him as a possible passenger on the ship Lyon, which arrived in Massachusetts in 1630 prior to the arrival of Governor Winthrop's fleet of eleven ships of the same year.

John¹ Hardy, it may be said without hesitation, was one of the most prominent citizens of Salem, Mass., up to the time of his death in 1654. He served the town officially in many ways,⁵ was Selectman in 1647, was Juryman again and again, was entrusted frequently to execute important commissions, and had valuable grants of land. He and his wife were members of the church and he was one of the signers of a remarkable church covenant prepared by the Rev. John Fiske, who was pastor there 1637-40.

5. See Bank's Planters of the Commonwealth, page 207.

John Hardy was a man of wealth, the owner of much real estate, giving to his daughter and son-in-law a valuable tract of land at their marriage. He was well known because of his shipping interests, and was mentioned as a "fisherman"; reference is made to the shipwreck of one of his vessels, but Perley, in his History of Salem, has this to say, "Among the vessels owned in Salem about 1650 the fleet of John Hardy was perhaps the largest", and then a number of these vessels were named. It is clearly demonstrated that he laid the foundation for the family's remarkable achievements in later generations as mariners.

He made a will dated 30 Jan. 1651-2, and his signature, which is here presented, is the only one known. His will was proved 30 June 1652, and in it he definitely mentions the following persons: His wife Elizabeth, his son Joseph, his daughter Elizabeth and her husband Roger Haskell and their four children, John, William, Mark and Elizabeth. His wife's will mentions the same persons. Special attention is called to these facts because there has been some question about the number and names of the children of John Hardy. In his will only two are mentioned, and it may be safely assumed that if there were other children they would surely have been named in the will. Further, Perley, the Salem historian, and genealogists of branches of the John Hardy family are all agreed, so far as this research has extended, in affirming that John Hardy had but two children, Elizabeth and Joseph. However, it is quite possible and somewhat probable that there may have been a son John who died before his father's death. References to another son who survived the father when examined indicate some error in recording. At least this may be said, that not once do we find John Hardy mentioned as senior.

The Hardy name is perpetuated in Salem, Mass., in many ways. There is Hardy Street, the Hardy Rock, Hardy Wharf, and in one or another way many of the historical shrines of Salem are closely associated with the Hardy name. This is notably the case with the Hardy House, the birthplace of Nathaniel Hawthorne, the Ropes Memorial, the Pickering House, the Witch House, etc.

Children, born in England:

- 2 i. ELIZABETH², b. abt. 1623; m. 1st, abt. 1648, ROGER HASKELL of Salem, Mass.; m. 2nd, 1667-8, EDWARD BERRY. There are two court records of interest in connection with her. ELIZABETH HARDY HASKELL, aged about 45 years, testified at the Ipswich Court 31 Mar. 1668, that the land near Beaver Pond which her husband sold to Richard Dodge was her father HARDY'S land which he had given to her husband, ROGER HASKELL⁶. There is another citation that Jeffrie Massey certified 9 Mar. 1677 that about 26 or 30 years before he had laid out about forty acres of land near Beaver Pond for JOHN HARDY or ROGER HASKELL⁷. From this and other data it appears that ELIZABETH was b. about 1623 and m. about 1648, ROGER HASKELL, and that her father at her marriage gave them about forty acres of land. Very little is known about the family.

ROGER HASKELL was a well-to-do citizen, honored and respected, and a property owner. He and two brothers, WILLIAM and MARK, came from England and probably from Bristol. The HASKELLS claim descent, and with good reason, from Norman French stock and from a companion of William the Conqueror. The data of this family is, however, meagre and very unsatisfactory. He d. 16 June 1667, and WILLIAM HASKELL, his brother, was appointed guardian of the children.

EDWARD BERRY, her second husband, was a seaman and weaver. They were living in Marblehead, Mass., 1678-9. Children:

ROGER³, b.; m. HANNAH WOODBURY; residence, Beverley, Mass.

JOSIAH³, b. abt. 1659; m. SARAH GRIGGS of Gloucester, Mass., 22 May 1684.

7. Ibid., Vol. 6.

MARK³, b.; living in 1667. A grandson of MARK was a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

JOHN³, b.; living in 1668, a husbandman of Salem, Mass.

WILLIAM³, b.; living in 1667.

- 3* ii. JOSEPH², b.; m. MARTHA, whose surname is unknown; d. late in 1688.

3. JOSEPH² HARDY (*John*¹), born in England; married MARTHA, whose surname is unknown; died late in the year 1688.

There is a record that his father, John Hardy of Salem, Mass., made a special trip to England in 1643-4 to bring him to America and secured for him a grant of land near Bass River, Salem, Mass. He was a prominent citizen of Salem, the owner of much land, and extensively engaged, like his father, in shipping interests. He owned land in Southfield, Mass., as early as 1676. He was named the appraiser of the estate of Joshua Ward in 1680. He was made a freeman in 1649. He made his will 26 Jul. 1688. His will was proved 14 Dec. 1688.

Children, all born in Salem, Mass.:

- 4 i. HANNAH³, b. 30 Jul. 1648; d. young.
- 5 ii. ELIZABETH³, b. 28 Apr. 1650; d. 19 Dec. 1727; age 77 years; m. at Salem, 27 Jul. 1667, BENJAMIN PICKMAN. She was his second wife. He was the son of NATHANIEL and TABATHA PICKMAN; b. at Levens Mead, England; d. 1 Dec. 1708. The town records state that he d. 31 Dec. 1708, and that he was b. in Bristol, England. He m. his first wife, the WIDOW TABATHA DIKE, in 1639. His father, NATHANIEL, came to Salem, Mass., from Bristol, England, and on 25 Jul. 1639, was granted land lying on the south side of Forest River. BENJAMIN PICKMAN's father-in-law, CAPTAIN JOSEPH HARDY, conveyed to him 17 Aug. 1685, a lot of land on what is now Union Street. Previous to the transfer, however, PICKMAN had built a house on the lot and there he lived. At his death it passed into the hands of his son, CAPT. JOSHUA PICKMAN, and in 1772 it was owned by Daniel Hawthorne of Salem. In this Hardy house (now standing) was b. 4 Jul. 1804, Nathaniel Hawthorne, the great romancer.

JOSEPH⁴, b. 11 Sept. 1668; d. at sea 1703, leaving no issue.
 BENJAMIN⁴, b. 30 Jan. 1671-2 (Bible record); d. 26 Apr. 1737; m. 1st, MARY HASKELL, daughter of STEPHEN and ELIZABETH (HILL) HASKELL of Salem, Mass., who d. 1704; m. 2nd, 26 Oct. 1704, ABIGAIL LINDALL, daughter of TIMOTHY and MARY (VERIN) LINDALL. After the birth of his daughter ABIGAIL he moved to Boston, Mass., from whence he sailed to London, England, in the employ of Mr. Belcher as master of ship. After the death of his son WILLIAM he removed back to Salem and became the owner of two fishing vessels. He was Commander of the Province Galley (commissioned 29 Dec. 1702). He was exceedingly comely and greatly beloved by his friends and acquaintances for his friendly and enlivening behavior. "His life is the romantic and thrilling experience of a great mariner", according to the Bible record. Children:

As a young man, BENJAMIN PICKMAN lived four years in Boston with Mr. Atkinson, a merchant, but after he m. he removed to Salem where he became a very successful merchant and ship owner, trading largely with the West Indies. The year after he removed to Salem at the muster held 7 Nov. 1731 he was appointed a Lieutenant in the Essex Regiment. He was elected Representative to the General Court in 1744, serving three years. He was Council of War in 1745 (the period covered by the siege and capture of Louisburg) and the French prisoners brought to Salem were placed under his supervision. He may be considered one of the principal movers in the undertaking so important for the safety and development of New England. Early and late he urged on the campaign and the amount of his subscription to the public loan was only exceeded by that of Col. Pepperell. In recognition of his public services rendered during the war the Province of the Massachusetts Bay presented him a handsome two-handled covered loving cup of solid silver known as the "Montiff." "The gift of the Province of Massachusetts Bay to Benjamine Pickman, Esq., 1749." (A further account of this will be found in the chapter dealing with the siege of Louisburg, pages 21-25.) MR. PICKMAN was highly honored in many ways by the state, county and town. His home residence was one of the notable buildings of Salem. By his great industry and close application to business, with the smiles of heaven, he acquired a most ample fortune and was perhaps the greatest benefactor to the poor of that time in Salem and vicinity. He was deeply interested and had invested heavily in shipping affairs, and by not a few he is considered as the best authority of his day on shipping and foreign trade. His intense interest in the Louisburg campaign touched him personally and was vitally related to his vast fishing interests off the Atlantic coast. He had a number of children, who with their descendants have maintained the honor and distinction of the PICKMAN-HARDY name.

Joseph was a "Shipmaster" and skilled mariner and was deeply interested in his fleet of ships. He gave great promise as a successful business man, and was stricken in the morning of life. He made no will, and the administration of his estate was granted his only son, Joseph, 29 Nov. 1705. His widow married a second time, 6 June 1688, her second husband being Edmund Everyear. She died in Nov., 1705.

Children, all born at Salem, Mass.:

- 13 i. MARY⁴, b. 13 Apr. 1680; d.; m. SAMUEL HOWARD, but of the family we have no further information.

She married, second, 23 Jan. 1711-12, EZEKIEL UPTON of Reading, Mass. JAMES was a mariner and died at the early age of 43. He died intestate, and his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate.

Child:

- 17 i. MARTHA⁴, b. 20 Aug. 1698; d. 23 Dec. 1707.

14. JOSEPH⁴ HARDY (Joseph³, Joseph², John¹), born at Salem, Mass., 20 March 1681-2; died 23 June 1745; married, 25 June 1707, SARAH PICKERING. She was baptized at Salem, Mass., 6 Feb. 1688-9, and died at Salem. She was the daughter of JOHN and SARAH PICKERING, and received by her father's will, dated 20 Nov. 1721, a gift of the house in which she was living, being the same which he bought from Joseph Andrews. It was situated in the southeastern part of the town on the street now called Hardy Street, which runs from Derby Street south toward the harbor; a pear tree flourishing until a recent date has been traced back to 1639.

Joseph Hardy was a very successful ship builder about 1700 and on. He lived on the south side of Hardy Street, near the water; the house was demolished in 1825. He left no sons, but had six married daughters. From the following account of Joseph Hardy's connection with ship-building it appears that he was not always successful in his enterprises. The account is taken from the Ropes Bible, now in possession of Mrs. Charles T. Ripley:

His shipyard was on the beach, off Hardy Street. As he was on the eve of launching a ship she fell over, which sad event took away all his property and he never did any work as he soon had the palsy. He built a large ship at Haverhill which fell over on account of the ground settling and he could never get her off the ways. His affairs thus became greatly embarrassed. He mortgaged a considerable estate in land which he owned in the west part of Salem and was never able to redeem it. Tradition is that he was greatly wronged by this mortgage.

In the Pickering Genealogy, Vol. I, pages 70-76, is an interesting statement concerning Joseph Hardy. It appears that Joseph Hardy was living in Boston in 1713, for it is recorded in a deed of 27 June 1713 that Joseph Hardy and his wife, Sarah, late of Salem, now of Boston, shipwright, sold land to Capt. William Bowditch of Salem. It would seem, however, that this residence was only for a short period and that most of his life was spent in Salem. The street on which he lived was named for the Hardy family, they being the owners of most of the land on which it was located. Some of the property is still owned by Mr. Hardy's descendants, the Phippen family. There are no descendants of Joseph Hardy in the male line, and it seems probable from their pedigree that there are no such descendants of John Hardy, his grandfather. The descendants of Joseph Hardy's daughters are very numerous. (It is worthy of attention here that the above conclusion respecting the male descendants of the original John Hardy is generally accepted.)

Children:

- 18 i. SARAH⁵, b. 26 Feb. 1708-9 at Salem, Mass.; d. 28 Dec. 1784; m. 21 Feb. 1733-4, BENJAMIN MANSFIELD. Salem historians declare that almost nothing further is known of the family.

It appears that MR. MANSFIELD'S married life was very short and that he had three children. The youngest was b. about 1738. His death must have occurred between this date and 29 Dec. 1742, the date of his father's will, which was proved 12 July 1744. In it he gives to BENJAMIN, SARAH and SEETH MANSFIELD, "the children of my son BENJAMINE MANSFIELD, deceased, each of them to have five shillings." So then we have the names of the children and that is all.

- 19 ii. MARTHA⁵, b. 26 Feb. 1710-11; at Salem, Mass., d. 9 Sept. 1769; m. 25 Feb. 1731-2, BENJAMIN GOODHUE. He was b. at Ipswich, Mass., 1 Jul. 1707; d. 20 Jan. 1783 at the age of 76 years, "Noted for his intelligence and patriotism, very prominent and a great advocate of Learning." A worthy and respectable inhabitant of the town, a truly worthy and Christian character. He was a blacksmith by trade. MARTHA'S grandson, JONATHAN GOODHUE of New York, recorded in his journal the following account: "MRS. MARTHA GOODHUE died at Salem and was buried in the southeastern quarter of the Burial Yard called Pickering Hill, where a marble head-stone marks her grave." Both MR and MRS. GOODHUE were members of the church. MR. GOODHUE m. a second time. Children:

- 20 iii. SEETH⁵, b. at Salem, Mass., 7 Feb. 1712-13; d. 26 Sept. 1755; m. 16 Oct. 1736, NATHANIEL PHIPPEN, who was the son of DAVID PHIPPEN, a native of England who came to New England 18 Sept. 1635 and settled in Hingham, Mass. NATHANIEL was his fifth son. There is an interesting tradition in connection with the name SEETH. The Ropes Bible says, "One of my female ancestors had a near relative at sea who was supposed to be lost, and was given up by his friends. Suddenly he appeared among them alive and well and their joy was so great that one of them exclaimed in the word of the Scripture, 'The Lord seeth not as man seeth and my child shall be called Seeth.'" (The PHIPPEN family is one of the most representative and distinguished of those connected with the JOHN HARDY family of Salem which has maintained the Hardy traditions and name down to the present time and HARDY PHIPPEN is now one of the best known and respected physicians of Salem. Unfortunately great difficulty has been encountered in securing accurate data and records until too late to be included in this volume.—The compilers.)

- 22 v. JOHN⁵, b. at Salem, 4 Sept. 1718; d. 18 Nov. 1718.
- 23 vi. MARY⁵, b. at Salem, Mass., 5 Nov. 1719; d. 30 Mar. 1786; m. 5 Jan. 1744-5, ISAAC PEIRCE, who was b. at Boston, Mass., 12 Oct. 1722. Her funeral was from her husband's home on Cambridge St. She was buried in the Peirce family tomb at Copps Hill, Boston, 23 Dec. 1811. JOSEPH HARDY PEIRCE wrote to his father, JOSHUA PEIRCE, at Boston as follows: "Your latest date gives me melancholy information of the decease of my beloved and excellent GRANDFATHER PEIRCE, gone to receive his reward for a life of piety and goodness." ISAAC and MARY PEIRCE were admitted to membership in the Old South Congregational Church of Boston, 1 June 1756. Children:

JOSEPH⁶, b. 25 Dec. 1745; d. 1 Jan. 1828 (named after his mother's grandfather and great-grandfather, all called JOSEPH HARDY); m; 6 Apr. 1771, ANN DAWES, daughter of COL. THOMAS MOTLEY and sister of HON. TATHROP MOTLEY, the historian and minister to England. CAPT. JOSEPH PEIRCE was a graduate of the Boston Latin School. He was a prominent merchant, and man of great integrity. From his personal acquaintance with the leaders of the Revolution and the principal officers of the army, he actively participated in the early events of the war.

CAPT. PEIRCE had fifteen children and two of them bore the name of HARDY. Of these fifteen children, mention here can be made of only one of his sons, MAJOR JOSEPH HARDY PEIRCE⁷, b. 8 Mar. 1773; d. 3 Dec. 1832; m. 1st, 1 Dec. 1791, FRANCES TEMPLE CORDIS; m. 2nd, 16 Aug. 1819, ABBY ROBINSON. He was a man of most elegant appearance. In 1802-5 he was Lieutenant with the rank of Major of the Independent Corps of Cadets, was Aide-de-camp of several governors, Secretary of the Board of War and Clerk of the Municipal Court. In 1824 he was appointed agent for Massachusetts for claims against the general government growing out of the War of 1812. He spent much time in Washington, D. C.

His daughters were celebrated beauties. FRANCES, the eldest, a blonde, was said by Joseph Bonnaparte, who met her at a ball in Boston, to be the handsomest lady he had ever seen in America.

MAJOR PEIRCE and his wife were lost at sea while on a passage from New York to Mobile. They had fifteen children, seven sons and eight daughters. Five daughters of MAJOR JOSEPH HARDY PEIRCE while in Washington attended a great ball given by John Quincy Adams on 8 Jan. 1824, the anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans. In the famous poem "Orlando" describing this brilliant event the PEIRCE sisters were gallantly mentioned, "The PEIRCES with their heavenly faces and eyes like suns that dazzle through." The following lines are from a poem by Thomas Bullfinch, 13 May 1824, apparently dedicated to the sisters on their departure from Washington on board the Zephyr from Alexander to Boston.

“Brave vessel; knowest thou what a freight
Thy gallant timbers soon shall bear?
The famed Venetian bark of State
Ne’er bore a freight so rich and rare,
Fair Delia with the dimpled cheek,
And Marcia with the pensive brow,
And Laura with eyes that speak
Ere from her lips the accents flow,
And Ann, the conqueror of hearts;
With charms at will, a very fairy;
And these arrayed in Beauty’s darts
Hebe (the morals call her Mary).
Brave vessel—may thy oaken sides
Cleave old Potomac’s billowy heart
And homeward speed as swift as glides
The parent swallow to her nest.”

In the Peirce Genealogy, page 59, we find the following:

HARDIES OF WEST LoTHIAN

Abridged from Memoirs of My Ancestors

by Hardy Bartram McCall

Birmingham: Watson & Ball, 1884

West Lothian adjoins Edinburgh on the west. Its principal town is Linlithgow, birthplace of Mary, Queen of Scots. Kinneill, Gogar and Gogarmains are also within its borders.

There was a family of Hardie settled in the parish of Kinneill, in the sheriffdom of Linlithgow, during the sixteenth century, from which the race whose history we are to consider is not improbably derived. James Hardie was served heir of his father, John Hardie, burgess of Edinburgh, in lands called Smithhill and Lintrig, in the barony of Livingston, 20th December, 1609. John Hardie of Riccartoun, and Katherine Wrycht, his wife, were both deceased before June, 1614, their eldest son, Alexander Hardie of Riccartoun, succeeding his father in the lands of Browniswode, in the barony of Kynneil. Alexander died on the 24th of September, 1634, at which time there were several Hardies in and about Borrowstoun. . . .

12. HENRY HARDIE, the first we have seen of the surname in the parish of Corstorphine, near Edinburgh, was tenant of Gogarmains. His name occurs several times in the records about 1690, and he died on 17 May 1694 in the 38th year of his age. His wife was JANET BARON, daughter of JOHN BARON of Preston, and MARION BAIRD, his first wife, and she died at Gogarmains on 5 May 1719, aged 62 years, being buried with her husband in the Gogar churchyard. Their children were:

- 13* i. THOMAS HARDIE.
- 14 ii. JOHN HARDIE.
- 15 iii. ALEXANDER, baptised 19 Aug. 1694; he died unmarried 15 June 1764, aged 69 years.
- 16 iv. JANET HARDIE, baptised 26 Nov. 1685.

13. THOMAS² HARDIE (*Henry*¹).

Thomas Hardie was born at Gogarmains, and baptised 21st December 1687, the witnesses being John Allan and William Muir, farmers in Gogar. He succeeded his father in Gogarmains, where he appears to have lived until after the death of his mother in May, 1719. In the following year he was tenant of West Craigs of Corstorphine, and he continued there until his death, in 1747. He married in July, 1711, Janet Bryce, eldest daughter of William Bryce, tenant of Broxburn, and of Margaret Mowbray, his wife, who died on the 17th May 1754, aged 62 years, and is buried with her husband at Gogar. William Bryce in Broxburn made his will or disposition "Att Linlithgow, the thertie ane day of July, Jmviijc and twinty four years", which mentions his daughter Janet, spouse of Thomas Hardie in West Craigs, and also another daughter, Mary, spouse of James Cunningham, who succeeded his grandfather in Broxburn. Thomas died on the 8th September 1747, in the 60th year of his age, and is buried with his father in the Old Churchyard of Gogar. In the same sacred spot rest the remains of the Barons of Preston, and of Sir Robert and Lady Liston.

His children were:

- 17 i. WILLIAM HARDIE, b. 18 and baptised the 26 March 1714; d. young.
- 18* ii. REV. HENRY HARDIE.

- 19 iii. JAMES HARDIE, b. 30 Aug., and baptised 4 Sept. 1720, succeeded his father in West Craigs, and d. at Currie 12 Dec. 1802. He m. SUSAN YOUNG, who d. 14 Feb. 1772, aged 41 years, and had two sons and one daughter.
- 20 iv. JOHN HARDIE, b. 1 and baptised 11 June 1724, a burghess of Edinburgh, m. and had issue.
- 21 v. THOMAS HARDIE, b. 4 and baptised 7 Aug. 1726; d. young.
- 22 vi. ALEXANDER HARDIE, b. 27 Oct., baptised 3 Nov. 1729.
- 23 vii. ROBERT HARDIE; d. young.
- 24 viii. JANET HARDIE, b. 17 and baptised 24 July 1722.

18. REV. HENRY³ HARDIE (*Thomas*², *Henry*¹).

Rev. Henry Hardie, the eldest surviving son of the foregoing, was born on the first of April, 1716, and baptised on the 10th of the same month, the witnesses being Sir Andrew Myreton of Gogar and William Bryce Strathbrock. He studied for the ministry at the University of Edinburgh, and was licensed by the presbytery on 28th January 1741. Called to the first charge of Culross on the 18th June, in the same year, he was ordained minister of that parish on the 3rd September following, and ministered there for rather more than 10 years, when, after having been laid aside from duty for many months, in consequence of ill health, he died on the 4th May 1752, "universally respected and regretted, having been a faithful and conscientious minister." . . .

The Rev. Mr. Hardie married two years after his settlement at Culross, Anne Halkerston, the younger daughter of John Halkerston of Carskerdo, town-clerk of Culross, and of Janet Ranken, daughter of Ranken of Colden, his wife.

Children:

- 25* i. THOMAS HARDIE.
- 26 ii. JOHN HARDIE, b. 16 and baptised the 21 of Jan. 1750; d. 20 Apr. 1752.
- 27 iii. HENRY HARDIE, b. 10 and baptised 20 Oct. 1751; d. 23 Mar. 1752.
- 28 iv. JANET HARDIE, b. 16 and baptised the 21 Oct. 1744; m. the REV. ROBERT LISTON, minister of Aberdour, and d. 31 Dec. 1814, having issue.
- 29 v. ANN HARDIE, b. 19 and baptised 25 May 1746; d. Oct. 1756.

25. THE REV. THOMAS⁴ HARDY, D.D. (*Henry*³, *Thomas*², *Henry*¹).

The Rev. Thomas Hardy, D.D., was born at Culross on Friday, the 22nd of April 1748, and baptised by Mr. Thomas Stark, the minister of Balmerino, on the 1st May following. His resolution to enter the Church seems to have been formed early in life, for when he was 16 years of age, his mother, in a letter to the Earl of Lauderdale, expresses his desire to renounce the leases which fell to him as heir of his uncle, Alexander Hardy, remarking that "the young man does not seem inclined to turn farmer." . . .

In 1784, Mr. Hardy was called by the Town Council of Edinburgh, to be one of the ministers of the High Church, where he was admitted on the 25th of November in that year. . . .

About this period, in consequence of delicate health, he found it necessary to absent himself for a short time from his duties in Edinburgh, and he undertook a voyage to Lisbon in order to escape the severities of the Northern Winter. On his return in 1786, finding himself unable for so large a place of worship as the High Church, he was at his own request, and with the concurrence of the patrons, translated to the New North Parish, which did not require equal exertion, and where he continued, the colleague of Dr. Gloag, until his death. . . .

On the death of the Rev. Robert Cumming, 1788, Mr. Hardy was elected Regius Professor of Divinity and Church History in the University of Edinburgh. . . .

The date of his appointment to the professorship was the 31st July 1788, and on the 4th October in the same year, he had the degree of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him by the University of Edinburgh. Among the names of many distinguished men who attended his lectures at Edinburgh may be mentioned those of Sir Walter Scott, Henry, Lord Brougham, General Sir Ralph Abercromby, etc.

Dr. Hardy died at his town residence, which is still standing at the corner of Richmond Place and Hill Place on the 21st November 1798, in the 51st year of his age, and in the 25th of his profession as a minister of the Gospel. His remains were honored with a public funeral and were interred in the Canongate Churchyard. . . .

DR. HARDY married, on 28 June 1780, AGNES YOUNG, daughter of the REV. WILLIAM YOUNG, minister of the united parishes of Hutton and Corrie, Dunfries-shire, and sister of ALEXANDER YOUNG of Harburn W. S. They had five sons and four daughters:

- 30 i. HENRY HARDY, b. 27 July 1783; a student for the bar; d. unm.
2 Oct. 1807.

- 31* ii. CAPT. WILLIAM HARDY.
- 32 iii. REV. CHARLES WILKIE HARDY, b. 26 Sept. 1788; was educated for the ministry at the University of Edinburgh. He was ordained minister 23 Apr. 1813 and licensed by the Presbytery of Linlithgow 24 Apr. 1814. He d. in less than a year after his ordination, having caught a severe cold while coming into Edinburgh on the Stirling coach. His death was thus noticed in the Scots Magazine for 1814:

“At Edinburgh, on the 7th February, the Rev. Charles Wilkie Hardie, in the twenty-sixth year of his age, and first of his ministry. Mr. Hardie was the third son of the late Dr. Thomas Hardie of this city, and a young man who, in the estimation of his friends, gave the fairest promise of repairing the loss which the Church of Scotland sustained by the death of his excellent father.”

- 33* iv. THOMAS HARDY, F.R.C.S.
- 34 v. HUGH-BLAIR HARDY, b. 28 Feb. 1796; d. in infancy and was buried in Greyfriars Churchyard, 9 May 1797.

HARDIES OF ABERDEEN

Information Compiled by

Catherine Maley Cuyler Hardie, Washington, D. C., daughter of General James Allen Hardie, U. S. A.

Aberdeen, the "Granite City", also called the "Silver City of the Sea" from the appearance of its buildings when glistening in the sun after rain, is the principal seaport on the northeast of Scotland. It has an extensive export trade. The Cathedral of St. Andrews is the mother church of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. Aberdeen is the seat of Marischal College.

Shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War, two young men of good family, John and James Hardie, natives of Aberdeen, Scotland, came to America. James Hardie was a scholar and writer, at one time a professor in Columbia College and the author of several standard works, among them a history of the State of New York.—Prominent Families of New York, ed., Lyman Horace Weeks.

James Hardie was born in Aberdeen in the year 1750 and died in New York in 1832. He received his education in Marischal College, Aberdeen, and graduated therefrom. For a time he taught navigation on a British man-of-war. He became an inmate of the family of Professor James Beattie, as secretary or tutor or both, and after a time Dr. Beattie suggested to Hardie that he emigrate to New York and gave him letters of introduction to his friends. He took his A.B. at Columbia in 1787 and in 1790 the degree of A.M. In 1787 he and John Campbell opened an evening Academy at 3 Little Queen Street, but a month later Hardie gave this up and opened a public school at 3 Broad Street. . . .—Biographical Register of St. Andrews Society of the State of New York, Vol. I, 1705-1806, by William M. MacBean, LL.D., New York, 1922.

The following contemporary newspaper notices refer to a school at another location:

James Hardie, Professor of Columbia College. The examination of the young gentlemen under the care of the Messrs. Hardie and Duncan will commence at their school room, No. 9 Gold Street, tomorrow, at 10 o'clock, where their parents and guardians and such gentlemen as are interested in the progress of their scholars, are earnestly requested to attend.—Daily Advertiser, Monday, January 25, 1790.

From the following, which appeared in the Advertiser four days later, we may judge that the young men gave a good account of themselves:

The young gentlemen of Mr. Hardie's Grammar School were on Tuesday and Wednesday last examined in the Greek and Latin languages in the presence of the Reverend of the Clergy and Professors of Columbia College, and a number of the most respectable of the inhabitants of the city who were unanimous in their approbation of the industry of the teacher and the proficiency of the pupils.—Daily Advertiser, January 29, 1790.

James Hardie was a prolific and versatile writer. Among his numerous works still extant are the following:

The new universal biographical dictionary, and American remembrancer of departed merit, containing . . . accounts of the . . . most prominent persons in every age and nation, but . . . especially . . . in America. New York: Johnson and Stryker, 1801-2. 4 vols.

Selectae e Veteri Testamento historiae ad usum eorum qui Latinae linguae. . . . New York: J. Oram, 1801, ix, 157 pp.

An account of the malignant fever which prevailed in the City of New York, during the autumn of 1805. . . . New York: Southwick and Hardcastle, 1805, vii, 9-196 pp.

Description of the City of New York . . . its population, institutions, commerce, manufactures, public buildings, courts of justice, places of amusement, to which is prefixed a brief account of its first settlement . . . and history . . . New York: S. Marks, 1827 (8), 360 pp.

Mr. Hardie was married. His wife went to Scotland in 1828, and, so far as is known, did not return to America.

In his last years Mr. Hardie held a position with the Board of Health. He is said to have encountered the yellow fever in its most malignant form with consummate bravery during its several visitations after 1795. He died of cholera in 1832.

50. JOHN HARDIE was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, 1 May 1767 and died in Sharon, Conn. He came to America about 1788. He married at Fishkill, N. Y., 29 Oct. 1789, ELENE BOGARDUS, "a direct descendant of the famous ANNEKE JANS by her second husband, DOMINIE EVERHARDUS BOGARDUS (her first husband having been a member of the princely house of Orange), the exceedingly prominent place which she occupies in the ancestry of many New York families of distinction being well known, while her gifts to Trinity Church, it is needless to say, created the prosperity of that corporation."—Prominent Families in New York (1897), by Lyman Horace Weeks. ELENE BOGARDUS was the daughter of MATTHEW BOGARDUS; was born circ. 1769; died at Sharon, Conn., 14 Apr. 1801; buried in the Sharon Burying Ground, now called Hillside Cemetery. Children:

- 61* i. A daughter who married JAMES MALCOLM.

55. ALLEN WARDWELL HARDIE, born Sharon, Conn., 24 Nov. 1799; died Dubuque, Iowa, 25 May 1850.

He was prominent in Politics and business in New York City and State, and operated largely in lands, having offices both in Albany and New York. He was an old-fashioned Democrat, possessed great influence in the Hudson River counties, and was the intimate associate of the prominent statesmen of his time, including President Van Buren, the Honorable Gulian Verplanck, and others of similar eminence. He was also Captain of the Ninth Regiment, New York State Artillery Militia, his commission by Dewitt Clinton, Governor of the State of New York, being preserved among the family papers. His correspondence with various prominent statesmen of the time was also very extensive and was conducted on a footing which indicates not only confidence and intimacy, personal and political, but also shows the respect which men of that standing entertained for him.—Prominent Families of New York.

In 1834, Mr. Hardie, with a residence at Montrose, N. Y., was agent for a company of gentlemen in New York who had formed the idea of laying out a village at Verplanck's Point. The property was bought and the development of Verplanck's was accomplished. It became one of the most important shipping points on the Hudson River. In the panic of 1837, however, the company interested in this project became embarrassed, and the undertaking was suspended for a time. About this time Allen Wardwell Hardie gave up his lovely home at Montrose, and his son, James Allen Hardie, then traveling abroad with a tutor, was recalled.

Allen Wardwell Hardie married Caroline Cock at Jamaica, L. I., 28 July 1822. The ceremony was performed in Grace Church by the Rev. Gilbert Sayres. Caroline Cock was born in New York City 11 May 1801. She was the daughter of Gabriel and Phoebe (Birdsell) Cock of Matinecock, L. I., and the granddaughter of Hezekiah Cock and Roseannah Coles, daughter of George Townsend and Roseannah Coles.

His wife . . . belonged to a well-known Quaker family of Long Island, the Cocks of Oyster Bay. She was present at the reception given by the Society of New York to the Marquis de Lafayette on September 10, 1826, her card of invitation being also preserved among the family archives, with other interesting mementoes of the early social life of the city, in which Mrs. Hardie was prominent. The family residence was then in Cortlandt Street.—Prominent Families of New York.

She died in New York at the home of her son-in-law, William P. O'Connor, 161 West 13 Street, 7 April 1875. Children:

- 63 ii. GILBERT WILLETT HARDIE, b. 25 Dec. 1825; d. in infancy.

"He . . . was baptized at old St. Ann's Church, Fishkill-on-Hudson, where the family at that time had a country seat. He was named after the famous Bishop Wainwright, the rector of old Grace Church, Broadway and Rector Street, of which his parents were attendants and pew holders.

"His education was received principally at St. John's School, Varick Street, over which Dr. Wainwright, then rector of St. John's Chapel, presided as founder and patron. His business career, commenced with the Commercial Mutual Marine Insurance Company, at the time of its organization, and after many years' service in various positions, latterly as the Company's Vice-President, he retired for rest and recreation and made an extended tour in Europe. Mr. Hardie is unmarried; he resides at 8 East Twelfth Street, and devotes himself to business and the affairs of charitable organizations.

"Members of the families of Mr. Hardie's mother and grandmother fought in the Revolutionary War and in the War of 1812. In the war between the States a distinguished representative was furnished in the person of a brother (62) of the subject of this article."—Prominent Families of New York.

Thomas, William S. Rosecrans, Don Carlos Buell, John Pope and John Newton. Among those who entered after he did were Generals McClellan, Hancock, Reño, Fitz John Porter, Sturgis, "Stonewall" Jackson, Kirby Smith, and George E. Mason, remained among his life-long friends.

His military record is as follows: 2nd Lieut. 3rd Artillery, 8 May 1846; 1st Lieut., 3 March 1847; Capt. 3rd Artillery, 5 Oct. 1857; transferred to 5th Artillery, 15 May 1861; Major and Assistant General, 19 Feb. 1863; Colonel and Inspector General, 24 March 1864; Major 1st New York Volunteers, 26 Oct. 1848. He was detailed to service at the United States Military Academy as Assistant Professor of Geography, History and Ethics, 1844-45.

In the fall of 1863 Secretary Stanton made his then famous trip to meet General Grant and fix upon a plan to combine all the military forces and operations in the Southwest under one head, and since it was necessary, in the absence of Assistant Secretary Watson, to have someone designated under the sign manual of the President, to perform the duties of Secretary of War at Washington, he drew up and the President signed the following instrument:

Lieutenant Col. Hardie is authorized to perform the duties of Secretary of War during the temporary absence of the Secretary and Assistant Secretary.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Col. Hardie held this appointment until the return of Secretary Stanton. Recorded 1896 (original order) No. 3441, War Department, and No. 34880, Adjutant General's Department. HARDIES OF ROXBURGHSHIRE

By Dr. George Robert Hardie

Roxburghshire is on the southern border of Scotland. Its name is derived from the castle and former Royal burgh of Roxburgh, which were situated on the peninsula between the Teviot and the Tweed. The castle was razed in 1640, and all traces of the town have been obliterated. Kelso has succeeded to its former prestige. St. James' fair, named after the patron saint of Roxburgh, is still held on the site of the town annually on the fifth of August.

Roxburghshire is a prosperous agricultural region. The soil is fertile and is cultivated with a high degree of thoroughness and intelligence. The entire section is rich in monuments of archeological, historical and literary interest. All the "Scott Country" is saturated with tradition. Within its borders are the four ruined abbeys, Kelso, Dryburgh, Jedburgh and Melrose. Kelso Abbey, founded in 1128, became wealthy and powerful, so that it asserted precedence over even St. Andrew's. It was destroyed in 1545.

The stone bridge at Kelso, by Rennie, is said to have been the model of Waterloo Bridge in London. In Kelso is also Floors Castle, principal residence of the dukes of Roxburghe. The eighth duke married an American, Miss May Goelet. Here, too, is Springwood Park, seat of the house of Douglas, renowned for their part in Scottish history. The late baronet, Sir George Douglas, a democratic and cultured gentleman, much honored and beloved, was an author of note. He died while this volume was in press. James Thomson, author of The Seasons, was born in the former manse at Ednam, where a shaft has been erected in his honor. Horatius Bonar, the hymn writer, was minister at Kelso for more than thirty years, and Sir Walter Scott lived there for a time in his boyhood.

116. ROBERT HARDIE, Harden, Oxnam, Roxburghshire, married ISABELLA FAMILTON. They had at least two children:

- 117* i. WILLIAM HARDIE; b. 19 Oct. 1783. Identical with the WILLIAM next mentioned (?).
- 118 ii. MARGARET HARDIE, b. 29 Apr. and baptised 15 June 1788. (Oxnam Parish Register, now preserved in Edinburgh.)

117. WILLIAM HARDIE lived for a time in Edinburgh (Penicuik) about the time of his marriage and was in business there. During this period he "conditioned a man" (became surety for him) and was required to make good the amount. After this loss, he returned to Roxburghshire, where he lived during the remainder of his life. He died 14 Sept. 1855 at Springwood Park, Kelso, and was buried near Kelso Abbey.

He married, at Jedburgh, Janet Fisher, who was born 1787, daughter of John (?) and Margaret (McNab) Fisher. She is said to have belonged to the Stewart clan. 127. JAMES³ HARDIE (*William*², *Robert*¹), born 8 June 1827 at Harpertown, Kelso, Scotland. He lived as a boy at Old Graden, Kelso, and went to school at Yetholm. For a time after his marriage he was overseer of the estate of Sir James Colquhoun, head of the Colquhoun Clan, at Rossdhu, Luss, on Loch Lomond. In 1857 he came to America and settled near other members of the family and others of Scotch descent in Gouverneur, N. Y., where in course of time he came to own two adjoining farms. In 1876 he moved to Ogdensburg, N. Y., and in 1879 to Canton, N. Y., where he had purchased a business block and what was subsequently known as the Hardie Farm on the West Potsdam Road. In the block he operated a knit goods factory, and he made his home on the farm, where he died 29 May 1900. At Jedburgh he married JESSIE TELFER, born 5 Feb. 1826, daughter of WILLIAM and ELIZABETH (BROWN) TELFER of Bowden, St. Boswells, Roxburghshire. WILLIAM TELFER died at Bowden on 29 March 1883, aged 85 years. ELIZABETH BROWN, his wife, died at Bowden on 3 April 1886, aged 83 years. They are buried in Bowden Churchyard. The interesting old Bowden Church, built in 1128, has recently been restored with good taste and regard for its original architecture. Between Bowden and Melrose lie the Eildon Hills (Trimontium of the Romans). On the slope of one of the Eildons is a notable example of the hill-forts of the ancient Britons.

The Telfers trace descent from Norman ancestry. A bard and warrior of the name (Taillefer) is reputed to have accompanied the Norman army to England in 1066 and to have obtained from William the Conqueror permission to strike the first blow at the Battle of Hastings. (Encyc. Brit. s. v. Taillefer.)

After a preliminary attack by the archers and foot, the knights came forward, preceded by the minstrel Taillefer, "a jongleur whom a very brave heart ennobled", qui mult bien chantout, throwing his sword in the air and catching it as he sang—

Of Roland and of Charlemagne,
Oliver and the vassals all
Who fell in fight at Roncevals.

—Haskins, The Normans in European History, pp. 79, 80.

Jessie Telfer Hardie came to America with her husband, lived the remainder of her life in this country, and died at Canton, N. Y., 29 Jan. 1900. Children:

- 259 i. ELISABETH JANE HARDIE was born in Scotland in 1854. As an infant she lived with her parents on Loch Lomond, and she came with them to America. Attended Gouverneur (N. Y.) Wesleyan Seminary. She married WILLIAM JOHN LEVIS, a druggist of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and she died at Canton, N. Y., 14 June 1889. Her husband married a second time and died at Dolgeville, N. Y.
- 260* ii. WILLIAM C. HARDIE.
- 261* iii. JAMES GILBERT HARDIE.
- 262* iv. GEORGE ROBERT HARDIE.

260. WILLIAM C.⁴ HARDIE (*James*³, *William*², *Robert*¹), born in Macomb, N. Y., 7 July 1857. He was educated at Gouverneur, N. Y., and Ogdensburg, N. Y. Taught a rural school in the town of Oswegatchie, N. Y. There he met HENRIETTA GIFFIN, daughter of GEORGE and ARABELLA (PITCHER) GIFFIN, whom he married 4 Oct. 1884. She was born 21 Nov. 1866, and died in New York 21 June 1912. Most of their married life they lived in Orange, N. J., and in New York. In early life WILLIAM learned stenography and held secretarial positions. Later he had an office supply business in New York and was associated in business with his brother JAMES. He died in New York 23 Sept. 1922. One son:

- 263 i. STANLEY GIFFIN HARDIE, b. 1 May 1886, at Hartford, Conn.; unm. A dealer in precious stones at 15 Maiden Lane, New York.

261. JAMES G. HARDIE, born 24 Feb. 1859; died at Canton, N. Y., 29 Mar. 1934. For some years after the family moved to Canton, he operated the home farm, but for many years before his death, he lived mostly in New York. He was unmarried. He was an inventor and designer of printers' and other machinery, some of which he manufactured and placed on the market. Shortly before his death, he had submitted plans for cheap municipal housing in New York. The Commercial Advertiser (Canton, N. Y.) said of him:

Mr. Hardie was an interesting man—the serious type. Very much devoted to his work, though very friendly of approach. He knew machinery, the possibilities of the lever. He had what might be termed a mechanical sense, a mechanical eye that showed at a glance the fault lying in the machine that just fell short of truth. For many years he was interested in water power and read much in many books and magazines of water power. It is interesting that the moment when the end came Thursday morning a book on water power which he had been reading was open where he read. . . . And in his work he was persistent to the end, never losing faith in what he sought, continued improvement in designing the machines he worked on.

262. GEORGE ROBERT⁴ HARDIE (*James*³, *William*², *Robert*¹), born at Gouverneur, N. Y., 10 Sept. 1869. He prepared for college at Canton, N. Y., and attended St. Lawrence University, from which he received the degrees B.A. (1890) and M.A. (1892). Defiance College conferred on him (1931) the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Immediately after graduation, he taught Latin and Greek at Clinton Liberal Institute, Fort Plain, N. Y. He then went to Harvard for further study, and he also studied at the University of Chicago. While still at Harvard (1892), he was recalled to St. Lawrence to become head of the Department of Latin, a position which he held for twenty-five years.

Professor Hardie had brought with him from Harvard new ideas and new methods which were, in the course of a few years, to bring about marked changes. . . . The ancient languages were no longer set before the student as mere disciplinary studies, which he took as a child does medicine, on the assurance that it is good for him, though with a wry face. The aim henceforth was to study the classic masterpieces as literature—as one does those of any language. It was also sought to awaken the interest of the student in the historical conditions, and in the spirit and institutions of the remarkable people that produced these great works. . . . It is not too much to say that the study of Latin took on a new meaning under Professor Hardie. . . . It was now felt that more adequate provision must be made for training the undergraduates in the use of English, especially during the first year. The outcome was the organization of the admirable course in Freshman English conducted by Professor Hardie, first announced in the catalogue of 1903-4; and the good results were immediate and manifest. . . . Instruction in fine arts was inaugurated by Professor Hardie in 1898, and speedily proved successful in a remarkable degree; as conducted by him this department is accounted one of the most valuable, as it is manifestly one of the most popular, of the newer features of the curriculum.—Sixty Years of St. Lawrence (1916), Chaps. XIV, XV.

On two occasions Professor Hardie was one of a committee in charge of administration when the university was without a president. In 1917 he resigned his position to go into business, but later he returned to educational work. In 1922 he became a member of the New York State Education Department in charge of qualifying certificates and the certification of high school teachers. He remained in this position for five years. In 1927 he was asked to take charge of the establishment and organization of Long Island University in Brooklyn. He was its first executive head with the title of Dean. From its inception he had oversight of its affairs, and in five years under his guidance the institution was built up until it had more than fifteen hundred students and a faculty of over a hundred. During his administration Dr. Hardie assembled a faculty, took the lead in planning a body of instruction, had charge of the purchase, reconstruction and equipment of an adequate building, won friends for the university, and made it favorably known throughout the East and Middle West. He retired in 1932. He is listed in Who's Who in America, Presidents of American Colleges and Universities, Leaders in Education, Betas of Achievement. A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Beta Theta Pi. Permanent mail address: Canton, N. Y.

He married Jessie Dell Stearns, daughter of Spencer Henry and Lois Lorena (Marsh) Stearns, born at Stockholm Depot (later named Winthrop), N. Y., 28 May 1874. The marriage took place on 2 July 1901, in the First Universalist Church, Winthrop, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Lewis B. Fisher, D.D., of St. Lawrence University, afterward president of Lombard College. Mrs. Hardie is descended from early colonial ancestry. She traces direct descent from Isaac Stearns, who sailed from Yarmouth, England, on the ship Arabella, in company with Sir Richard Saltonstall, Governor Bradford and others, and arrived in Salem, Mass., on 12 June 1630. Isaac Stearns became one of the first settlers of Watertown, Mass., and was selectman for several years. Among other colonial ancestors on her father's side are Joseph Hawley, who came to America from England in 1629, and George Holmes, who was born in Nazing, England, in 1594 and came to America about 1637. Her great-great-grandfather, Stephen Holmes, took part in the Battle of Bennington in the Revolution and also in the Battle of Plattsburg in the War of 1812. On her mother's side she is descended from William Marsh, who was in Plainfield, Conn., as early as 1675, and from James Morgan, born in Wales in 1607, fourth son of William Morgan, born in Wales in 1571, who sailed from Bristol, England, and arrived at Boston in 1636. See Stearns Genealogy and Memoirs, by Mrs. Avis (Stearns) Van Wagenen; Holmes Genealogy, by Gray; The Hawley Record, by Elias Sill Hawley; a pamphlet published in 1886 including the line of William Marsh of Plainfield, Conn. (in Conn. State Library, Hartford); A History of the Family of Morgan from the Year 1089 to Present Times, by James Appleton Morgan.

Mrs. Hardie received from St. Lawrence University the degrees B.A. summa cum laude (1897) and M. A. (1900). Member of Phi Beta Kappa and Kappa Kappa Gamma. She is also a member of Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of 1812, Daughters of the Revolution, National Society of New England Women, Brooklyn Woman's Club, and Civitas and The Chaminade of Brooklyn. She was for four years Kings County Chairman of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, and she has been a Councilor of the Phi Beta Kappa Alumnae in New York. While living in Albany she was Chairman of the Department of Parliamentary Law of the Woman's Club of Albany and, as vice-president of the club, chairman of its Municipal Welfare Department.

MEMORIAL TABLET TO BAILIE JOHN HARDIE

The Founder of the Hawick Hosiery Trade

There has recently been inserted, by the Hawick Callants' Club, in the front wall of the premises at 37 High Street, the property of Mr. John E. H. Scott, chemist, a mural tablet to the memory of Bailie John Hardie, the founder of the hosiery trade in Hawick. One of the objects of the Club is to perpetuate the memories of worthy townsmen, and the club, largely on the initiative of ex-Councillor James C. Bonsor, who was president last year, decided to mark the site of the house in which that notable townsman lived and died.

The tablet, which is of brass, bears the following inscription:

"IN HIS HOUSE ON THIS SITE, LIVED AND DIED BAILIE JOHN HARDIE, WHO IN 1771 FOUNDED THE HOSIERY INDUSTRY IN HAWICK. THIS MEMORIAL WAS PLACED HERE BY THE HAWICK CALLANTS' CLUB, 1933."

While there is not much known regarding Bailie Hardie, who was a member of a very old Hawick family, it is recorded that he commenced the manufacture of stockings in 1771—163 years ago. He is stated to have begun with four frames, and his yearly output at first was something like 2,000 pairs of hose. At that time stockings were woven of linen or worsted, but subsequently of lambswool. . . .

Bailie John Hardie was born in 1722, and died in 1800, and the dust of several generations of Hardies rests in St. Mary's Churchyard. The family burying ground is close to the gate leading from the stairs in Kirkstile, into the Churchyard. . . .

The action of the Hawick Callants' Club in seeking to preserve the memory of such a notable citizen as Bailie John Hardie should meet with general approval, because it may be said that to a considerable extent he laid the foundation of the success of his native town. Begun in a humble way, the Hawick hosiery trade has developed in a remarkable manner, and brought a large measure of prosperity to the burgh. It may be mentioned that Bailie Hardie was five times Chief Magistrate of Hawick.—Hawick Express, 2 Aug. 1934.

PROVOST THOMSON OF JOHNSTONE AND HIS ANCESTORS, THE HARDIES OF HAWICK

George Thomson, Provost of Johnstone, has always had a warm side to his native town, and now he is going to erect a drinking fountain in Drumlanrig Square. The worthy Provost is a scion of some of the oldest and most notable families in Hawick, besides the one whose name he bears. By his mother's side he is at once off the Olivers and Hardies—the Hardies of the Wynd. At one time nearly all the Kirkwynd belonged to the Hardies. The Hardies seem to have been born to command, for there is a long line of Bailies in the family. Indeed some of them did not hesitate to assert themselves as being of the Royal House of Denmark. Be that as it may, some of them in the olden time were no doubt "ill to keep in order", yet when the Hardies were elevated to the magistracy they were foremost and fearless in the preservation of order. At a far back Common-Riding when there was a sort of rebellion by the young men of the town, Bailie Robert Hardie mounted on horseback and carried the colour through the town in spite of the insurgents, some of whom were arrested and laid in jail.

There was another uproar among the people at another Common-Riding, on which occasion the heroism of a Hardie again asserted the authority of the law, and put himself at the head of affairs. An opposition had been chosen by the lads of the town who determined that he should ride the boundaries of the burgh. Consequently on the eventful morn the two parties met at the West Port, and there Bailie Hardie drew up his horse and dared any of the insurgents to pass the Port before the regularly appointed cornet, and told them that he (the Bailie) was there to protect the peace and character of the town, and swore by the G - d that made him that he would suit the action to the word if need be, and he did so far on the foremost rebels, spurring his horse forward to lead the way. Bailie Hardie with one blow by his oaken rung felled him to the ground. This Bailie Hardie was the founder of the hosiery trade in Hawick. Not only as bailies but also as citizens did the Hardies (like the bailie just referred to) distinguish themselves, for one of them, a merchant, was a free trader, and got some of the burdens of merchants removed by the Scottish Parliament.

On another occasion when the county officials sought to impose a tax on merchandise at Hawick Fair, James Hardie, merchant, felled five officers flat on the ground with his oaken club. At length the leader of the officers drew his sword and flashed it in Hardie's face, and so a combat of sword and cudgel ensued, in which strokes and stabs were given. At last Hardie with his club shivered to pieces the sword of his adversary.

The Hardies were intermarried with other leading local families, such as Olivers, Elliots, Aitkens, and Swans. . . .—From a newspaper cutting dated September, 1897.

HAWICK COMMON-RIDING

The old and at one time necessary custom of riding the marches owing to lack of fences and walls has retained its hold upon the citizens of Hawick, and seems destined to go down to future generations. This is no doubt largely owing to the fact that the ancient history of the town, as evidenced by its famous war-cry, is enshrined in the comparatively modern custom. The slogan of Teribus ye Teri-odin clearly throws its history back to Pagan times, and many of the time-honoured ceremonies confirm this, such as the procession at sunrise to the Moat, the wearing of oak leaves, and the date of the festival, near the summer solstice—the time of the Beltane fires. The modern songs which are wedded to the ancient tune brings back the gloomy memories of Flodden only to brighten up the bravery of the young men who avenged that fatal field and preserved their inheritance from further plunder. These songs have done more than anything else to keep alive the old clan feeling, and to serve as a rallying cry for Teries in all parts of the world. The annual festival at which they are sung keeps the youngest of the inhabitants in touch with the old traditions, and welds the inhabitants together in a way almost unknown in any other town of its size. . . .

THE CORNET AND COMMON-RIDING CEREMONIES

Any young unmarried man of the town is eligible for cornet, although in former times it was reserved for Burgesses and their sons. At the May meeting of the Town Council a list of names chosen by the old Cornets is laid before the Councillors, and it is understood that the first name submitted is chosen. As soon as the election is made the Burgh Officers, accompanied by the Drums and Fifes, call at the dwelling of the Cornet-elect with the written decision of the authorities, and receive his written acceptance. From this time the Cornet is the leader and center of the various ceremonies. . . .

“Teribuss, ye Teri Odin,
Sons of heroes slain at Flodden,
Imitating Border bowmen, Aye defend your rights and Common.”

—Hawick Common-Riding. Kennedy's Common-Riding Song Book, Hawick: W. & J. Kennedy.

In 1706 a Bailie Hardie was Cornet of the Hawick Common-Riding and in 1830 Oliver Hardie. The drums and fifes now used at the annual celebration were presented in 1930 by the grandsons of the latter, Oliver and Thomas Mason Hardie (Nos. 291, 292), to commemorate the centenary of his cornetship.

The following line of descent is taken from the family Bible of John Hardie.

287. JOHN HARDIE, Newcastle carrier, born in Hawick in 1726; died 1780, aged 54. He was a public carrier between Hawick and Newcastle before the time of the railroads. He had a son:

288. JOHN HARDIE, farmer, born in Hawick in 1763; died 1838, aged 75; also another son, GEORGE. This JOHN HARDIE had four sons:

- 289
- i. OLIVER HARDIE, farmer, b. in Hawick, 4 Jan. 1801; d. 21 Oct. 1868. He was Cornet of the Hawick Common-Riding in 1830.
 - ii. ROBERT HARDIE, LL.D., b. 4 Sept. 1803; d. 24 Sept. 1837, aged 34. He was a medical missionary. Died at Berbice, S. A.
 - iii. JAMES HARDIE, shoemaker in Hawick, b. 8 Nov. 1805; d. 21 July 1809, aged 69.
 - iv. JOHN HARDIE, b. 13 July 1809; d. 1893, aged 84, at West Troy, N. Y., U. S. A.

The eldest of these four sons, OLIVER HARDIE, married MARGARET HOGG, born 9 May 1807; died 11 Feb. 1885. They had ten children, of whom the youngest was:

- 296 i. JOSEPH HARDIE, unm.; lived and d. at Kinross, having established a manufacturing plant.

298. JOHN HARDIE, born in Scotland 6 March 1797; died at Thornhill, Talladega County, Ala., 7 Aug. 1848. Early in life he had ambition to rise in the world. In Nov., 1816, he left his home at Kinross and went to Edinburgh to seek work. After five months there as a salesman, he had saved enough to take passage for America. He left Scotland 16 May 1817 and arrived in New York in July. He at once secured a place at which to stay, even before going to see the widow of his uncle, JAMES HARDIE, and he did not accept her invitation to make his home with her family. He did, however, see them nearly every day. His life is a very interesting one as told by his grandson, BENJAMIN PALMER LEWIS, in the book, John Hardie of Thornhill. The information

1. From Benjamin Palmer Lewis, John Hardie of Thornhill (condensed), with consent of the author; supplemented by information given by Benjamin Palmer Lewis; Mrs. Hardeman S. Meade, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. William Hardie, Auburn, Ala.; Mrs. Seth Miller and Mrs. Hardy Greenwood, Dallas, Texas; and Miss Grace Walton Hardie, New York; as recorded by Mrs. George R. Hardie, New York.

in this book was obtained mostly from letters written by JOHN HARDIE to his father and mother and brothers and sisters in Scotland.

He did not stay long in New York. He was advised that, because of high living expenses, it was not a good place for a young man to make a start. Being told that Richmond, Va., was likely to offer a good opening, he went there and was employed there for a time at only a moderate salary. He left Richmond and went to Huntsville, Alabama Territory, to have charge of a store. By the summer of 1819, only two years after coming to America, with what he had accumulated and a loan of 100£ from Scotland, he had a capital of $1,200, the practical equivalent of $20,000 today.

It was not long before he was writing home to Scotland that he was a partner "with men of wealth and respectability." He had moved ten miles south of Huntsville to Ditto's Landing, on the Tennessee River, to be in business with the firm of White & Read. Here John opened the first mercantile establishment in this place. Profits were 50% to 100%. After a few years, the firm of White & Read was dissolved and the firm of White & Hardie established. Under this arrangement John received a salary of $800 a year, besides having a half interest in the business, each of the partners having put in $5,000 capital.

Times were getting better. The price of cotton was rising. The name of Ditto's Landing was changed to Whitesburg in honor of John's partner. Mr. White lived in Virginia. From the time of coming to Huntsville, John had large responsibilities. He was constantly hoping and expecting to see the time when his business affairs would be so arranged that he could make a trip home to Scotland to see his parents and brothers and sisters. It was a great sorrow to him to hear of the death of his father and later of the passing of his mother. He had also looked forward to taking his wife with him, so that the family might see her. He had written home, "I must just do as things will do with me", and it was not to be that he should ever return to Scotland.

In 1828 John Hardie married Mary Meade Hall, daughter of Rev. Isaac Hall, who had moved south from Virginia. John and Mary set up housekeeping at Whitesburg. Their children were:

- 305* i. JOHN TIMONS HARDIE.
- 306* ii. JAMES WHITE HARDIE.
- 307* iii. MARY ISABELLA HARDIE.
- 308* iv. JOSEPH HARDIE.
- 309* v. ROBERT ALEXANDER HARDIE.
- 310* vi. WILLIAM TIPTON HARDIE.
- 311* vii. ALVA FINLEY HARDIE.
- 312* viii. ANNIE ELIZA HARDIE.
- 313* ix. THOMAS CHALMERS HARDIE.

John had all along had in mind sometime to be in business for himself. In 1835 he moved with his family from Whitesburg to Talladega County, Ala. Here he purchased 1,700 acres of land on Talladega Creek and built a fine house. He named the place Thornhill, after his old home in Scotland, Talladega Valley being almost a replica of Kinross. The battleground where General Jackson defeated the Creeks at the Battle of Talladega is near by. Here John was not only a planter, with over fifty slaves, but he also had a store in Mardisville, about one and one-half miles from Thornhill. He could not entirely free himself from being a merchant. His business with Mr. White had been satisfactorily settled in 1834, but most likely the firm had not been dissolved, for John continued to make business trips from Talladega to Whitesburg.

He was a very religious man and was active in the Presbyterian Church. Mary, his wife, although a daughter of a Methodist minister, after marriage joined the Presbyterian Church. His six elder sons grew up to be elders in the church and the youngest was a deacon.

Although John of Thornhill had much Scotch thrift, he was nevertheless generous. The story is told that he asked a drunkard why he was ruining himself by drink and causing his family so much misery. The other replied that he did it in order to forget his debts, which kept him awake nights. John told him that if he would give up drink he would give him the money to pay his debts, which he did. The man kept his word to drink no more and finally paid back what John had given him. Another example of his generosity was refusing to accept his share of his father's estate, and instead writing to his brothers to divide it in a certain way among his sisters.

In politics John was a Whig. He was much opposed to the Mexican War. He did not live to see the Civil War, in which his sons fought in the Confederate Army, but he did early foresee the attempt to dissolve the Union. In the summer of 1848 he made a trip of one hundred miles on horseback to Wetumpka, thence by boat to Mobile. Upon his return, this trip was followed by another of several hundred miles on horseback. After returning from this second arduous journey, he was taken down with a slow fever, probably malaria, and he died 7 Aug. 1848.

During the war Mary (Hall) Hardie bravely carried on. She read the service, and she conducted Sunday School when the superintendent was absent at the front. For four years she grew cotton and wool, spun thread, wove cloth, and cut and made clothes for her six sons in the Confederate Army and for other members of her household, including fifty servants. At the close of the war, all the horses, cattle and other livestock, and all the produce at Thornhill were seized by the Federal troops, and over fifty slaves were freed. The Hardie boys came back from the war and by hard work made good and rose to abundance, success and happiness in their different vocations. The slaves had been so well treated that, even though freed, many of them refused to leave and clung to the homes of the children of the master and mistress they had loved.

Not only did Mary Hall Hardie raise her own children, but she adopted and raised to womanhood two nieces, daughters of her sister, Martha (Hall) Willis:

- 314 i. CORNELIA G. WILLIS, who m. U. S. SENATOR JOHN T. MORGAN of Nicaragua Canal and Behring Sea Treaty fame.
- 315 ii. PERSIA S. WILLIS, who m. JUDGE A. B. LEBISSE of Shreveport, La.

On 18 Feb. 1872 Mary (Hall) Hardie, surrounded by all her children, passed away and was buried beside her husband at Thornhill. About fifty of their grandchildren grew to manhood and womanhood.

305. JOHN TIMONS HARDIE, eldest son of JOHN and MARY (HALL) HARDIE, was born in Huntsville, Ala., in 1829; he died in 1895.

Succeeding his father in mercantile life, he conducted the business on his own account in Talladega, the family home, until the spring of 1853, when he removed to New Orleans, La., and organized the cotton commission firm of John T. Hardie and Co., building up a large and prosperous business, which still continues (1894) under the same firm name, never having had a single obligation dishonored. From the beginning to the close of the Civil War, Mr. Hardie rendered efficient service in the Confederate Army. In 1854 he was united in marriage with Ann Eliza Gary of Alabama, nine children being born to them, of whom four are married and settled in life. Mr. Hardie was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church at Talladega when but twenty years of age. Subsequently in 1860 he was installed in the same office in the First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La. As an estimate of his character we quote from the words of one who knew him:

"Upon the foundation of an original Scotch firmness was planted a strong religious faith. Under the pressure of heavy responsibilities early imposed, these were consolidated into a character against which temptation made no way. His opinions soon ripened into convictions which became part of his nature and entered into every fibre of his being. It is thus men become impregnable in virtue—the pillars of strength on which society may lean for support, living witnesses to the world of the supreme value of religious principle."

Mr. Hardie has been a trustee of the Tulane University of Louisiana from its organization. He is a member of the board of liquidation of the city debt, and a director in several banks and insurance companies.—National Cyclopedia of American Biography, v. 7, p. 26.

Upon retiring from active business at the age of forty, Mr. Lewis bought Thornhill for a summer home. FROM "THE SCOTSMAN", 4 SEPTEMBER, 1916

To his many friends in artistic circles in Scotland to whom he was personally known, and to a wider public extending all over the world who knew him through his work, the news of the death of Mr. Charles Martin Hardie, R.S.A., will bring a feeling of sorrow and loss. Two days ago a heart affection caused some anxiety to Mr. Hardie's friends. Yesterday the symptoms became more acute, and he passed away, somewhat suddenly, in the course of the day.

By two of his pictures alone Mr. Hardie achieved fame such as, in its widespread character, has fallen to the lot of few artists. Wherever there are Scotsmen, his picture of Burns reading his poems before the Duchess of Gordon, and his other picture of the meeting of Burns and Scott, have aroused a sense of admiration and indebtedness to their creator. Mr. Hardie combined a strong historical sense, a feeling for significant and dramatic incident, and a sense of character with a facility of rendition and expression which made him the lineal successor of Sir David Wilkie and the Scottish school of figure painters.

The balance and grouping in this picture of the meeting of Burns and Scott, the admirable manner in which the numerous figures are realised and rendered, the distribution of interest, and the centralizing and relating of the two principal figures, at once command artistic admiration. These qualities in this and his other work fully justify the "incident" motive from a severely artistic aspect. Equally well known is the picture of Burns reading his poems before the Duchess of Gordon. It is distinguished by the same qualities of art and craftsmanship. This picture was bought by an Australian gentleman, and was sent across the seas to the Antipodes, to the considerable loss of Scotland's National Gallery. Another interesting Scottish picture filled with carefully-studied figures, and including some sixty portraits, is that of "The Bonspiel" played between the North and South at Carsbreck, exhibited in 1900. His gifts of insight and character rendition have been employed extensively and effectively in his portrait work, of which he had a large output. In an artistic life of great fulness and productiveness Mr. Martin Hardie has never been stereotyped either in subject matter or in manner. Figure and landscape pictures have been marked with genuine impulse and capable handling in equal degree with his interiors and purely figure subjects. One of his later pictures, "The Bather", with the nude athletic figure of a youth set against foliage by the side of a stream, and painted in low tones, was exhibited in the Paris salon in 1902, and gained Mention Honourable in that exhibition. His work in pure landscape also showed high achievement, an outstanding picture in this class being a rendering of the view of the Firth of Forth from his own garden at Garthhill, North Queensferry, the foreground ablaze with furze. His artistic energies also found congenial scope for some years in the illustration of important historical and other works. In this department he always displayed the painstaking research and erudition which have marked his more important creations.

Mr. C. Martin Hardie was born in East Linton in 1858. His early education he received at the village school. At first destined for architecture, he gave early indications of a strong bent and ability for pictorial work. Mr. Pettie, R.A., to whom he was related, encouraged him to develop his artistic predilection. The appealing surroundings of his native village formed an admirable sketching ground for the young aspirant. Eventually he was enrolled as a student in the Border Manufacturers' Art School in Edinburgh. In the following year he entered the Life Class at the Royal Scottish Academy, passing through it with distinction. In 1879 he won the Stuart prize for design with a picture entitled "The Baron's Jester"; and in 1880 he was awarded the Keith prize for the best picture in the exhibition of the year by a student of the Academy. This was a picture entitled "The Swish of the Scythe." Fellow students of his in these days were Mr. G. Ogilvy Reid, Mr. J. H. Lorimer and Mr. J. Thornburn Ross.

His early work was largely influenced and directed by Pettie and also by W. Q. Orchardson. From an early date he found in genre a congenial channel for his artistic impulses. Many intimate scenes in which brother-artists were associated have been put on canvas, in a number of his interiors, with point and effect. Amongst his successful genre work may be mentioned "The Kirkin'", hung in the International Exhibition in Edinburgh in 1886, and purchased for Canada; "Our Grandmother's Dancing School", a picture with figures in Georgian costume; "Ca' the Yowes to the Knowes"; and "Peaceful Warfare"—a rendering of a shoemaker and a shepherd outside a cottage, on a fine summer's evening, playing a game of draughts. Other notable pictures are "An Unrecorded Coronation—Inchmahome, the Isle of Rest, 1548 A.D.", and "A Royal Decoration", in which incidents in the career of Queen Mary form the subject-matter.

Mr. C. Martin Hardie was appointed R.S.A. in 1895. His chief residence was Garthhill, North Queensferry.

369. BENJAMIN PALMER LEWIS, historian of his line in the work John Hardie of Thornhill, was born 29 Dec. 1874 at New Orleans, La. He was educated at the Robbins School, Norfolk, Conn.; Marion Military Inst., Marion, Ala.; and the Bingham School, Asheville, N. C. He also studied law at the University of Maryland. As a young man he worked in a bank in Birmingham with his father. Later he went to seek his fortune away from the home of his ancestors in the South. He was for a time in a hotel in Los Angeles and he engaged in the cattle business in the Northwest.

His aptitudes and training pointed to a career as a public speaker. In 1901 he came to New York, where he has since resided. For several years he was successful on the stage. He had a Presbyterian background; was named after Dr. Benjamin M. Palmer, minister of the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans. In 1909, however, he became interested in Christian Science. He has served a term as reader of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in New York. He received in 1931 from Massachusetts Metaphysical College the degree of C.S.B. He is an authorized teacher and practitioner of Christian Science.

He married, first, in 1901, PHYLLIS MORSE ASHCOM of San Francisco, Calif., daughter of MAJOR ASHCOM, C.S.A., who was born on the eastern shore of Maryland. She was a descendant of Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph. She died in 1931.

MR. LEWIS married, second, the cousin of his first wife, MARY LORENA GOURLEY of Holland Point, Calvert County, Md. Office address: 11 W. 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

VIOLIN MAKERS

In Scottish Violin Makers, William C. Honeyman says:

There are four qualifications necessary to greatness in violin making—First, some training in the use of fine edge tools; second, the artistic faculty—that is, the power to conceive and draw, or paint, or work out graceful designs; third, the ability to test and select wood of the best acoustic properties, and reject all that is not musical toned; and fourth, the power to play the violin, and so be able to test and adjust the instrument before it has been completely finished. I have known a violin maker with this last qualification to take off the breast of a violin seven times before finishing it with varnish till he got the tone to his mind. To these four qualifications may be added another which is given only to a privileged few, namely, that fine training of the eye which comes of constantly handling and studying the outlines and proportions of the best violins of the great Italian makers. It is rarely indeed that all these qualifications are found in one violin maker, but when they are, the man stands out as a genius and true artist, whose works will take the foremost place.

Judged by this criterion, the craftsmen of the name of Hardie are represented in the foremost rank of the violin makers of Scotland. The author of the work referred to mentions six. The opinion of this competent judge is quoted repeatedly hereafter in his own words.

389. ALEXANDER HARDIE, Maxwelltown, born about 1776; married at Stonehouse, 1797; died at Maxwelltown about 1885. Honeyman says that he was a famed maker of snuff-boxes and other knickknacks, and was a neat and skillful violin maker and an excellent violin player. "His violins", he says, "are excellent in finish and in tone." ALEXANDER HARDIE, Galashiels, son of the preceding, born at Stevenson 19 March 1811; died at Galashiels 1890. His violins were made after the same model as his father's.

390. JAMES HARDIE (Primus), Edinburgh. Not related to any of the others named here. Engaged in making violins in Edinburgh circ. 1830-55.

James Hardie was originally a patternmaker, and patternmakers as a rule, with their severe training in the use of fine edge tools, and their ability to "work to scale", usually turn out splendid violin makers. Hardie's violins are on the Stradivari model, with the edges left thick, and turned up in a nicely rounded ridge; and they are beautifully purfled, and fitted with a well carved scroll. The tone is usually large and of excellent quality.

391. JAMES HARDIE (Secundus), Edinburgh; born near Ellon, Aberdeenshire, 1 Jan. 1836; grandson of PETER HARDIE of Dunkeld (No. 393), called "HIGHLAND HARDIE", the last named being a full cousin of MATTHEW HARDIE of Edinburgh.

Hardie's favorite model is Maggini, his opinion being that that make gives the largest and most satisfactory tone for general purposes; but he also makes many on the model of Guarneri and Stradivari. I have known him to work on a violin for three years when he had specially fine wood and a customer with patience and willing to pay for the tedious work, and even then the violin was allowed to hang for a year in the white before being varnished, and each coat of varnish was allowed a month to dry. . . . Hardie is a keen judge of musical toned wood, and hunts up old pieces in the oddest places, so that some of his violins are hundreds of years old before a bow has been drawn across their strings.

392. "MATTHEW HARDIE ('The Scottish Stradivari') was born at Edinburgh in the year 1755, and takes a prominent place among Scottish violin makers, not only on account of the genius displayed in his work, and because he was the leading 'Scottish violin maker a century ago, but because he was a remarkable man, and the trainer of those other excellent makers—Thomas Hardie (his own son), David Stirrat, Alexander Yoole of St. Andrew's, Peter Hardie of Dunkeld, and George McGeorge of Edinburgh. Mr. Hardie has been justly named 'the Scottish Stradivari', and was probably trained as a cabinet maker or a patternmaker, as every turn of the tools, even on his earliest works, shows the firm touch of a practised hand. . . . Hardie never varies in his model, yet there is nothing mechanical about his work and it is evident that the graceful lines of his violins and the perfect contour of his scrolls have come intuitively from the man's brain more than from his patterns. . . . Hardie was not only a genius but a man of education, whose society was much courted by the then great ones of Modern Athens. . . . Matthew Hardie's violins are justly esteemed at the present day, having been made of good wood, legitimately seasoned, and on such graceful lines that the merest novice can see that it has been copied from a real Stradivari, and is not, like many we see now, a copy of a copy."

393. PETER HARDIE, Dunkeld, born 1775; died at Dunkeld Nov., 1863. He was a son of DR. HARDIE, an army surgeon.

He had a university education at Edinburgh, and it was during that time that he studied violin making under Matthew Hardie, who was his full cousin. He made a great many violins and 'cellos of excellent workmanship and tone, and he was also a skilled violin player, his style of rendering Scottish strathspeys and reels being very like that of James Allan of Forfar. He was a pupil of the famous Niel Gow, and became the teacher in both violin playing and violin making of Willie Blair, "the Queen's Fiddler." Hardie was a man of great physique—a tall, strong specimen of the Highland race, imbued with a great deal of pawky humor.

394. THOMAS HARDIE, Edinburgh, was the son of MATTHEW HARDIE. He had a high degree of the manual dexterity that his father displayed, but his violins were inferior in tone, or at least became so in the course of time.

VIOLIN PLAYERS³

395. WILLIAM HARDIE, SR., Methlick, was the father of the northern Hardies, as far as the fiddle-playing Hardies are concerned. He was known as "Fiddler Hardie." He was a son of PETER HARDIE (No. 393) of Dunkeld, Perthshire, and was born in the midlands of Scotland. He died just over forty-five years ago (1890) at the age of ninety-seven. In his dotage he often set out from his home at Auchencreive, Methlick, and when some of his family who had to bring him back asked him where he was going, he always said, "Awa hame tae Finnert", apparently his Perthshire home when he was a young man.

He came north in his youth and tenanted a croft which among others is named Auchencreive, Methlick. The croft at that time contained only some three acres. He took in twenty-odd acres of rough ground. On this small place he brought up a large family. He married as his second wife Mary Strachan, a daughter of James Strachan of Drumnagarry, Glenbucket, Aberdeenshire. He probably met her first through playing the fiddle along with her father, who was always known as "Drumnagarry" and was one of the leading ballroom players of the North.

William's wife survived him a good many years, and died at Inverurie, the residence of her son-in-law, in December, 1905, at the age of 105 years and 11 months. William was a first-class 'cello and small fiddle player and was much in demand at gentry's balls in many parts of the North. While at some of these functions he was away from home for days and had to walk the whole way to his destination and back, the distance being sometimes forty to fifty miles each way. It is stated that on one occasion, while going to one of these functions, he had to cross a burn which was in flood, and having to ford it, to save his 'cello from getting wet, he threw it over to the opposite bank and waded the burn himself.

3. This series of sketches was contributed by Alexander Archibald Hardie, Bucksburn. Although without his sight, he wrote the account on a typewriter with his own hands.

Some great evenings' fiddle-playing are recorded at William's home at Auchencreive, where many of the North's best players used to foregather. Although not a tall man, of just average height, he was sturdy and with a bright eye in his head. He was shrewd in business matters, Hardie by name and Hardie by nature. Although there is now a new house on the small farm, the old dwelling house forms part of the steading. A room in which so many great fiddling nights were put in was afterward used as a stable and is now a fowlhouse.

396. WILLIAM HARDIE, JR., son of the foregoing, still resides on the farm at Auchencreive where he was born and has lived all his life. He was the youngest son and now (1935) is 78 years of age and is still hale and hearty. Like his father and brothers, he is an excellent strathspey and reel player, as well as player of other dance music. In former years he was much in evidence at balls near and far. He still plays a good deal and the more so that he is now retired from farm work. Some years ago he bought the small farm that he was born on, and he now lets it out in grass to farmers in the district for grazing purposes.

Since the motor car came into existence he has had more chance of seeing other parts, north and south, than he would ever have hoped for. Without doubt he could count the number of times that he has slept in a strange bed in all his life. He has a collection of old manuscript music which many a one would envy. It is seldom that anyone plays a tune that he has not heard. His eldest son, John Hardie, is a superintendent engineer with a firm of trawl owners in Aberdeen. His younger son, Fred Hardie, is a constable in the Aberdeen police force. John is not a violin player, but he has a son named after his grandfather William, a young lad of nineteen, who is one of the best exponents of Scottish music in the North. Fred, the younger son, is also a good player, and frequently plays at concerts in the city and county. William, their father, is big and sturdy, and must in his younger days have been a powerful man. One can spend a glorious hour or two with him at Auchencreive. He is as keen on music as ever and a wireless enthusiast.

397. JOHN HARDIE, Edinburgh, son of WILLIAM HARDIE of Methlick (No. 395), worked for nearly forty years in the G. P. O. as a letter carrier. He was for many years on a postman's route in the Canongate, and he used to boast that he was the only man who would dare to go this round and whistle the "Battle of Boynewater" among the many Irish residents of that quarter of Edinburgh. Like his brother James, he made violins, though only as a hobby. He was also a player of strathspeys and reels, but in this line also he never excelled his brothers. He lived several years after his retirement from the post and was well over three score years and ten when he died. Unlike his brother James, he very seldom came north after going to Edinburgh. Some of his sons also were employed in the post office.

398. CHARLES STRACHAN HARDIE, Aberdeen, son of WILLIAM HARDIE of Methlick, died in 1893 in Aberdeen at the age of forty-two. He was a joiner by trade and worked for many years as picture frame maker with G. & W. Wilson, art photographers, Aberdeen. This firm has a worldwide reputation for photographs of towns all over the world, and they issued albums of views of these towns.

Charles Hardie was the premier violin player of the Hardies and recognized as the best player of Scottish national music of his day. In one of his collections, James Scott Skinner, "the strathspey king", has a note which reads: "The composer considers that Mr. Charles Hardie, Aberdeen, is the finest exponent of my music living."

- i. CHARLES HARDIE had three sons. The elder, named after his father, is still a bandsman in the Gordon Highlanders. At present in India, he has been with the colours for over twenty years. He is an excellent double bass player, and he can also play the violin.
- ii. FRED HARDIE, the second son, is an assistant master in an Aberdeen school and is an accomplished pianist and organist and holds the degree of L.R.A.M.
- iii. GEORGE HARDIE, the youngest son, is a compositor in Johannesburg, South Africa. Their mother died only in 1934.

399. THOMAS PATTERSON HARDIE, Aberdeen, son also of WILLIAM HARDIE, was like his brothers JAMES and JOHN, born at Auchencreive, Methlick. He served his time as a millwright, and was in business at Old Meldrum and Udney, Aberdeenshire, before settling in Woodside, Aberdeen. Here for over thirty years he carried on a successful business as a cartwright and general carpenter. After leaving Udney, he was mechanic at Garlogie Wool Mills, Skene, Aberdeenshire.

Thomas P. Hardie was born in 1846 and died at the age of eighty-three. He also was a good violin player and was for over thirty years a church choir precentor in various places. He was an excellent singer of Scottish songs, and as a precentor was very successful.

Thomas Patterson Hardie had five sons:

- 400* i. JOHN CAMERON HARDIE.
- 401* ii. MATTHEW SETON HARDIE.
- 402* iii. JAMES CAMERON HARDIE.
- 403* iv. ALEXANDER ARCHIBALD HARDIE.
- 404* v. CHARLES FULLERTON HARDIE.

400. JOHN CAMERON HARDIE has been in London for the past fifty years and for over forty years in the clerical department of the Army and Navy Co-operative Stores. He retired on a pension some years ago. A licentiate of the Tonic Solfa College, he has been a choirmaster for over thirty years. He continues actively with music teaching in both branches, in which he excels. He has on many occasions conducted large choirs at the Crystal Palace festivals, and he is an examiner for the Tonic Solfa College. He was born in Old Meldrum, Aberdeenshire, in 1864.

401. MATTHEW SETON HARDIE, second son of THOMAS P. HARDIE, died in 1932, at the age of 64, in Dunfermline, Fifeshire. He was born at Udney, Aberdeenshire, and was for several years in Cape Town, South Africa, and in Montana, U. S. A. He served his apprenticeship as a blacksmith and later as a carpenter. He worked as a carpenter at Rosyth naval base during the Great War, and later started business on his own account in Dunfermline. He was an excellent singer and was also successful as a choirmaster. Those who have seen his handwriting were struck by it, and among the thousands of employes at Rosyth base it was said that none could come up to Hardie in this respect.

402. JAMES CAMERON HARDIE is sixty-four years of age (1935). He lives at Newcastle-on-Tyne, where he has been employed for many years superintending the cleaning staff in a well-known firm's warehouse, one of the largest in the country. He also is musical, and in his younger days was a clever exponent of character songs. He was born at Woodside, Aberdeen.

403. ALEXANDER ARCHIBALD HARDIE was born in Woodside, Aberdeen, 20 Oct. 1876. He served his apprenticeship to the general grocery and drapery business in a country store. He married, in 1897, JEANNIE CLARK, a native of Cluny, who, along with him, went to East London, Cape Province in 1902. They stayed there nine years, then returned home to Aberdeen. He was a popular singer of humorous Scottish songs, and this popularity has been with him since his return. His song and story items at concerts prove popular. He frequently entertains gatherings for an hour in song and story along with violin playing, slow airs and Scottish country dances being his specialty. He lost his sight in 1917. He has been a teacher of the violin and mandolin since he was seventeen, and he still teaches and is conductor of the Bucksburn String Orchestra. He was for several years choirmaster in Cluny Free Church, Aberdeenshire, and while in Africa he was organist in a Wesleyan church and for the local branch of the Y. M. C. A. The orchestra of which he is now conductor consists of some twenty-five players, all his own pupils. He also carries on business as a confectioner in Bucksburn and is local correspondent for Aberdeen's leading newspapers, Aberdeen Press and Journal and Aberdeen Evening Express.

His wife died in September, 1934. His only daughter is a talented violinist and player of the Hawaiian steel guitar.

404. CHARLES FULLERTON HARDIE, youngest son of THOMAS P. HARDIE, was born 25 Aug. 1880 at Woodside, Aberdeen. He left Scotland for South Africa when nineteen years of age. He resides at Barkly, East South Africa, where he carries on business as a chemist and druggist. He also operates a branch in Cambridge near East London, South Africa. He is well known in many towns in South Africa as a violin player. When seventeen years of age he won the third prize for strathspeys and reels at a competition in Aberdeen open to all Scotland. Had he stayed in his native land, the mantle of his uncle, Charles Strachan Hardie, would at his uncle's death have fallen on him, and he would have been, if not the best, one of the foremost players of Scottish music in Scotland. At Burns celebrations abroad his playing always brings him in for high praise. He is also a good organist and has held posts in several large churches.

405. CHARLES HARDIE, Aberdeen, son of JACQUELINA HARDIE of Methlick, carries on an engineering business, or rather the business of buying and selling engineering plants. He was born in 1865 at Methlick and, after serving his apprenticeship as a blacksmith, joined the metropolitan police, where he stayed only a short time, returning to take up his trade again. Later, being a skilled workman, he secured a post as an engineer, and for years he held good posts of this kind, being chief engineer of Messrs. Sandilands Aberdeen Comb Works, Ltd., and later with Messrs. Miller, Sandilands Chemical Works, Aberdeen. He had to resign the latter post owing to a severe illness. After this he started on his own account and has traveled far and near to sales of engineering plants. He is often commissioned by firms to buy plants for them.

He is a brother of the late Fred Hardie, photographer, Aberdeen.

In Scotland Mr. Hardie followed the trade of weaver. Foreseeing the end of hand weaving as a result of the introduction of power looms, he migrated to America shortly after the time of the Civil War. He lived at Yonkers, N. Y., for some years, during which five more children were born to them. They then moved to the South and West and engaged in homesteading and farming. This was a period of hard times and poor farming years, and they pursued their fortunes in different States, finally settling at El Dorado, Kan.

As their sons grew to maturity, they learned mechanical trades in the railroad shops at Fort Scott, Kan. Meantime William Kavanaugh, an employee in an oil well shop at Bradford, Pa., during a dull season in that line, went West to look for work and chanced to settle at Fort Scott, Kan. There he met and married Mary Hardie. About 1890 or 1891 the Butler County oil fields in Pennsylvania opened up, and he returned to Pennsylvania, taking his brother-in-law, William Colgate Hardie, with him.

William Colgate Hardie engaged in oil well drilling, and in this occupation he has since traveled all over the world. He spent three years in Borneo, and he has made four trips to widely separate fields in India. He has gone around the world several times.

609. JAMES L. HARDIE was born 12 Nov. 1873, in the Province of Ulster, Ireland, where his father, JOSEPH HARDIE, was successfully engaged in business as a hardware dealer of Tyrone. The family numbered eight children, five sons and three daughters.

James L. Hardie acquired his education in the public schools of Ulster and in the Cookstown Academy, from which he was graduated in 1890. He afterward entered upon an apprenticeship to learn the hardware trade, which he followed until 1897, when he crossed the Atlantic, arrived in New York on 10 Apr. 1897, and made his way direct to St. Louis. He became connected with the mechanical and electrical department of the Union Depot Railway System, and remained with that corporation until 1899, when the St. Louis street car lines were consolidated. He continued in the same capacity with the United Railway Company until 1901, when he became connected with the Century Electric Company, where he remained as a salesman until 1906. He later entered the employ of the Commercial Electric Company as a department manager, continuing with that firm until 1920. In that year he became one of the organizers of the Hornbeck & Hardie Electric Company, specializing in motors and motor installations, maintenance and repair of motors and factory wiring. He occupies the position of vice-president and treasurer of the concern, and the success of the undertaking is attributable in no small measure to the mechanical skill, ingenuity and business enterprise of Mr. Hardie.

The maternal grandparents of George Hardie were Charles Harding of Atherstone, Warwickshire (died 19 Jan. 1887, aged 78 years) and Arabella Daffern of Atherstone (born 18 Sept. 1809; died 16 July 1889), daughter of Sarah Daffern (died 4 March 1866, aged 78 years). The youngest daughter of their eldest son, Charles, was George Hardie's first wife. The name Harding is said to be another form of Arden, a Warwickshire name. George Hardie's second wife's mother, Jane Castle (deceased), was of Scottish extraction, as was probably also her father's mother, Frances Grant.

The story of the life of George Hardie will be told in his own words:

My father's people were chiefly, if not almost all, in the leather line, merchants, curriers, or shoemakers. My mother's people (Warwickshire) were mostly in the hat line. I happened to choose sculpture—my draughtsmanship at school and art tendency leading me thereto. An apprentice-pupil of David Watson Stevenson, R.S.A., Edinburgh, I was with him for ten years and in Feb. 1883 came to London and entered the studio in March of (afterward Sir) Hamo Thornycroft, R.A., and as his principal craftsman in marble and stone for many years, I had the pleasure and privilege of executing many of his works. My friendship with him covered a span of about 42 years from March 1883 till his death in December 1925. For him I carved 5 large Queen Victoria statues: Royal Exchange, London; Durban, S. Africa; Karachi; and two in the Oudh province, India; also a King Edward statue for Karachi. Statues also of King George; Lord Tennyson, Trinity College, Cambridge; recumbent effigies of Owen Stanley in St. Cybi's Church, Holyhead; Archbishop Thomson, York Minster; busts of the Poet Gray, Gladstone, and Thomas Hardy, among other works of various kinds.

I was not in his studio all the years I had the honour of working for him. In 1899 I opened up studio-workshops of my own, so that I was able to execute work for other sculptors at various times: Sir George Frampton, R.A.; W. Robert Colton, R.A.; Alfred Turner, R.A.; Gilbert Bayes, V.P.R.B.S.; Henry Fehr, F.R.B.S.; H. S. Gamley, R.S.A. My last, biggest work was the carving of the frieze of Messrs. Liberty's building in Regent St., London, for Thomas Clapperton, A.R.B.S., and Chas. L. Doman, A.R.B.S., the artists. On the whole I can claim a goodly record of work over a span of sixty years. It is surprising what opportunity and time does achieve in spite of disappointments and drawbacks which every mortal has more or less, testing furnace and our saving grace very often.

Elizabeth Toun, the 8 of December 1684

Loving Son

I have writ two letters already to you at our arrival, another, shewing the death of your brother William, and something of the country, but know not if they be come to your hands; and now having this occasion, know I am in good health and your brother Alexander, praise be to God. Know that I intend to reside here and should wish that I had all my children with me, but your conveniencie cannot permit, neither am I able to transport them as yet; however, I desire you to acquaint your sister Elsbeth, that I desire her to come over, if possible, with her first conveniencie. I intend, before her coming to have a new house in New Perth, and a plantation near by it; if I have gott a good accompt of that Little cargo I sent over I would have lived upon it here, as well as upon 100 lib. sterling in Scotland; But I have got a bad accompt of it; however, I hope to Provide for you all with what is left, if the Lord bless. Shew my brother and brothers in law, that if they would come over with each of them two Servants, they could have good Land here, at an easie rate, they might live better than masters, and with less trouble, if they took but half the pains they take in Scotland; for the Land is a brave and plentiful Land. Shew Andrew and David Hardie that if they can but pay their Passage and come to me, I shall make them to live in better condition than ever formerly. I doubt not but that some of our neighbours will come over, to bring servants here, who will give you a true accompt how I and others live here: believe me this is a brave Land and any who will be Industrious, may live very comfortably here. He who comes first will have the best choise, and most profitable, as for idle-men who will neither work nor trade, (they) need never come here. I wish you all a blessing from God, and so rests

Yours affectionate father

ROBERT HARDIE.

ANCESTORS OF HILDA LAURA HARDY OF GRANVILLE, N. S.

The following facts collected by Hilda Laura Hardy concerning her ancestors suggests that they are probably related to the Thomas Hardy family of Bradford, Mass.:

1. THOMAS JOHN JAMES¹ HARDY, progenitor of the family, arrived in Massachusetts Bay, 1630. According to Isaiah Wilson in his History of Digby County, this Thomas was one of the emigrants from England who arrived in Massachusetts Bay under supervision of Hon. John Winthrop, Governor of that province, in 1630. He had a son, THOMAS² HARDY, who continues the line.

2. THOMAS² HARDY (Thomas John James¹), born; married; was one of the twelve founders of Ipswich, County of Essex, Mass., in 1636. He had a son, BENJAMIN³, who continues the line, but there is some doubt as to his name being Benjamin. Might have been Aaron.⁴

3. BENJAMIN³ HARDY (Thomas², Thomas John James¹), born; married

No further information concerning this Benjamin, Sr., is given except as the father of Aaron and Joseph. There must have been a Benjamin, Jr., since he is referred to as senior.

4. See Aaron 113 Hardy, "Thomas Hardy Family of Bradford, Mass."

Children:

- 4* i. AARON⁴, b.; m. LYDIA WOOD.
- 5 ii. JOSEPH⁴, b. This JOSEPH HARDY, with Joseph Churchill and Jonathan Locke, founded Lockeport, Shelburne Co., Nova Scotia. They emigrated thither from New England. Quite a number of descendants of this JOSEPH HARDY, bearing the family name, are living at Allendale, near Lockeport in Shelburne Co. The REV. IRAD HARDY may be of that family. He is a New England Baptist minister, b. in Nova Scotia, m. a sister of the Attorney-General in the present (1931) Nova Scotia Government, and daughter of the late Rev. Wm. E. Hall, a prominent Baptist minister of Nova Scotia.
- There is a REV. JOHN HARDY, veteran Baptist missionary to India, who came from Nova Scotia. A prominent photographer of Kensville, Nova Scotia, bears the name of HARDY. There is a settlement of HARDYS in West, part of Prince Edward Island.
- On another page of this Appendix will be found descendants of a JOSEPH who would seem to be this JOSEPH. The names of his children cannot be added here without more proof that these two JOSEPHS are the same.⁵

4. AARON⁴ HARDY (Benjamin³, Thomas², Thomas John James¹), born probably in Massachusetts; married LYDIA WOOD, daughter of REV. THOMAS WOOD, Episcopal clergyman and Chaplain to the Garrison of Annapolis in 1768.

Aaron Hardy, Sr., was a Quaker from Worcester, Mass.⁶ He was one of the settlers who came to Annapolis County in the year 1760.⁷

Each of the settlers had allotted to him a wood lot consisting of five hundred acres, in addition to an equitable portion of the cultivated marsh and upland, which had been previously the property of the French inhabitants.⁸

According to the census of the year 1768, Aaron Hardy had (two in family). The census enumeration for the year 1770 lists Aaron Hardy, Sr. (two in family), possessing 1,000 acres.

Aaron Hardy, Sr., found among the proprietors of Annapolis Township, is credited by the New Year's Census of 1770 with a family of "two persons", himself and partner, since their three children had passed their majority and were residing away from the parental roof. He owned "seven acres of arable land, 34 of mowing, twenty in pasture, nine hundred and eighteen woods", aggregating one thousand, on 1 Jan. 1770. On these premises, "one hourse, two oxen, four cows, two younger cattle, seven sheep" were domiciled by their owner. The farm had yielded "forty bushels of wheat" in 1769.

Attorney in City of New York until close of the Revolution, in partnership with John L. C. Roome, son of John Roome, the Digby Loyalist, as "Hardy and Roome"; then emigrated as a Loyalist to Annapolis County, Nova Scotia; drew the valuable lands around Cape St. Mary's, Clare, with Miller, Mathews and Huggeford; but located eventually in St. John, New Brunswick.

In November, 1785, Elias Hardy and William Davidson were elected the representatives for the County of Northumberland, in the first House of Assembly for New Brunswick, which convened in earliest session at the Mallard House, on the site of the present Royal Hotel, St. John, 3 Jan. 1786. In the second Assembly, elected 1792, Hardy was a member for St. John. He had become Common Clerk of that city two years earlier, and was termed "the London Lawyer."

Col. Edward Winslow, writing from Halifax, Nova Scotia, 13 Jan. 1785, to Hon. Ward Chipman, Sr., first Solicitor General of New Brunswick, reviewing the proposal to appoint Hon. Gabriel Ludlow first mayor of St. John, confidentially remarked:

I have never been an enthusiast for towns and cities, but I declare if this event takes place in all its parts, and Mr. Hardy is induced to accept the other appointment (Common Clerk) I shall expect to see Halifax evacuated by the most respectable of its inhabitants, and Shelburne totally eclipsed, and this immediately.

Elias Hardy was counsel for defendant in the celebrated slander trial of Benedict Arnold, the noted traitor, vs. Monson Hait, in 1790.

The "London Lawyer" resided on Lot 417, King Street, third on south side east of Germain, originally granted to Robert Melvin. After his death, 5 Feb. 1799, the widow removed to New York, and sold one-half the homestead in 1804 for 115 pounds and the residue in 1820 for 100 pounds.

ANCESTRY OF CHARLES J. HARDY OF NEW YORK CITY

Below are excerpts from a letter written by Charles J. Hardy concerning his forebears.

I don't know much about the origin of my family, except that I have always understood it to have been originally English. There has been a tradition that Sir Charles Hardy, the first President of King's College, and Captain Hardy of Nelson's Flagship Victorious were somehow mixed up with my own family—but how true this is I have no idea.

There are a lot of Hardys in Virginia and the Carolinas. . . . Judge Mayo, now dead, who sat on the bench in this city (New York) for a long while, was originally from Virginia, and did his utmost to connect me up with the Hardys of his native state. . . . I don't think he had much success.

I don't know much about the collateral branches, but recall that in a talk I had three or four years ago with the late President Harding, at the White House, he spent about half an hour or so telling me about the Hardys in his part of Ohio. He said they were good people—but when I suggested to him that in all probability his name was a corruption of ours, he would not have it, but said that he believed the fact to be that our name was a shortening of his.

. . . I haven't the remotest idea what you are going to find out in tracing back the history of the family. You may find that included among our forebears are pirates and others of that ilk. If you do, I trust you will touch lightly on the fact.

DESCENDANTS OF GEORGE HARDY OF ENGLAND

Henry Bloomer Hardy of Hingham, Mass., has contributed the following information concerning his ancestors.

Three brothers came out from England, one settled in Prince Edward Island, Canada, one in New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, the other not recorded. This line begins with George Hardy of England.

1. GEORGE¹ HARDY, born in England; died and is buried on the old farm in Cascumpec; married, first, a woman named POWERS (this may not be correct) (whether this marriage took place in England or Canada is not known). She died, and he married, second, ISABELLA (MACAULEY) GORDON, a widow, who was born in Scotland. She had two sons when she married GEORGE HARDY. The sons later went to mission fields and were murdered in the massacre at Trinidad. ISABELLA is buried on the old farm in Cascumpec, where a monument has been erected by the HARDY and GORDON descendants, bearing the following inscription:

 ALSO
 ISABELLA MACAULEY WIDOW OF
 SETTLED IN CASCUMPEC
 1779

George Hardy came to Prince Edward Island, Canada, where he and a family named Gordon were given a land grant at Cascumpec Village, probably in 1779.

He died thirteen months later at the age of about 77. Both are buried in the cemetery at Alberton, Prince Edward Island.

Robert Hardy lived on the old farm in Cascumpec until about 1856, when they sold it to Joshua Brundage and moved to Montrose, Prince Edward Island, about eight miles from Cascumpec.
